HUNGER TRAP GRIPS FIUME

SURVEYS CITY'S IDLE PROBLEM; REVIVAL AHEAD

Upturn by Spring Is Forecast.

BY ARTHUR M. EVANS.

When one seeks to measure the approximate amount of unemployment in Chicago he is at once confronted by an amazing dearth of statistical data. Opinions and estimates gathered from about a score of men in close touch with the situation during the last few days, when averaged up, yield the following:

Unemployment in Chicago up to a week or two ago affected between 100,000 and 120,000 workers in industry. Of these about one-half were out of jobs; the other half were working part time. Perhaps 30 to 40 per cent of the employment was seasonal; that is, it is usual for this time of year.

In 1914-15, when a slump followed the new tariff act and the outbreak of the war, it was estimated 200,000 were out of jobs in Chicago. The present situation is not as acute as that of six years ago.

United States Slump Set at 30%.

Government figures just out, covering the country at large show that at the beginning of December this year employment in more than one-half the lines was about 30 per cent less than a year ago. In automobiles, hosiery, and underwear, men's clothing, leather, boots and shoes, the slump from a year ago was just 30 per cent. In cotton finishing it was 24 per cent, in silk 15 per cent, and in woolen mills 39 per cent. Iron and steel had more employment than a year ago, when the strike was on, and car building had about 25 per cent more men, due to increased work on the railroads.

There is a feeling among business men that by early spring there will be a turn for the better here and elsewhere.

Business Revival Seen.

"Here it is in a nutshell," said one leading manufacturer, who reflected the sentiments expressed by many, "many small plants are hanging on because nobody wants his organization to be shot to pieces if he can help it. Some others are closing down. But everybody is optimistic.

"Get the orders—that ought to be a slogan. In recent weeks there has been a growth in cancellations, which is bad stuff. But the general feeling is that the near future will see prices brought to a stabilized basis. Then business will begin to jump.

"Everybody just now is looking for March 4 and the inauguration of a new president as a starting point for readjustment, but it will come before then, is my opinion.

"And have you noted this: Despite growing unemployment, nobody is down in the mouth; everybody realizes it is all one stage of the readjustment process."

The consensus of opinion seemed to be that January will see unemployment still gradually increasing.

Textile Works Hardest Hit.

Textile regions of the east—Hardest hit of all; between 35 and 45 per cent of unemployment being registered.

Steel and iron, eastern regions—Independents hard hit and much curtailment of forces. Steel corporation plants, working on backlog orders, operating at 70 per cent.

Roll Call of Cities.

Cincinnati, O.—Twenty-five thousand unemployed out of 100,000 workers.

Cleveland, O.—30.5% reduction in total working force of 225,000.

Bethlehem, Pa.—Decrease of 6,500 in working force of 36,000 in Bethlehem Steel plants.

Poughkeepsie, N. Y.—Chamber of Commerce reports 2,500 unemployed out of 8,000 normally working.

Dayton, O.—Unemployment critical. Starting rates cut.

St. Louis, Mo.—Normal working force of 150,000. Twenty thousand now out of work.

Easton, Pa., and Phillipsburg, N. J.—Thirteen thousand at work in the silk industries. One thousand unemployed. Hosiery mills employing 1,200 practically shut down.

Rochester, N. Y.—Out of 85,000 workers 18,500 are now idle. Clothing, shoe, and button industries principal sufferers.

Bridgeport, Conn. — Metal trades, 12,000 unemployed out of 45,000; forty-eight four basic week.

OIL MAGNATES GIVE $12,000 BOND FOR CLARA HAMON

'Not Guilty,' She Says, Reaching Home.

Ardmore, Okla., Dec. 25.—"Not guilty" was the plea entered for Clara Barton Smith when she faced Justice of the Peace Cannon here shortly after noon today. Waiving preliminary examination, she thereby consented to face trial on the charge of shooting Jake L. Hamon, oil millionaire and politician.

The other formalities followed speedily. Within a few minutes she was held to the District court to be tried at its January session on the charge of murder. Immediately she was taken to the courthouse, where District Judge Champion was waiting.

Soon Free on Bail.

Application was made that she be released on bail pending her trial. This was granted. The judge fixed $12,000, and at once accepted the signatures of Max Wertheimer and Wirt Franklin, oil men, and several other persons.

The law firm of Mathers & Coakley, representing her in Ardmore, and who say a popular fund of $2,500 has been placed in their hands for the early stages of her defense, found it needless to present a "subscription bond," said to bear about fifty names, and to be backed by property worth several million dollars.

While bail was being supplied word spread through the city that "Clara Smith just got back," and crowds gathered at the courthouse. Their object, as one spectator described it, was "to get a good look at Clara."

Goes to Sister's Home.

Within a few minutes Miss Smith and the sheriff were in an auto speeding to Wilson. There she will live for a time with her sister, Mrs. William Walling, who was her companion in the first part of her flight from Ardmore after Hamon was shot.

County Attorney Russel Brown, at whose direction the hunt for Miss Smith was carried to Mexico, declared today he had been told by Gov. Robertson that the attorney general's office only would intervene at the trial if the court fails to appoint a special prosecutor.

The prosecutor elect is James H. Mathers, who has been connected with the case for the defense. Mr. Mathers has intimated that when the time came Mr. Brown would be that special prosecutor. Mr. Brown said today it would be "unethical" to discuss that detail.

"Blue Birds" Are Gone.

Fort Worth, Tex., Dec. 25.—"Last Christmas," Clara B. Smith said this morning before she went to Ardmore, "I was so happy I was afraid, but," she added, reclining in an easy chair at the office of her lawyers, McLean, Scott & McLean, "the blue birds of happiness will not always flutter about."

As to the shooting of Jake L. Hamon, of which she is accused, she said casually, "I want the law to take its course. I want the world to know my story. I am ready for trial."

More About Last Christmas.

Then there was a bit more about Hamon and last Christmas.

"Mr. Hamon was engrossed deeply in politics a year ago. He had been gradually working his way up among the powers that be in the political world," she said.

"His indomitable ambition blinded him, and me, too, to the fact that the ladder he was climbing to political power was made of split and worm-eaten wood and the higher he climbed the more dangerous his position became. I did not realize it then, but I have had much time to think since last Christmas.

"Last Christmas eve I was in Ardmore waiting for him. I hoped he had not been drinking."

'PROMOTION FOR ALL POLICE WHO KILL CRIMINALS'

Aldermen Will Take Plan to Council.

Promotion for police patrolmen and sergeants who kill holdup men and burglars caught in the act of robbery will be recommended by Ald. Joseph O. Kostner to the city council next Wednesday. The alderman will ask that provision to increase the pay of promoted officers be made in the 1921 budget.

While he was discussing his project yesterday, footpads and other criminals were permitting Chicago to enjoy one of the most placid Christmases in its history. Thirteen highway robberies were reported, in pleasing contrast to the preceding part of the week, when holdup men rifled the pockets of from twenty to forty victims daily.

Cleanup Curbs Crooks.

The decrease was attributed principally to Chief Fitzmorris' raids on Christmas eve, which placed nearly 200 suspicious characters behind police station bars, to remain until the courts resume business tomorrow morning.

"My plan for police promotions may seem a bit cold blooded," Ald. Kostner explained, "but it is what the force needs. Chief Fitzmorris has approved it.

"An order which I shall introduce in the council next Wednesday will provide for the creation of ten temporary sergeantcies and five temporary lieutenancies for the use of the chief in rewarding those who shoot criminals down.

Need to Quicken "Trigger Finger."

"That some incentive is needed to quicken the trigger fingers of the police force is proved by the events of the last few weeks. Three policemen have been shot and killed in that period.

"The older members of the force especially are too sparing of criminal life. Take Patrolman Conlon, killed in the attempted stickup of the Ashland block drug store, for instance. He called on the robber six times to halt before firing. It was only when the robber fired a shot at him that Conlon pulled the trigger. The delay cost Conlon his life.

Recalls Burns and Lenehan Case.

"In the case of Detective Sergeants Burns and Lenehan, killed by two holdup men Oct. 3, they told the murderers to put away their guns, giving them a chance for life. The holdup men answered with shots that sent the sergeants to their graves.

"The robbers aren't slow with their guns. Why should the police give quarter?"

Chief of Detectives Hughes has also put his O. K. on the plan, according to Ald. Kostner. With Chief Fitzmorris' recommendation behind it, the move has an excellent chance of receiving council approval, as every request which the chief has made of the aldermen has been granted as soon as received.

Twelve Rob Bar of $1,000.

The Christmas day outlawry was featured principally by the robbery of Martin Marcyam's saloon at 1753 West Forty-eighth street. Twelve men in two motor cars obtained $1,000. Policeman William Cullenan saw them making their getaway and gave chase in a commandeered motor car. But the outlaws' machines were swifter.

Shortly after 2 o'clock yesterday morning two armed men wearing sailors' jackets, entered the drug store of E. Silverbur, 122 South Canal street, as he was counting his money. They forced the proprietor and James Ross, 1200 Ainslie street, into a back room, locked them there, and escaped with $600 and $128 in checks.

George Serreyke was held up in his barber shop at 3956 South Rockwell street by three men and robbed of $200.

Louis Valin, 5209 South Michigan avenue, and Daniel Scott, 122 East Fifty-sixth street, reported they were robbed by two Negroes at Thirty-second street and Michigan avenue, losing a diamond ring and $110.

Girl Loses Her Watch.

Miss Ruth Wilson, 5719 Drexel avenue, was robbed of $35 and a watch by two holdup men at Maryland avenue and Fifty-seventh street.

W. Roda, 2239 North Spaulding avenue, was held up at Belden and North Kedzie avenues by two men who robbed him of $35.

A call was received by the Englewood police that a safe had been blown in the office of the Consumers company at 551 West Fifty-eighth street. The police found the watchman, Robert Arnold of 5710 Wentworth avenue, staggering about. He said he had heard four men enter the office and they knocked the knob off the safe. Arnold is being held.

KILLED BY GUN OF SON-IN-LAW; THOUGHT SUICIDE

Charles Schellgreen, 54 years old, formerly a clerk for the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy railroad, was found shot to death last night in the apartment of his son-in-law, Capt. Albert M. Langan, 4334 Clarendon avenue. The police, after investigation, said it looked like a suicide.

A bullet from a .45 caliber army automatic pistol belonging to Langan, who served two years overseas with the 111th infantry, had killed him.

Langan, a teacher of printing at the Lane Technical high school, notified the police. He said his father-in-law had suffered a nervous breakdown, and for the last six months had been confined in Sacred Heart sanitarium in Milwaukee. He returned home for the holidays, Langan said, and wept on Friday when he saw the Christmas tree being trimmed for his children. He grieved, Langan said, because he was unable to give them presents.

Schellgreen went for a walk, and, after waiting for several hours for him to return, the Langans also went out. They found Schellgreen dead when they returned.

At first there was some mystery as to how Schellgreen had gained access to the apartment, but this was explained by Mrs. Bessie Langan, his daughter.

"Father was picked up on suspicion of being a burglar recently when he was found loitering around our apartment while we were away," she said. "To prevent a recurrence of this I gave mother a key to the flat."

Detective Sergeant George Cudmore said he was convinced Schellgreen shot himself, and ordered the body removed without waiting for an examination by a coroner's physician.

EDITH CAVELL IS TAKEN AS MODEL BY IRISH WOMEN

DUBLIN, Dec. 25.—Nurse Edith Cavell was made a model tonight by the Association of Irish Women, which proclaimed defiance to the British government's martial law.

"Ignore the martial law," read a proclamation prepared by the women.

The particular regulation to which they took exception was that declaring that any person harboring men bearing arms may be subjected to the death penalty.

"Ignore it," the women said. "Act as Nurse Cavell did when the Germans made their threats in Belgium. Every woman should harbor armed men if she has the opportunity."

The proclamation declared that every man of military age should bear arms in the defense of his country, despite the drastic regulations under martial law.

SHOCK OF ARREST FATAL TO SISTER

Hansen's Second Trouble Too Much for Kin.

Paul Hansen, suspect arrested in connection with the murder last Wednesday of Paul J. Loberg, jeweler at 2556 Milwaukee avenue, sat in his cell at the county jail all day yesterday heedless that it was Christmas.

One week before he had sat in a similar cell, held on a charge of burglary. His sister, Mrs. Marie Ellsworth, 5320 Harper avenue, had become violently ill when she saw him there. He was worrying yesterday about how she had taken his last arrest.

He did not know that she had died at 2 a. m. from shock when she learned that he had again been arrested, this time as a murder suspect. Neither had he been told that his mother, now living with his wife at 5201 Woodlawn avenue, was critically ill.

Attorney Tells of Love.

"I believe," he said, "that some one should be held acountable. I have tried in every way possible to obtain Hansen's release. I am not surprised at his sister's death.

"There was more than an ordinary brother and sister intimacy between the two. When he was arrested the first time she became seriously ill. She was overjoyed when he was finally released, but was again plunged into despair when the police seized him Friday.

"She collapsed at the telephone when she was told. She had been ill for weeks and the two shocks coming so closely together were more than she could stand."

His Mother Also Ill.

Meanwhile Hansen's mother has not been told of her daughter's death. Attendants were only able to quiet her last night with promises that the police would immediately release her son. Attorney Borrelli said that unless he secured Hansen's freedom by tomorrow he would petition for a writ of habeas corpus.

Mr. Borrelli is depending on a diary kept by Hansen's wife to prove his client's innocence. This diary which has been kept on Mr. Borrelli's advice since Hansen's first arrest, shows that he was home on the night Loberg was killed.

WORLD IS AFFLICTED WITH FIVE PLAGUES, POPE BENEDICT SAYS

ROME, Dec. 25.—"The world is afflicted today by five great plagues," said Pope Benedict in replying to the greetings of the Sacred college, presented by Cardinal Vannutelli as doyen, at the reception to the pontiff today.

The pope enumerated these as the negation of authority, hatred among brothers, thirst for pleasure, disgust for work, and forgetfulness of the supernatural objects of life.

These evils can only be overcome with the aid of the gospel, said the pope, and, therefore, he would never cease to remind the people of it, this being his mission and his intention.

HAIGHT LAUGHS AT LOVE BUT LAW LAUGHS AT HATE

Denver, Colo., Dec. 25.—[United Press.]—A suit to restrain Oscar A. Johnson, 62, prominent attorney of Littleton, Colo., from visiting or communicating with Miss Edith M. Haight, 29, also of Littleton, has been filed by the latter's attorneys here.

Johnson was an ardent suitor, according to Miss Haight, and she rejected his several proposals to marry just as many times, but Johnson did not lose heart.

One night last April Miss Haight said Johnson, while calling on her, looked meditatively at the moon and spoke solemnly:

"I, Oscar A. Johnson, do take Edith M. Haight as my lawful wedded wife, to love, honor, cherish, and obey till death do us part."

Miss Haight laughed. Johnson dared her to repeat the words. She did.

The next day Johnson called to take her to California on their honeymoon, Miss Haight said. She warned him not to carry a joke too far. Thereupon Johnson, it is charged, produced a statute to prove she was his common law wife and threatened to start divorce proceedings.

The restraining suit was filed yesterday.

British Ship Havarino, Afire, Makes Irish Port

QUEENSTOWN, Ireland, Dec. 25.—With thick smoke trailing her, the British steamer Havarino ended a race with fire late today when she was beached in the harbor here. City and harbor authorities joined in the effort to quench the blaze, which threatened the shell of the vessel after doing serious damage to her cargo. The Havarino is a 5,100 ton vessel, owned by the Glasgow Ship Owners' Company, Ltd.

Disarmament, Women's Wish as Yule Ebbs

Washington, D. C., Dec. 25.—In the spirit of the peace of Christmastide prominent women here tonight made a demand for an end of militarism and for world disarmament.

Holding an unheralded demonstration at the monument of Benjamin Franklin, Mrs. Robert M. La Follette, wife of the Wisconsin senator; Mrs. Charles Edward Russell, wife of the Socialist writer, and others delivered addresses, calling specifically for wholesale reductions in the appropriations for the United States army and navy, and for disarmament generally.

Urge Brooks Resolution.

The meeting was held under the auspices of the Woman's Peace society, and the speakers said they were voicing the sentiment of the women of the country. The keynote of the meeting was to urge the Brooks resolution, now pending in the house, calling for a conference of the nations in Washington to lay plans for disarmament.

Mrs. La Follette declared the women of the country would use their votes to defeat senators and representatives who stand for militarism and war.

Claim Balance of Power.

"We women have the power," she said. "On the issue of militarism we hold the balance of power. We have the ballot. We are going to watch congress. We vow to use our votes to elect senators and representatives who stand for peace and disarmament.

"Away with armaments; away with them now, while all the horrors and mistakes of the world war are still fresh. Now is the time for action. Now is the time for disarmament.

"We women of the United States demand that the billions congress proposed to spend in army and navy and military training shall be spent for human betterment; for food, for health, for education; for eradicating fear, prejudice and hate, the basic causes of war.

Pleads for Germany's Milch Cows.

"It is not for the restoration of the weapons of war or any of the insignia of military power," Mrs. La Follette said, "that the women of Germany are appealing to the mercy of the allies. They are only asking that their milch cows, on which they depend to save the lives of their starving children, be not taken from them.

"They have the sympathy of the sisterhood of the world. Theirs is the elemental story that moves women to action. We women want the starving fed, the blockades lifted, trade restored, friendship renewed, mutual forgiveness, peace, and good will on earth again."

Calls War Policy "Lunacy."

Alleging that out of every $100 spent by the national government $92 is used for war, Mrs. Russell declared it is "criminal lunacy to appropriate 92 per cent of the total revenues for destructive purposes and only 8 per cent for all constructive purposes."

Mrs. Margaret Hatfield of Boston and Jessie Hardy Mackay of the Woman's Peace society, also spoke.

Woman Forgets Dress in Last Minute Shopping

Pittsburgh, Pa., Dec. 25.—A woman—a last minute shopper—wearing an expensive sealskin coat which reached to her ankles, came into a large department store yesterday to buy a pair of gloves. After completing the purchase she opened her coat to get her purse and then fainted. She had forgotten to put on a dress.

BLOCKADE UPON LAND AND SEA CUTS OFF FOOD

City Masks Its Tears with Smiles.

BULLETIN.

TRIEST, Dec. 25.—(By the Associated Press.)—Fiume and the nearby seaports are cut off from the world. The blockade established by the Italian regulars by land and sea is complete. Railroads and roads leading into Fiume are torn up. Regular troops and sea forces have shut every door. The forces of D'Annunzio have less than two weeks' food supply.

BY FRAZIER HUNT.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Copyright: 1920: By The Chicago Tribune.]

FIUME, Dec. 22.—[By Courier to Venice.]—The stage is all set here for a fine old fashioned motion picture war. It is billed as a comedy, and yet any moment may turn it into a tragedy.

At midnight the Italian government announces a blockade and at daybreak D'Annunzio declares war. From his one time Hungarian palace on a hill overlooking this long disputed harbor, he vows to defend Fiume "for Italy against Italy" until the curtain drops.

"If it is to live," the poet warrior thunders in his latest proclamation, "Fiume will live only in the splendor of the flag of Italy. If it is to die, Fiume will die only sacrificed to the flag of Italy."

Tears Behind Smiles.

This is all high comedy to the outsider. But to the poor, tired people of this heartbroken little state there is mighty little of comedy about it.

"Who will save us from our saviors?" they try to ask with a smile—but it is a pitiful smile.

It is late afternoon as I write and a battalion of legionaires under full war equipment just marched by behind a band on their way to "the front." There is plenty of music here, for, after all, a motion picture war must have its music.

On the surface everything is calm and peaceful. The coffee houses are full of d'Annunzio's soldiers playing at billiards or cards and arguing at the tops of their voices and on the streets there is plenty of strutting and love making. There is no terrifying tension, as yet, and the air is free from any apparent suspicion of impending tragedy.

Tragedy 'Round Corner.

Yet tragedy may be near, for D'Annunzio has declared war upon Italy and this "mad poet" is the same man who had the power and the push to bring Italy into the great war.

But Fiume is tired of it all. She is fed up to her ears on war and on D'Annunzio and on his dashing soldiers and on blockades. Broken, half fed, discouraged with her harbor and factories rotting, she is too tired to take this last war very seriously.

She has seen D'Annunzio threaten war before. She knows her merchants will grow a little poorer, her beautiful port a little rustier, and her children a little hungrier.

She simply wants what she thinks is hers. She once welcomed D'Annunzio, but now she gratefully would build him a statue if he would only leave.

Hunger May Turn Balance.

In the tired hearts of these people of Fiume there is more than a little fear. If Italy's blockade proves to be a real one, within a week there will be 40,000 starving people here. This is the real danger which may turn this comedy into a tragedy, for, once starving, these people, cowed and broken today, would turn into desperate street mobs and there would be killing enough then to suit any one.

Certainly there is little chance for actual warfare between D'Annunzio's 5,000 legionaires and the Italian troops. Few people here in their hearts believe that the Rome government would dare to try open war upon D'Annunzio. So strong is his appeal to the soldiers and so much of a hero is he to the whole army that if soldiers were ordered against him they probably would desert to him.

Poet Still a Hero.

This is true as well of the navy. Five destroyer deserters sleeping along the Fiume quays prove he is the one great hero of the Italian sailors.

The majority here believe that things will slip and slide along with more compromises and more shifting of gears. Fiume frankly is cynical. The rank and file of the legionaires are gay and unconcerned—only D'Annunzio and his immediate staff are taking themselves seriously. But even comedians must do that.

All foreigners have been ordered to leave the city by 6 o'clock tomorrow night. Trains have stopped running and the only known way out is by foot. I exepect to hit the trail tomorrow. In the meantime I am enjoying the comedy from a good seat.

ROADS TORN UP

TRIEST, Dec. 25.—[By the Associated Press.]—Arbe, Veglia, and San Marcos, under blocade by the Italian fleet as well as Fiume, are already beginning to feel the scarcity of food.

Immediately after official notice of the blockade was given to the "Regency of Quarnero," the Italian general, Ferrario, who already had a group of soldiers posted around the Fiume frontier, closed in upon the city, barring all exits on three sides. For about 100 yards out of the city the railway tracks were removed, stopping traffic into the city. The roads immediately outside were torn up and those crossing the frontiers were barred with tree trunks and wire entanglements. Here and there trenches have been dug, from whish patrols are keeping a lookout.

No One Able to Enter City.

Regular troops surround the blockade line at short intervals. Royal guards and carbineers hold the sea line, while Alpine troops dominate the city from the northeastern heights. What is considered the most dangerous spot, however, is the mouth of the river Reoina.

Since the blockade was instituted nobody has been able to enter Fiume. Many have been obliged to turn back, some of them being parents desirous of entering the city so that they might persuade their sons to return to the regular army and cease assisting in plans contrary to law.

The number of persons requiring to be fed in Fiume is 52,000 approximately, while the regency is believed to have accumulated rations only sufficient for 36,000, for two weeks. This has contributed greatly to the depression of the citizens who are reluctant to endure privations and suffering even to insure independence.

D'Annunzio's Complaint.

D'Annunzio, according to information coming out of Fiume, is highly indignant about some of the conditions in Gen. Caviglia's ultimatum, especially that pertaining to the disbandment of his legionnaires, which he considers an outrageous offense to the independence of the regency, which he declares, had a right to form an army for its own defense, even with foreign subjects, as France and Holland have done in the case of their foreign legions.

ITALIAN JOURNAL RAPS D'ANNUNZIO ON FIUME STAND

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

MILAN, Dec. 25.—In commenting on the Fiume situation the Corriere d'Italia, a popular Catholic organ, says the government should take all measures necessary to subdue Gabriele d'Annunzio for the sake of Italy's honor and dignity.

"Despite D'Annunzio's obstinacy, the Italian government must not hesitate to take all measures to assure the fulfillment of the Rapallo treaty and the vindication of Italy's honor," the journal declares.

"The popular party approves the government's energetic action aiming to compel the D'Annunzio legionnaires to submit to Italy's will. It is no longer possible to accept temporizing proposals for negotiations with a commandant who will not obey even when the Italian government applies coercion. Discussions ought not to be entered into with any Italian official who will not obey his king.

"Indulgence only produces new complications and difficulties of all kinds. D'Annunzio openly incites sailors in the Italian navy to desert."

Concluding, the article says, "It is necessary to finish with this dangerous and capricious man for the sake of Italy's dignity."

More Companies Give Bonuses to Employes

Twelve thousand dollars in bonuses, ranging from 5 to 25 per cent, were distributed yesterday among the employés of Henry Newgard & Co., electrical contractors at Washington and Market streets. Theodore Ebert & Co., painters and decorators at 914-918 Diversey parkway, distributed $4,000 among seventy employés in the form of savings accounts at the State Bank of Chicago.

Bomb Found After Fire at Office of Dublin Paper

LONDON, Dec. 25.—An attempt was made last night to burn the commercial offices of the Freeman's Journal. The Dublin fire brigade extinguished the flames with little damage, finding a petrol tank where the fire started.

SEISMOGRAPHS' MISSING QUAKE KILLS IN CHINA

News from Kan Su Fits Records in U. S.

New York, Dec. 25.—[Special.]—On Dec. 16 a mysterious visitor scratched his name in wavy lines on a dozen instruments in the United States and Canada and then disappeared.

The identity of the mysterious caller was apparently disclosed today when a news dispatch from Tokio indicated that on Dec. 16 an earthquake occurred in far off Kan Su province, China, causing 2,000 casualties.

Secret for Week.

The identity of the mysterious visitor aroused the scientific world because of the news that somewhere a terrific earthquake had taken place, yet the seat of the disaster remained a mystery for more than a week.

Although some seismograph experts are of the opinion that insfficient data prevents an absolute statement as to the location of the tremor, C. W. Repetti, formerly seismograph expert of Fordham college, said today that the "lost" earthquake was apparently the same one which inflicted a heavy toll in the extreme northwest of China.

Intense Shock Shown.

The instrument at Fordham was not in use on Dec. 16, said Mr. Repetti, and he depended for his judgment on the records made at Georgetown university by Father F. A. Tondorf.

"The fact that a shock of no mean proportions had taken place was apparent on all the instruments," he said.

Until the news dispatch from China was published no reports had come in by telegraph concerning the seat of the quake.

"A tremor which causes 2,000 casualties must be a severe one and the conicidence of the dates and the fact that Kansu is remote from modern methods of communication lead me to think that there can hardly be any doubt that the instruments which recorded te shock were started on their mission by the shaking of the earth on the other side of the world."

How Record Is Made.

Mr. Repetti explained that an earthquake as recorded by a seismograph is recorded by three sets of waves. First there is what is known as the first preliminary wave, then the second preliminary wave, and last the main shock.

The distance of the shock from the location of the seismograph is calculated by a mathematical formula used in connection with the intervals between the records on the instrument.

The seismograph is a delicately adjusted instrument fitted with two pens which record the tremor on smoked paper. One pen records a tremor of the earth which runs north and south and the other an east and west vibration. A tremor running in a different direction would deflect the needles.

CHICAGO EXPERT DOUBTS IT.

Charles A. Donnell, expert in charge of the local weather bureau seismograph, is not satisfied that the Chinese earthquake is the one recorded on the seismographs of the United States on Dec. 16. He declares that an earthquake occurred in Chile on that date and that it is more likely that it was the one recorded.

"Our estimates on the location of earthquakes are based upon the difference of time between the recording of the primary waves and the secondary waves. On Dec. 16 there was some doubt as to when the primary wave began to be felt. This was due to the fact that the seismograph is disturbed by wind conditions and also by what are known as microseisms or small earthquakes."

Lodge Presents House to Widow of Member

Kansas City, Kan., Dec. 25.—A home—a five room modern bungalow—was the Christmas gift received today by Mrs. Alice E. Christgen. She is a widow and has four children. Friends of her late husband, belonging to the same lodge, gave her the home, built by their own hands.

TWO WOMEN, MOTORING, DROWNED.

St. Petersburg, Fla., Dec. 25.—Mrs. Henry Kramer and her sister-in-law, Miss Emily Kramer, both of New Brunswick, N. J., were drowned here today when their automobile ran off a bridge and dropped into fifteen feet of water.

THE TURKS CAPTURE TURKEY

The picture shows conclusively that five fellers have found some friends. Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Fricks of 4304 Sheridan road and the five husky young chaps from De Paul Day nursery—yes, the five wearing the vest pocket Turkish fezzes—whom they summoned to help eat the Christmas turkey. And that wasn't all.

[TRIBUNE Photo.]

Money, Toys, Games!

"SEE what me mudder give me!" proudly exclaimed Jimmy, drawing a brand new deck of playing cards from a coat pocket. "Christmas cards!"

Jimmy is one of five healthy boys with robust appetites who were borrowed from the De Paul Day nursery at 2145 North Halsted street by Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Fricks to help them eat a Christmas dinner in their home at 4304 Sheridan road. A Christmas tree had been trimmed especially for their benefit and each was presented with a bank containing $2 and toys, games, and more substantial gifts of all kinds.

Mr. Fricks, who is connected with the National Cash Register company, has no children of his own and for several years has made a practice of bringing happiness to half a dozen boys who otherwise would have a slim Christmas.

U. S. BANKER AT SHANGHAI ABOUT LOANS TO CHINA

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

SHANGHAI, Dec. 24.—Frederick W. Stevens, representative of the American banks in the Chinese consortium, arrived here tonight. At a banquet given by the American chamber of commerce he said the mission, being of somewhat a diplomatic nature, must leave unsaid many things that the Chinese and foreigners would like to know.

He emphasized the fact that the loans must be of a constructive nature, with sufficient security to assure the American investing public of safety. The consortium will take no unfair advantages and ask no concessions and only wishes to assist China in the development of public utilities, lines of communication, and possibly reform of the currency.

He said any serious mistake at the beginning, either as to the purpose of the loan or conditions or securities, might be disastrous to the plan.

American banks are eager to coöperate with China providing it can be done on a sound business basis. Mr. Stevens will stay in Shanghai until next Wednesday, when he will go to Peking.

SEIZED AFTER WOMAN'S DEATH.

Poplar Bluff, Mo., Dec. 25.—Elmer Hartline was arrested this afternoon following the fatal shooting of Mrs. Bernice Edward Kahn of this city. He was taken into custody on the strength of the testimony of neighbors, who assert they have witnessed the killing.

MEANEST MAN LEAVES WIFE AND CHILD WAITING

Mrs. Catherine Moylan, carrying her 3 year old son, William, in her arms, was found wandering about the Union station yesterday by Frank Scott, a city fireman. She was weeping. She told Scott her husband had promised to meet her, and she had waited several hours. Scott lifted the boy from her arms and escorted her to Central police station.

"Henry hadn't been working," she said. "He just simply won't work. I had managed to support him and little Billy by working in a restaurant in Aurora. I had a lot of money saved up for Billy's Christmas. Yesterday Henry came to me and said he had decided to turn over a new leaf and go to work. He said he was going to start the year right.

"He told me he had got a job with his uncle, Cornelius Moylan, who lives in Maywood. He promised if I would buy him some new clothes for Christmas he'd take care of me and Billy.

"We came to Chicago yesterday and I bought him a new suit of clothes, an overcoat, and a hat. I gave him the rest of the money to buy Billy's presents. Last night we stayed at a hotel in Canal street. This morning we were going out to his uncle's place. He asked me to wait while he went over to the Union station to get a suit case he had left there. He didn't come back.

"Perhaps he has deserted you," suggested the police sergeant.

"No, not after promising me," she sobbed, "and not with Billy's Christmas."

"If, if you find Henry," was her parting admonition. "Be sure and send him back to me. He promised——"

Pueblo Steel Mills Output Is Curtailed

Denver, Colo., Dec. 25.—[Special.]—The record for December will show a curtailment in production at the steel mills at Pueblo, J. W. Welborn, president of the Colorado Fuel and Iron company, said last night. For two or three short periods the working force has been reduced from 6,000 to 4,000 men, and the thirty day period will probably show that the big plant worked but little over half time.

WASHINGTON MADE COUNTRY DRY, BUT ENJOYS EGGNOGGS

Washington, D. C., Dec. 25.—[Special.]—Eggnog flowed freely in various sections in Washington today. And it had a kick in it.

Foreign embassies and legations, which are immune from the operation of the eighteenth amendment, were the scenes of many parties. They were popular havens for thirsty ones, who needed some cheer.

Washington is looking forward to a week from today to celebrate New Year's day in much the same way.

BUSINESS SHIP SOON TO REACH PEACEFUL PORT

Cleveland, O., Dec. 25.—The Fourth Federal Reserve bank, in its monthly summary of business conditions, issued today, says business has weathered the storms of 1920; that an era of stabilized business conditions is in sight.

"We believe land is in sight," the statement says, "and that within a reasonable time we shall safely reach refuge in the harbor of stabilized business."

While the year "has been one of surprising developments to many," the statement says, "there is nothing but what students of business conditions had expected.

"A substantial liquidation has taken place, and the damage done, as compared with the good accomplished, has been surprisingly small," it says.

New York Restaurants Plan Further Price Cuts

New York, Dec. 25.—[Special.]—A further reduction of 10 per cent in food prices in leading restaurants early in the new year is promised by restaurant owners. There has been an average decrease of 10 per cent in restaurant prices. The second reduction depends to some extent on readjustment of wages to help.

SHOOTS WIFE, KILLS SELF.

Pittsburgh, Pa., Dec. 25.—John Kennedy, 60, a former Pittsburgh police lieutenant, today went to the home of his wife, with whom he has not been living for several months, and, after shooting her, killed himself. Hospital surgeons said Mrs. Kennedy could not survive.

ACTRESS SEEKS DIVORCE FROM RICH DENVERITE

Husband's Silence Hurt Grace Drew Brown.

Denver, Colo., Dec. 25.—[Special.]—Charges that James H. Brown, Denver attorney and son of H. C. Brown, Colorado pioneer and builder of the Brown Palace hotel, was cruel to his wife and failed to support her are contained in a suppressed divorce complaint filed in the County court Dec. 22 by Grace Drew Brown, former light opera prima donna.

Mrs. Brown has been separated from her husband for some time. While Mr. Brown has been living in Denver his wife has been a resident of St. Louis. She came to Denver to sign the divorce complaint a few days ago and returned immediately to St. Louis.

Charges Mental Cruelty.

The actress-wife charges her husband with mental cruelty, consisting of refusal to speak to her for days at a time and with having so impaired her health by his conduct that she has been compelled to require the attendance of a physician. She charges also that her husband has failed to support her properly for more than a year. Her pleadings were prepared by Joseph W. Jaffa, attorney.

That the divorce is by mutual agreement is indicated by the fact that simultaneously with the filing of his wife's papers Mr. Brown filed a formal answer denying the charges in the complaint. He appears for himself as attorney per se.

First Wedding Stirred Denver.

The mere rumor that a legal separation was pending between the couple has set Denver by the ears. Both principals to the suits have been public figures. Brown comes from one of Colorado's most blue blooded families, while his wife achieved fame as an actress in light opera rôles. She is particularly remembered as a star in the French farce "Alma, Where Do You Live?" and as prima donna in "The Chocolate Soldier."

Both Brown and his wife have been divorced before. Brown's first matrimonial venture was with Miss Mary A. Clarke, daughter of Dr. J. C. Clarke. They were divorced.

Grace Drew obtained a divorce in October of the same year from John W. Drew, a St. Louis business man. At that time she made emphatic statements on the subject of marriage which were widely quoted. She said: "I'll never try it again. Artists shouldn't marry—particularly actresses. Business men as husbands are impossible. They are dry, prosaic, hopelessly unromantic."

Rothschilds Offer Chile Loan for Improvements

SANTIAGO, Chili, Dec. 25.—It is announced that the Rothschilds of London have offered a loan to Chili to be devoted to public improvements and the new railway project between Santiago and Valparaiso. The offer is said to have been made through the Chilean charge d'affaires at London. No details are given.

'HYPNOTIC EYES' ENSLAVED HER, WOMAN AVERS

Charged with Theft, She Blames Man.

New York, Dec. 25.—[Special.]—Mrs. Ruth Ruickholdt of 890 Chapel street, New Haven, Conn., who said she was the wife of a physician and is said to be prominent socially, was held in $2,500 bail for examination Dec. 27 when arraigned before Magistrate Max S. Levine in Jefferson Market court.

The woman was arrested last night. The complaint was contained in an affidavit by Detective Frank Cassassa. It is charged Mrs. Ruickholdt, by representing herself to be Mrs. Alfred Mitchell of New London, Conn., obtained a gold watch and diamond ring from Stone & Berry, New London jewelers, by express.

Blames "Hypnotic Eyes."

A man "with hypnotic eyes" was blamed today by Mrs. Ruickholdt for her difficulties. She gave the name of this man to a detective. The sleuth waited at a prominent hotel where the woman said she had an appointment with the man.

Later, pacing tearfully up and down the matron's room in Jefferson Market prison, Mrs. Ruickholdt said to reporters:

"This man has been a curse in my life. I have given him the proceeds of everything I have ever got, but I cannot escape his hypnotic eyes and manner.

"If my family or my husband's family hear of this I will be disgraced forever."

Says Husband Is Ill.

Mrs. Ruckholdt declared her husband is a physician in a New England city, but that he has recently been ill and confined to his apartment in the Hotel Raleigh at Washington, D. C. Dr. Ruickholdt was expected to arrive here from Washington today and his wife asked for him constantly.

SPEAKER FIGHT MAY POSTPONE SMALL REGIME

Deadlock Regarded Sure by G. O. P. Leaders.

BY E. O. PHILLIPS.

The Illinois legislature that assembles at Springfield one week from Wednesday now almost certainly faces a deadlock over the election of a speaker of the house. Repetition of the prolonged battles of 1909, 1913, and 1915 is anticipated by house leaders, and it is feared in some quarters that the inauguration of Governor Elect Small will be delayed as was that of Gov. Dunne in 1913.

No one of the ten or a dozen candidates has anything near a majority of the Republican caucus that is to be held, probably one week from tomorrow night. The strongest claim, in figures, has come from the camp of William P. Holaday of Vermilion county.

Holaday Claims Forty Votes.

His pledged strength, it is claimed is more than forty votes out of the ninety-five that represents the total Republican membership of the new house. This claim from Holaday headquarters is ridiculed by other candidates. Homer J. Tice's friends say that he and not Holaday now has the largest number of actually pledged votes, but they say that neither Tice nor Holaday has twenty last ditch supporters tied in.

From a reliable source yesterday came the tip that the new state administration, in alliance with the city hall, is about to center its support upon one of two of the active candidates, and that William M. Scanlan of La Salle county and William R. McCabe of Will county are the two.

Scanlan is an avowed wet. He is a leader in the La Salle county organization that is strongly allied with Col. Frank L. Smith, chairman of the Republican state committee. McCabe is classified as a dry and is being backed for the speakership by the Will county organization headed by Senator Richard J. Barr of Joliet.

Wet and Dry Issue Raised.

The wet and dry issue already has been raised in the speakership fight. The Anti-Saloon league has been conducting its end of the campaign quietly, ever since the day arrived for filing primary petitions.

The league wants a house organization dominated by the drys that will pass an appropriation bill sufficient in amount to enforce strictly the search and seizure act that came from the last legislature. It wants some minor changes in the search and seizure law to make it conform more strictly with the provisions of the Volstead act.

The wets, on the other hand, if they could scrape up the votes, would like to harpoon the search and seizure act. However, there seems to be no chance of a wet majority in the house, and the senate is strongly dry.

The call for the house caucus will be issued this week by State Chairman Frank L. Smith, probably for Tuesday, Jan. 4, at 8 p. m., at the Leland hotel.

BOLSHEVIK WAVE ROLLING WEST TO BALTIC LITTORAL

[Chicago Tribune-New York Times Cable.]

PARIS, Dec. 25.—The prediction that within three months the soviet federation will include Reval, Riga, and Kovno, with the Baltic sea once more the western boundary of Russia, is made in an information about the Baltic situation just received from a well informed authority on the spot.

Such events would raise serious problems not only for France and Great Britain, but for the United States. To Great Britain the entry of the Baltic states into the soviet federation would mean the abandonment of her dream of control over "Russia's western windows."

The problem that would confront America is less political than in the case of France or Britain. The American Red Cross and Children's Relief associations have big organizations in the Baltic area, where upward of 100 Americans are engaged. Not only are there large stocks of goods, which it is impossible to remove quickly, but a great majority of Americans would decline to abandon it under the threat of a bolshevist upheaval.

Pope Prays for Cardinal Gibbons at Midnight Mass

ROME, Dec. 25.—The pope, reëstablishing the traditions of his predecessors, celebrated three masses, the first beginning at midnight, in the Pauline chapel, which was beautifully decorated with flowers and glittering with candles. All the members of the ecclesiastical and lay court were present together with the entire personnel of the Apostolic palace and a limited number of distinguished guests. The pope uttered a special prayer for the recovery of Cardinal Gibbons and the preservation of his life.

HAS RESTFUL DAY.

Baltimore, Md., Dec. 25.—Cardinal Gibbons celebrated Christmas in his sick room at the home of Robert T. Shriver near Westminster, Md., today with members of his household with him. He was able to eat some of the Christmas dinner, but visitors were denied him. Mass was said in his room early in the day by the Rev. Father Albert E. Smith, the cardinal's secretary.

Ouija Board as Aid to Arithmetic Lessons

Indianapolis, Ind., Dec. 25.—Kenneth Rothschild appealed to his aunts, uncles, and parents, collectively and severally, feeling they might induce Santa Claus to squeeze down the chimney with an oujia board. CHICAGO WELCOMES 125 TINY POLISH REFUGEES

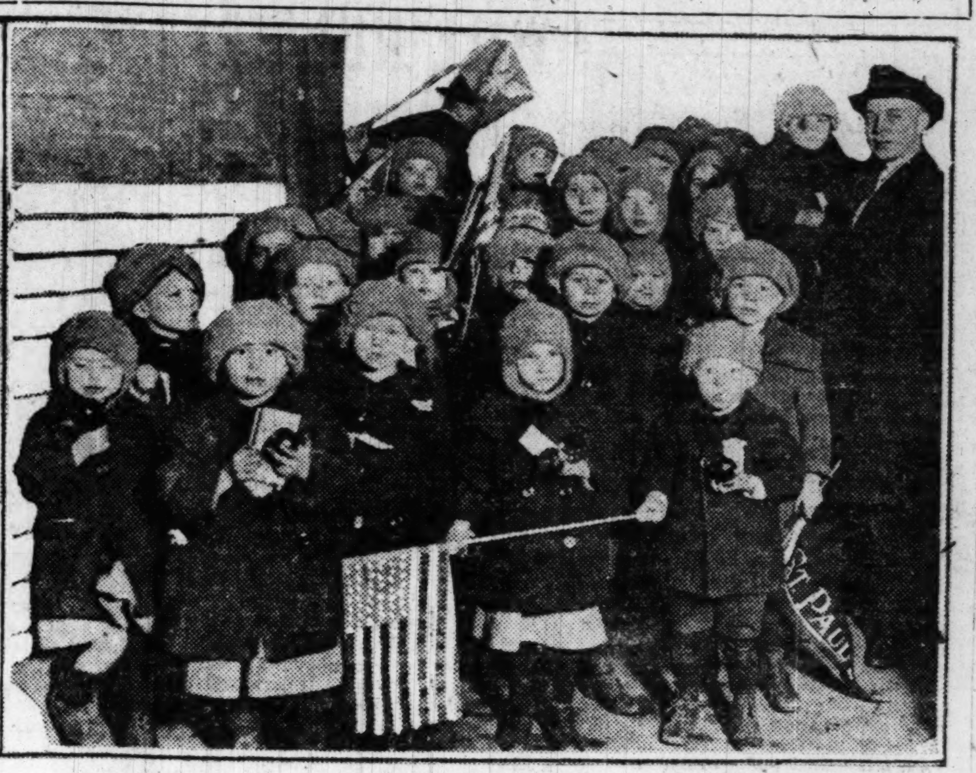
Mrs. J. R. Van Dyke introduces 125 Polish children, lost to their parents and other relatives during the world war, to the great American taffy apple on their arrival in Chicago yesterday from Siberia. The children also proudly acquire ownership of their first American flag.



The taffy apples surely look good to the tiny refugees, but they hardly know what to do with them, so they just hang on to them like grim death. Candy and kindness and Christmas gifts have been strangers to them for a long, long time. But they know hunger, cold, and sorrow very well.

'LOST CHILDREN' OF POLAND FIND NEW HAVEN HERE

Gifts, Candy, Shower Tiny War Victims.

It was the happiest of Christmas days for 125 little Polish children who arrived here yesterday from Siberia. The refugees, from 2 to 16 years old, have known much hunger, cold and sorrow, as driftwood cast up by the storm of war. But now they are to be looked after by the National Polish committee of America until they can be restored to the parents or relatives from whom they were separated by the conflict.

Gifts and candies were awaiting them. Mrs. J. R. Van Dyke had a taffy apple and a word of welcome for each. Her husband, who is general passenger agent for the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy railroad, had arranged for their comfort on the last lap of their 7,000 mile journey. E. H. Moot, general agent of the Great Northern railroad, had met their boat, the Suwa Maru, at Victoria, B. C., and accompanied their special train into Chicago.

Lost During War's Stress.

Thousands of Poles were driven from their homes by the German invaders. They were forced to go to Siberia. Families were separated, children lost, men and women died, until there accumulated 350 children to whom nobody laid claim.

The Poles of Chicago realized that something must be done for their suffering kin, especially the children, so the local branch of the national Polish committee, of which John F. Smulski is head and which has headquarters at 1214 North Ashland avenue, arranged with the bureau of immigration, the state department, and the department of labor to bring the children here, assuring the government that they would never become public charges.

Given Shelter at Niles.

They were taken last night to the St. Hedwig's Industrial school at Niles, Ill., of which Father F. S. Rusch is head. They will later be distributed among Polish orphanages throughout the country and educated and cared for until their parents are located or conditions are such that they may return to their native land.

Others who welcomed the children at the station here were Mr. and Mrs. John Hintzke, 1333 North Ashland avenue; Mrs. Anne Neumann, 1339 North Ashland avenue; and the Rev. Louis Grudzinsky, pastor of St. John's church. Dr Jacobiewicz, vice president of the Polish relief committee of Siberia and former health commissioner of Vladivostok, brought the little refugees over

"They behaved finely," said Mr. Moot. "They are delighted to be in America. People all along the way gave them presents. At St. Paul early Christmas morning a delegation of Poles met the train bearing gifts from Santa Claus."

Senator McCormick Gives Holiday Cheer to Orphans

BERLIN, Dec. 25.—United States Senator Medill McCormick entertained several hundred war orphans at an old fashioned Christmas dinner this afternoon and presented the children with candy, toys, and warm clothing. The entertainment was arranged by the Quakers, whom Senator McCormick asked to gather together as many of the poor children as possible and permit him to show them a good time.

Senator Chamberlain Is Resting for Next Operation

BRITAIN WONDERS AT FURORE OVER EMBASSY'S ACTS

[Chicago Tribune-New York Times Cable.]

LONDON, Dec. 25.—Regarding the news from Washington bearing on the reported dissatisfaction of the state department with the action of the British embassy in writing direct to Senator Kellogg respecting Newcomb Carlton's testimony before the senate committee on cable communications, it may be stated that well informed opinion here is somewhat nonplused by reports received from America in regard to this matter.

The development of "the Anglo-American incident," even if it should prove intrinsically unimportant, would be regarded as particularly unfortunate at a period when the immediate future of the world is beset with difficulties and perils.

WASHINGTON NEWS
—IN BRIEF—

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

WASHINGTON, D. C., Dec. 25.

Senator Penrose, chairman of the finance committee, long ill, has sent word to his senate colleagues here that he is going to break his Atlantic City recuperation and come to Washington this week to spike the Fordney agricultural emergency tariff bill. Senator Penrose's friends say the chairman regards the emergency bill as a dangerous measure, inviting serious retaliation.

◆

Agents of the German government who are seeking a billion dollars credit from the United States say that if President Wilson vetoes the measure reviving the war finance corporation, a new bill will be introduced in congress providing for the appointment by the president of a commission to accept bonds of the German government as security for American credit and to sell debentures to obtain the necessary money.

GANG FORGES U. S. PASSPORTS FOR 1,500 MARKS

[Chicago Tribune-New York Times Cable.]

BRUSSELS, Dec. 25.—Details have just been received in Belgian official quarters from Berlin of a conspiracy among Poles, with German assistance, to forge and sell false Polish passports with forged Belgian and American signatures. The gang has been located by Belgian and American passport authorities and the chief conspirators were arrested by the German police. It is understood that altogether 400 false passports were printed. All but ten were issued and sold at 1,500 marks each.

HARDING AS BOY DUCKED MORAL OF CHERRY TREE

He Didn't Lie, but He Didn't Tell Truth.

Marion, O., Dec. 25.—[Special.]—The first president couldn't tell a lie—the man who will be the twenty-ninth president didn't, but he kept silent and let the innocent suffer. That was forty-five years ago, but it still rests heavily upon his conscience. Perhaps if it were only about a cherry tree, the truth would have been easy, but when it was the prize gander of grandfather's flock, and when the most lordly turkey gobbler in three counties was made the innocent victim and when Grandfather Dickerson was known as an inflexible believer in the stern method of raising children, the truth would have been folly.

Ever since Dr. George Tyron Harding had married into the Dickerson family it was the custom for both families to gather for Christmas dinner at Grandfather Dickerson's farm, a few miles from Blooming Grove. But before the packages dangling from the tree could be opened the Dickerson cows had to be brought in from the pasture. To a 10 year old grandson this was an aggravation and young Warren Gamaliel left unwillingly for the cow pasture.

The Tempting Sailer.

A flock of geese was strutting in the barnyard. In the cow path lay a flat stone of the "sailer" variety that a dexterous arm could send skipping over the water for scores of feet. There was no water, but there were the noisy, boasting geese. With no other motive than to silence the silly creatures, young Warren cast the "sailer" idly in their direction. The "sailer" struck grandfather's prize gander just above the neck. He gave one squawk, circled the flock, and then flopped dead, his feet in the air.

Young Warren remembered that he had a previous engagement and ran to the pasture. Returning behind the cows, he found the whole Harding and Dickerson families surrounding grandfather and the dead gander. In accordance with prudent farm custom the feathers already had been plucked.

Grandfather Dickerson was not saying much, but he was looking at a turkey gobbler that, thinking he was being admired, had spread its tail feathers. Only Grandfather Dickerson wasn't admiring the bird. His fingers twitched.

Doom of the Gobbler.

"I hate to do it," he said at last, rolling up his sleeves, "but I always said if that turkey touched another one of my geese, I'd wring his neck, and I'm a man of my word."

It is not know just how much stock young Warren Gamaliel put in the story of the cherry tree. Neither is it known how much Father Washington believed in the stern method of raising children. As for Grandfather Dickerson, his creed already had been put into practice more than once.

Young Warren Gamaliel tried to compromise—he's been more successful at this method since. He pleaded for the life of the turkey gobbler. Without casting suspicion elsewhere he intimated that the turkey was innocent, but the turkey gobbler died, not by the ax, but with his neck twisted between some firm agricultural fingers.

Christmas season that year was spoiled for Warren. During the days that followed he assisted in the digestion of both gander and gobbler, but his heart was not in the work.

Spends Day Opening Presents.

President Elect Harding and Mrs. Harding today celebrated Christmas by opening hundreds of Christmas presents received from all parts of the country and by entertaining newspaper correspondents at dinner.

It was the first Christmas Senator Harding and Mrs. Harding had spent in their Marion home in five years.

No political conferences were held and the day was devoted to rest and the celebration of the holiday.

AURORA POLICE FEAST PRODIGAL —QUARANTINED!

Find Guest Has Smallpox; Trouble Follows.

Amos Olson or Olson Amos, the nomenclature has not been confirmed, was a youth to fortune and to fame unknown until yesterday at sunup.

A weary wayfarer, homeless, penniless, he sought succor at the Aurora city jail on Friday evening. Chief Louis Weber, his humanitarian impulses quickened by the Yuletide spirit, grasped Amos by the hand, and said:

"Sure, Olson, make yourself at home."

They had previously killed a fatted calf for the boys at the station and Amos partook of the good cheer as welcomely as though he had been a prodigal son. After dinner they fitted up the best cell in the station for him. He slumbered late the following morning.

Amos Causes a Shock.

As is the immemorial custom in Aurora, the chief, the day captain, the desk sergeant, and the lockupkeeper made the rounds of the jail, extending to each inmate seasonal compliments.

"Well, Amos," said Mr. Weber, as the party entered Olson's cell, "a merry Christmas and how goes it?" and he tendered him a cigar.

"I'm sick," said Amos. "I can't get up. Call the doctor."

The city physician made a hasty examination. Then he telephoned the health commissioner. They herded the chief and the day force, which had just reported, into a secluded room and announced:

"This man's got a well developed case of smallpox. You're all quarantined until further orders."

"But my dinner," said the chief, "it's on now and——"

An Emergency Unheeded.

The orders were obeyed. There were no sartorial substitutes in the station, which is drafty. Each of the party picked out a radiator. The telephone rang. A woman wished to speak with Chief Weber.

"This is Mrs. Whisnant," she informed him. "My husband is choking me and I want you to hurry right down here. Why, he even said he could whip you—help."

"I'm sorry," said the chief; "I am unavoidably detained."

"You're afraid of my husband then. And you weigh 230 pounds and he's a wart; I never thought I'd live to see the day they'd call Louis Weber a coward."

"I ain't a coward. If you have to know, I'm—were being fumigated. My coat and vest and trousers. The——"

The Missus Calls Up.

She hung up.

Again the telephone rang. It was Mrs. Weber.

"Do you know this dinner's sitting here getting cold? The one day in the year when you should be on time. What's keeping you?"

"What's keeping me? Nothing. I could come there right now. I got my suspenders and garters. All I need is something to hang on to them, but that's a trifle."

Eventually Mr. Weber explained in detail.

The police department was finally released at 4 o'clock in the afternoon after being in quarantine some six hours.

GERMAN ADMIRAL GIVES VIEWS ON U. S.-JAP WAR

Says Tokio Resents Jones Bill Keenly.

BY GEORGE SELDES.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

[Copyright: 1920: By The Chicago Tribune.]

BERLIN, Dec. 25.—Writing in the semi-official Deutsche Allgemeine Zeitung, Vice Admiral Hollweg compares the strength of the American and Japanese fleets, the new building program, and the chances for war between the two countries.

"Not only the general reciprocal racial antipathy and the trade competition in the Pacific create possibilities of conflict," says Admiral Hollweg, "but far more important is the American navigation bill of June, 1920, which provides that none but American ships can bear the traffic between the islands belonging to America and the American continent.

Talk of Reprisals.

"Other paragraphs of the Jones bill grant advantages to American navigation at the expense of other countries. Japan, being on the edge of the Pacific, is strongly interested and feels very bitter over the matter. The Tokio press speaks of the necessity of reprisals.

"America is openly and secretly opposed to Japan's obtaining too great an influence in Asia, especially in China."

Admiral Hollweg then discusses the Saghalin island controversy and the quest for oil, inasmuch as Japan's new warship are oil burners. He mentions the Japanese protest against the Vanderlip commercial treaty and Baron Goto's protest against the California land law.

Little Faith in League.

"The league of nations," he continues, "meets in Geneva, but both America and Japan trust their own power more than the league's arbitration. Both countries are rushing big naval programs. Both nations are fighting in a silent, tough battle, for the supremacy of the Pacific.

"It seems very probable that there will be no war between America and Japan; war now would be a parody on the league of nations, and there are other reasons why Japan might want to keep up peace appearances. Everything depends on England, whose alliance with Japan has been extended to July, 1921, but the English press and the far west press always insist this alliance would never cause a conflict between the two Anglo-Saxon powers. England has too many preoccupations nowadays to take an active part in an Asiatic Japanese venture. Besides, the two rival nations have not yet completed their armament—this certainly is an argument in favor of peace for a little while.

"No one can tell when things will break, and if they will break. The problem of the far east will not be solved easily and completely. Should England be compelled to act in this matter, then she will certainly act only for her own advantage."

DUTCH EXCITED OVER NEW TAX ON ALL LIQUORS

THE HAGUE, Dec. 25.—The "dry" forces today succeeded in putting through the Dutch parliament, after a hard fight, a law increasing the internal revenue tax on spirits 150 per cent and on beer 100 per cent after Jan. 1

As the present tax amounts to approximately 1.50 guilders a liter on gin manufactured in Holland and 3.50 guilders a liter on imported whisky, cognac, etc., the effect of the increase, according to the drys, will be to make spirits practically prohibitive for the poor.

The beer tax now amounts only to a fraction of a cent a glass, and the new increase is not expected to change the price materially.

Harrison Orders Inquiry Into Philippine Riots

MANILA, Dec. 24.—[Delayed.]—Investigation by the department of justice into the causes of the clash between the constabulary and police forces Dec. 15, when eleven persons were killed in riots, was ordered today by Gov. Francis Burton Harrison. Exhaustive inquiry into the conduct of the officers as well as the men of both forces was directed.

The doll house Capt. Thomas I. Porter of the United States secret service made for his two little nieces.

The doll's home was built by the captain during the last two months, and is handmade throughout. It is equipped with all modern improvements, including electric lights, electric doorbells, a talking machine, kitchen cabinet and piano. Two dolls dressed as maids are included in the establishment.

The little house is about three feet high, four feet long and two feet wide.

LONESOME SUITOR SHOOTS GIRL AND KILLS HIMSELF

Jealousy Wrecks This Christmas Party.

Enraged because she went to a Christmas eve dance with another man, Joseph Weiss, 27 years old, shot and wounded Mrs. Anna Goodman, 24, in a rooming house at 211 Florimond street. Then he shot himself dead. Weiss was a tailor.

MRS. ANNA GOODMAN.

Neighbors said Weiss and Mrs. Goodman had been living together as man and wife. At Passavant hospital physicians said the woman was not seriously injured.

Weiss waited in vain for Mrs. Goodman at their flat Christmas eve. About 3 o'clock she entered the flat.

"This is a nice time to be getting home," Weiss said.

An argument started. Weiss pulled out his revolver and shouted:

Several shots were heard.

Several shots in a saloon at West Fifty-first street and South Racine avenue, led to an investigation by Traffic Policeman Michael Donovan. Frank Bodine, 26 years old, of 92 West Fifty-first street, and another man ran from the front entrance.

The policemen pursued them. "Leave him alone," said Bodine, who stopped running when the policeman captured his comrade.

The two men are said to have attacked the policeman. The latter shot Bodine in the abdomen. The other man escaped.

Two Hurt in Saloon Fight.

Stanley Augustine, 23, of 1204 West Forty-ninth place, was stabbed below the heart, probably fatally, and Leo Green, 28, of 481 South Winchester avenue, was shot and wounded in the left leg, in a fight in the saloon of Romen Borszak, at 4801 South Throop street. Borszak was locked up charged with having wounded the pair during a general fight of revelers.

Miss Anna Dennick, 1017 West Forty-second street, was shot in the left shoulder yesterday afternoon by Thomas Poles who lives near Forty-second and Halsted streets. Poles canvassed a number of saloons in the neighborhood looking for his wife. He had been drinking heavily. He staggered along Forty-second street just as Miss Dennick entered her home. He ran after her, overtook her on the second landing of the stairway and fired two shots. Then he fled. He had mistaken her for his wife.

JAPAN TOLD U. S. WILL NULLIFY CALIFORNIA LAW

Treaty Will Make State Bow to Tokio, Claim.

TOKIO, Dec. 25.—Addressing preliminary meetings of the diet yesterday, Viscount Uchida, foreign minister, expressed the opinion that a new Japanese-American treaty would be concluded, leading to nullification of the California land law. He said he expected such action to result from negotiations at Washington between Ambassador Shidehara and Roland S. Morris, United States ambassador to Japan.

The ambassadors, he said, were making efforts to obtain an understanding with the senate to obtain passage of the treaty. He announced that, in view of their sincerity, Japan had refrained from protesting against the California law, but that if the negotiations should fail a formal protest would be lodged.

Answering interpellations, Mr. Uchida said the negotiations were proceeding under the understanding that such a treaty would override the state law.

New Treaty Under Way.

Washington, D. C., Dec. 25.—It has been known here for some time that negotiations were in progress looking to the drafting of a new Japanese-American treaty involving the California land law, but it is believed that they have not so far taken the form of a treaty.

It is understood that bases are being laid of a possible treaty which will mitigate the severity of the Webb law, enacted several years ago by the California legislature, and also of the new law created last month by referendum, and providing against certain alien holdings of real property in California.

It is understood that the underlying principle has been to preserve the rights of Japanese residents of Pacific coast states to property which have been legally acquired, but of which they would be deprived by application of the new law.

Denies an "Understanding."

Sacramento, Cal., Dec. 25.—Recently published reports that the state department had come to an understanding with Japan regarding Japanese immigration which appeared in Tokio and Japanese language newspapers along the Pacific coast were erroneous, according to V. S. McClatchy, Sacramento publisher.

Mr. McClatchy today told of his conferences at Washington, as representative of the Japanese Exclusion league, with Secretary of State Colby, Ambassador Morris, now on duty at the state department, and other officials.

The reports, the publisher said, were "circulated in Japan evidently for the purpose of making a better public feeling there prior to the California election."

MARY CHRISTMAS

Chicago's Opera Yule Present Arrives, More Effervescent than Ever.

MARY GARDEN.

MARY GARDEN—"Our Mary," more effervescent than ever—returned to Chicago yesterday, sped through the La Salle street station scattering silver and Yuletide greetings, and thence to the Blackstone hotel, where a fresh delegation waited to wish her a merry Christmas.

En route she chatted of French opera and the Chicago Opera association; of "Aphrodite," in which she will make her first Chicago appearance of the season on New Year's eve, and of Lucien Muratore, with whom she will sing during January.

"It is delightful beyond expression to have him with us again!" she exclaimed. "We sing together in 'Monna Vanna' and after that—well, often again in other operas.

"I've been following Chicago's opera season with much interest, and I've noticed only two or three performances of French opera. More French and less Italian, if you please. With Muratore here and—ahem!—Miss Garden, too, if you'll pardon my mentioning it, I feel safe in predicting that those who enjoy French opera will before long be vouchsafed a pleasure."

"I hope the whole world goes dry," she concluded. "Prohibition is a good thing for this country, and it will be a good thing for the world. I mean it."

CHILEAN LABOR SPLIT OVER WINE IN SHIP HOLDS

SANTIAGO, Chile, Dec. 25.—One of the first official acts of President Arturo Alessandri, who assumed office Thursday, was to receive a petition yesterday from the Chilean Federation of Labor protesting against the alleged attempts of the League for the Defense of the Wine Industry to force northern port workers to unload liquors. The labor organization already has adopted a resolution, effective Jan. 1, to refuse to unload liquors, whether of home or foreign manufacture.

This decision was brought before the senate by Senator William Edwards, who asked for an official declaration of the government's attitude with regard to "liberty in commerce," in view of the federation's action.

FAIR WOULD-BE DAMONS TURNED DOWN IN LISBON

LISBON, Dec. 25.—[By the Associated Press.]—The government today formed a deputation of Portuguese women that it could not legally consent to grant the women's appeal to pass Christmas day in the jails as hostages for political prisoners, because it would be illegal. The reply expressed admiration for the women's spirit of self-sacrifice.

The minister of the interior last Wednesday received Dona Branca de Gonta, a prominent member of the Society of Poets, who some time ago addressed an appeal to the women of Portugal to aid her in providing a happy Christmas for political prisoners. She was accompanied at the time by 100 other women. The minister then expressed the view that acquiescence in the petition would be illegal but that the question would be placed before the ministerial council for decision.

CITY ONE VAST SMILE-DECKED YULETIDE PARTY

And Nary an Unfortunate or Child Is Forgotten.

Chicago sat back last night and chuckled contentedly over the merriest Christmas it has witnessed in many a year. Santa Claus' verdict was that "not a kid had been missed" and that was all that was needed to stamp the day perfect. Smiles, the only safe and sure barometer, were everywhere. From Lake Forest to the dunes and from the lake to the western suburbs they recorded in mansion and tenement, hotel and hovel, the merriest Yuletide the city has enjoyed since the nations of Europe were swept into the world war.

Those in a position to know estimated that Christmas cheer was carried to at least 150,000 persons who otherwise would have had only a mite of happiness. After the army of Good Fellows, the settlements, the churches, the charitable organizations, and hosts of other societies had completed their work of distributing baskets of goodies, and clothes, and toys, the policemen dug down into their own pockets and the Salvation Army workers went abroad "mopping up" the gloom in the few corners that had been missed.

Nary a One Is Missed.

If there was any child last night who had not received a toy and candy; if there was any invalid, prisoner, patient, or other inmate of a public institution who had not had a real Christmas dinner with all the "trimmin's," and the Yuletide spirit that goes with it, he or she could not be found.

"This seems the most wonderful Christmas I ever have seen," said Warden Michael Zimmer of the county hospital. "We have been exceptionally well taken care of by our friends. We wish to thank them."

And Michael Zimmer has witnessed other Christmases as an official at the Joliet penitentiary and the county jail, and he, if any one, knows what real cheer means in a public institution.

A number of churches served Christmas dinners to all who entered their doors. Chief Fitzmorris estimated that at least 300 families were made happy by policemen who bought gifts and dinners and carried them to front doors on their beats.

Opera Stars Have Gay Time.

Nowhere was the holiday celebrated with more zest than among the artists of the Chicago Grand Opera company, whose hotel rooms resembled conservatories banked high with flowers. Many of the packages exchanged were suggestive of rare French and Italian vintages.

Galli-Curci gave many expensive presents and wound up by presenting the members of the chorus, orchestra and musical staff with leather toilet cases. Rosa Raisa gave gold pencils and jewelry. Tito Schipa gave pearls. Titta Ruffo and Alessandro Bonci gave purses containing bank notes, and all of them gathered around to hang something on the Christmas tree of Gow Toy, the little Chinese sleeve dog which is the mascot of the company.

But they did not confine their celebration to Michigan boulevard. Many visited institutions and sang to the patients and inmates. Mme. Carmen Pascova went through the wards of the county hospital, where in addition to a big dinner the patients were treated to a vaudeville performance. So situated in the hospital yard so it could be seen from most of the windows was a large Christmas tree from the Toyland circus, brought to the spot by a TRIBUNE truck.

Dunning Hears Yule Carols.

Following the usual festivities in the state hospital at Dunning, the nurses marched from ward to ward last night singing Christmas carols. Every patient received a gift. Various entertainments will be given throughout the week.

All of the prisoners in the county jail enjoyed special privileges. Each woman inmate was presented with a box of candy, the gift of Mrs. J. Ogden Armour, and each man received cigarets and cigars. Mass was celebrated by the Rev. Father Thomas [illegible] of Holy Name cathedral in the morning and in the afternoon a "home talent" show was given by the prisoners.

Christmas dinners and entertainment also were on the day's program [illegible] bridewell, the municipal tuberculosis sanitarium, the psychopathic [illegible], and the contagious disease [illegible], where the celebration was in charge of the Chicago Lodge of Elks.

Soldiers and Sailors Fêted.

Christmas festivities at Fort Sheridan were in charge of a committee headed by Mrs. James A. Patten and 8,000 jackies at Great Lakes sat down to a bumper turkey dinner while theatrical troupes from Chicago entertained them under the auspices of the American Red Cross.

Mrs. H. L. Adams, president of the United States Marine Corps league, which sent 3,744 packages—tobacco, writing paper, soap, candy, Bibles, other books and magazines—to the marines in the West Indies, received a letter of thanks from Maj. Gen. John A. Lejeune, commanding the corps.

Committees of the Prairie State club, of which Mrs. Thomas Oskar is president, carried Christmas dinners to forty-one poor families; 600 old men and women in the various Homes for the Aged conducted by the Little Sisters of the Poor of the north, west, and south sides; twenty aged patients at Alexian Brothers' hospital, and the widows of twenty-eight civil war veterans in the Logan Home in Mayw[illegible].

The Ancient Craft League of the Masonic Order distributed baskets to [illegible]25 families.

"Tiny Tims" Get Gifts.

At the Chicago Nursery and Half Orphan asylum the Christmas party for the kids started at 10 o'clock yesterday morning and continued through the afternoon.

At 5 o'clock last night 125 little Serbian refugees jumped from a train onto Chicago. They were hurried to a new institution the Poles of America are building at Niles. These little Polish kids have been without the bare necessities of life ever since the war. Think they weren't smiling? Gee, you never did see such smiles.

Won't Let Santa Sleep.

Last night a reporter talked with James Fitzgerald, secretary to John M. Hubbard, the postoffice department's official Chicago Santa Claus.

"Why, they wouldn't let me sleep all day," said Mr. Fitzgerald. "You know, I have been working until past midnight every night since this Christmas spirit started to fill the air, and I was tired out. I thought I would get some sleep today, but not a chance.

"I have had about thirty calls from Good Fellows today. They exhausted my supply of names. Some of them came back the second time.

Some Last Minute Cheer.

"One man—his name is Aldrich—called me on the telephone and said he had read of my job and my telephone number in THE TRIBUNE as he was eating breakfast. He said he wished to take care of some kids, and I gave him an address. In an hour and a half he was back asking for another address. Said he couldn't buy many toys, but had purchased candy and fruit and left the kids a check. It certainly made him happy."

A 6 o'clock last night Mr. Aldrich called Mr. Fitzgerald for the fifth time and asked that he be given more addresses.

"Gee, this is real fun," he said. "I haven't had such a good time since I was a boy. I have taken care of four families and I want a lot more. Please——"

Mr. Fitzgerald gave him the names of several families and Mr. Aldrich continued his Good Fellow work.

That's the way it affects the Good Fellows. There never was a happier crowd of men and women in the world than the Good Fellows after they had finished with their work yesterday.

GOOD FELLOW DIVIDENDS OF JOY

You can see by their faces that this family hardly expected a gloriously decked Christmas tree this year. But here it is, as big as life, thanks to one of The Tribune Good Fellows—and his reward is the wistful joy to be read in the faces of those to whom he ex ended the helping hand. As one of the Good Fellows said: "The smile of a happy kid at Christmas time is worth a million."

Heaven never was nearer than this! Four kids show just how happy Good Fellow Christmas cheer can—and does—make their kind. Left to right—Tony Canaha, Signa Gisselberg, a great Good Fellow; Virginia, Laura, and Frances Canaha, and Martha Gisselberg, another great Good Fellow. So you see the picture shows the Good Fellow's joys as well as those of the beneficiaries.

BERLIN, Dec. 25.—President Ebert has issued a proclamation of appreciation for the sympathy shown for needy Germans by foreigners and has especially thanked the Quakers and other American organizations which have been feeding the children and hungry students.

Ft. Sheridan Women Clerks Must Live Outside Post

On Monday all women clerks in the offices at Fort Sheridan will have to leave the post. They will still be employed there, but will have to make their residence elsewhere. The order was issued by Maj. Gen. Leonard Wood, commander of the central division.

PRESIDENT HAS QUIET CHRISTMAS

The absence of his two married daughters, Mrs. McAdoo and Mrs. Sayre, with the president's grandchildren, has eliminated occasion for a Christmas tree with its accompanying excitement, which it was thought might prove detrimental to the continued recovery of the president's health.

Neither the president nor Mrs. Wilson attended church. This afternoon they took their customary auto drive. Miss Margaret Wilson and Dr. Stockton Axton, the brother of the president's first wife, who has been living at the White House, were the only guests of the day. Some of Mrs. Wilson's relatives in Washington made brief calls at the White House.

Auto Crashes Into Pole; Racine Man Loses Life

Veteran Railroad Man Resigns as Vice President

Hiram McCullough of Lake Forest has resigned as vice president in charge of traffic of the Chicago and Northwestern railroad, effective Jan. 1. Mr. McCullough is a veteran railroad man. He came to Chicago in 1876 as a traveling auditor for the Illinois Central. He has been with the Northwestern for forty years and a vice president since 1898. His successor is Alexander Johnson, now general traffic manager of the road.

9,000 POOR KIDS CALL BLESSINGS ON GOOD FELLOWS

Wounded Heroes Also Have Greatest Yule.

BY REV. G. A. M'WHORTER.

Yesterday was Good Fellows' day all over the city, and its outskirts. Wherever the Good Fellows were needed they went and wherever they went they left smiles and good cheer where none were before. Nine thousand little children were made happy by the visits of the two thousand and more Good Fellows who came to THE TRIBUNE for the names of families they might aid this Christmas.

Great Day for Heroes.

The wounded ex-service men had perhaps the finest of all Chicago celebrations at the Marine, Drexel and other hospitals. There were Christmas trees in every ward, gifts of all kinds, cigars and candy, and the welcome envelopes that you Good Fellows filled with cash contributions for every wounded man.

Each envelope bore this inscription: "Merry Christmas! Generous readers of THE TRIBUNE, all Good Fellows, have provided a Christmas fund expressing in some small measure their debt to the wounded and invalid U. S. soldiers still in hospitals in and near Chicago. To you, as one of these men, to whom the country owes so much, the inclosed is sent as a small Christmas gift. It is believed that you will know better than we what to buy with it to make the holiday a little brighter."

Nurses Remembered, Too.

Good Fellows, it will interest you to know that in some of the hospitals we found several patient, self-sacrificing Red Cross nurses who had seen service "over-seas," and your Good Fellow editor took the liberty of remembering them with your mighty fine and thoughtful gift. We knew that you would not wish them to be forgotten in the Christmas celebration.

William Collier entertained an hundred wounded men and some of the nurses at the matinée of "The Hottentot" and John Garrity provided seats for fifty service men and nurses at "Cinderella on Broadway."

There was a constant stream of visitors at all service hospitals. None of them came empty handed and none went away with anything in his hands save the tingling sensation of the grateful handclasp of a wounded fighter.

Toyland Tree for Sick.

The huge tree which gave joy to thousands of children at the Toyland circus was conveyed to the county hospital yesterday in one of THE TRIBUNE trucks. It was donated by the Toyland management to whatever use THE TRIBUNE cared to make of it.

It was a great day, Good Fellows, and you made it a greater one, God bless you.

Santa Gets Arrested; Goes to Wrong Address

Visions of crime waves and burglars swept through Faust's mind and he peered out nervously.

"This is one on me," he said. "I must have made a mistake."

But Faust wasn't satisfied. So he called the police and a badly scared Santa declared his name was John Kirch and that he was visiting his friends in costume. After an investigation he was released.

She Caught Bride's Bouquet at Davenport Wedding; He Was Guest There; Now They're Engaged.

MISS MARY DAVIDSON WEIR.

FRANK WALDO LOGAN.
[Moffett Photo.]

WALDO HANCOCK LOGAN, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Granger Logan of 1150 Lake Shore drive, went to Davenport, Ia., last October to attend the wedding of Farley Hopkins and Margaret von Maur. After the ceremony the bride tossed her bouquet toward the attendants. It was caught by Miss Mary Davidson Weir, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Russell Weir of Davenport. Tradition has it that the girl who catches the bride's bouquet will soon be a bride herself. Tradition seems to have it right. Waldo Logan never had met Miss Weir before the Hopkins-Von Maur marriage, but yesterday his parents announced his engagement to the Iowa girl.

FALL DOWNSTAIRS KILLS MAN.

Gus Anderson was found lying in a hallway at 1245 Clybourn avenue Friday night, suffering from a factured skull. He was taken to Passavant hospital, where he died without recovering consciousness He fell downstairs, according to the verdict of a coroner's jury.

THIS CHRISTMAS $50 FOR POLITE MAN WAS EASY

But It's Worth It When Found in Rail Station.

"Jump off and walk back!" growled the conductor on the I. C. suburban train.

The politeness reporter's feet hit the right of way with a thump, and he pattered up the track to the Park Row station. A moment before the ticket seller had wakened him from an apparent snooze, discovered his ticket read to Twelfth street, and said—in a tone which implied the error had been a personal insult, "You've passed it."

So is it that the politness seeker met George McCowan, special agent for the railroad. After eating in the station restaurant the reporter had suddenly dashed up the stairs again in great perturbation.

He Meets a Lady.

"Have you seen a black grip around here?" he demanded of the cashier. His train was about to leave. He seemed almost frantic.

"No. Are you sure you had it up here?" she asked, coming from behind the cash register. Looking down into the large waiting room, she noted Mr. McCowan's derby hat.

"Now, I tell you what you do," the cashier went on. "Tell that man you have lost your grip and he'll help you find it."

The reporter did.

"Say, that's a shame," spoke Mr. McCowan, genuinely disturbed. He followed the politeness seeker to the spot where he had been sitting.

"I'm afraid some crook has got it," he mourned. "If you'd told me you were going upstairs to eat I'd have watched it for you. I tell you——"

He Follows His Cases.

The derby wearer went on to map out a campaign for recovering the mythical grip. Its absence seemed to hurt him more than it did the owner. So sympathetic was the railroad man that it was almost a pleasure to lose it.

The reporter started for the lost and found department.

"Where were you traveling to?" inquired Mr. McCowan, running after him.

"Rockford."

"Your train leaves at 2 o'clock. You've got an hour, and there's just a chance we'll be able to find it in time. I'm awfully sorry you lost it."

Mr. McCowan didn't have to do much to win THE TRIBUNE'S $50 courtesy prize. Just a bit of genuine, right-from-the-heart politeness—that was all.

Yellow Cabbie O. K., Too.

"I've been trying to treat people right for so many years, I guess it's part of me," he said later. "It's just as easy to be polite as otherwise, you know, and it's much more satisfactory, all around."

A general Yuletide cheer pervaded the old town yesterday. Discourtesy was hard to find. Even the doorman at the Madison street entrance of the Chicago Athletic association refused to be snobbish when the reporter broke through the portal and demanded:

"This is the Stratford hotel, isn't it?"

"No, sir. You'll find that three blocks south on Michigan avenue. You're very welcome," he added, when the politeness seeker thanked him.

Yellow Cabbie O.'K., too.

Yellow Cab driver No. 909 gave directions for reaching a certain address on the south side.

"Get off at Fifty-third street," he called after the reporter, "and then walk east."

The courtesy seeker crossed the river into the near north side. The chimes of St. James were ringing the notes of "Adeste Fideles."

"Say, what kind of a church is this?" he asked a woman.

"Episcopal," she smiled. "There will be services in a few minutes."

After several more conversations with the city's citizenry the reporter decided there was no such thing as discourtesy on Christmas. So he called it a day.

CITY FACES PAY RAISE DEMANDS OF $5,000,000

Police and Firemen Set Increase Ball Rolling.

BY OSCAR E. HEWITT.

The salary schedule requested by Chicago police patrolmen for 1921 as compared with what they have received in the last three years is shown in the following tabulation, together with the number in each grade at present:

Salary Schedule

Gd.	No.	1921.	1920.	1919.	1918.
1	3,157	$2,500	$2,000	$1,800	$1,500
2	148	2,260	1,760	1,560	1,320
3	217	2,140	1,640	1,440	1,200

Then the 354 police sergeants want their yearly stipend raised from $2,400 a year each to $2,900. Each of the 524 detective sergeants now receives $2,100 per annum. They ask the same pay as police sergeants, which means from $2,100 to $2,900.

If the sergeants get what they have asked, they will receive more than the lieutenants are now receiving. Eighty-four of the lieutenants get $2,700 a year, and two others $3,400 each. Still other raises will be necessary if the patrolmen's pay is adjusted upwards.

Firemen Want More Money.

City firemen are also out after more compensation: The number of them at present in each grade and the salaries they want as compared with what they have received for three previous years are shown as follows:

Salary Schedule

Gd.	No.	1921.	1920.	1919.	1918.
1	1,178	$2,500	$2,000	$1,800	$1,500
2	121	2,440	1,940	1,680	1,440
3	117	2,320	1,820	1,560	1,320
4	131	2,140	1,640	1,440	1,200

That just starts the ball rolling. The eighteen stokers are asking to have $500 more a year added to their $2,112 a year. The engineers, of whom there are 122 at present, desire that $500 be added to their yearly pay of $2,380. The 121 assistant engineers come forward next. They now receive $2,112, and they ask that they be given the pay of an engineer, regardless of what it is made. Then follow the lieutenants, numbering 194, who have asked that they be given the pay of captains. The lieutenants now receive $2,400 and the captains $2,700.

Raises May Total $5,000,000.

"Those raises, with others that will be necessary if a start is made, will add upwards of $5,000,000 a year to the expense of operating the city," commented Chairman Richert yesterday.

This proposed schedule surpasses anything in the country, so far as the finance committee has been able to find in three weeks of inquiry. The request of the New York police for $2,500 was turned down.

But there are two cities, New York and Detroit, which pay a higher maximum wage to policemen and firemen than Chicago now pays. The high water mark in New York for both is $2,280 and in Detroit $2,160. But in New York it takes much more time to get the maximum compensation than in Chicago.

Comparison with Other Cities.

New York's budget, which becomes effective next Sunday, contemplates a lower wage scale for 1921 than Chicago paid in 1920 in several lines other than police and fire service. It is reported that the Chicago police chief will recommend $2,500 for patrolmen in the budget which he will submit.

The administration can easily gain an aldermanic indorsement of that wage, if it so desires. That can be accomplished in both the finance committee and in the city council proper, but the wage figure of the administration has not been made public to date. However, some of its leaders have said that Chicago should not lag behind New York in paying wages, and especially for hazardous occupations, such as policemen and firemen.

LONDON PAPERS ARE ENJOYING A 3 DAY VACATION

[Chicago Tribune-New York Times Cable.]
[Copyright: 1920.]

LONDON, Dec. 25.—London today is newspaperless. By arrangement between the compositors and other unions of newspaper workers and the Association of Newspaper Proprietors, no journal is being published in England either today, tomorrow, or Monday, which is Boxing day and a bank holiday.

In Scotland newspapers suspended publication, this being the first time in the history of the Scotch press that the old established papers of the country have failed to come out on a week day. The Scotch papers will appear Monday morning, as Boxing day is not a bank holiday north of the Tweed.

London newspaper offices are entirely closed except for watchmen left at the doors to receive any messages that might be delivered. Agency tickers are silent and have been so all day, with the solitary exception when a message came from Paris to say that King George was expected to pay a visit to Verdun.

Sees America as Hope of Sunlight for Germans

FRANKFORT, Germany, Dec. 25.—Dr. Walter Simon, German foreign minister, in an article in the Frankfort Zeitung, says that in the night which covers Germany he sees only one ray of light and that "comes from the land of the stars and stripes." He expresses the belief that Senator Harding will "not delay the establishment of a peace basis between Germany and America" and thinks that this, more than anything else, would tend to revive the spirit and economic life of the nation.

TIRED DELEGATES TOOK KINDLY TO GENEVA'S CAFES

But Swiss Jazz Was Jazz in Name Only.

BY HENRY WALES.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

GENEVA, Dec. 25.—Regardless of any cold or critical attitude that the United States may maintain toward the league of nations, the hotel and restaurant keepers and proprietors of dance halls and other amusement places in Geneva spare no efforts to make the visiting delegates feel at home and also to have a good time. This was exemplified during the recent session of the league assembly.

Geneva's night life is confined to three places—the Tabarin, Maxims, and the Kursaal. An expert corps of head waiters is in service at each of the trio, and they spot every leaguer unerringly and plant him at a table where only champagne is served.

Fine Seats for Live Ones.

For in all these "joints" there are first and second class tables. Those right up at the edge of the dancing floor, where the weary orators and secretaries can watch the dancers at close range, have big, comfortable chairs, but only champagne is served there at 50, 60, and 75 Swiss francs per bottle.

Behind these tables, with dinky, uncomfortable little chairs, are places for the natives and the initiated, where Swiss wine and Rhine wine, and even lemonade for the lady members of the secretariat, are sold.

Jazz in Name Only.

All three places organized jazz bands during the recent influx from London and Paris, but the prestige of American jazz music suffers sadly from the music rendered by these organizations. They bang cymbals slowly with a mournful cadence and blow into oboes dismally, and one even scraped away at a homemade ukelele, but they fail to provide the proper syncopation for the shimmy experts.

Open until 1 in the morning, the trio of cabarets drew all the leaguers except those busy typing out the speeches of the day's orators and the secretaries busy shelving questions off the agenda.

Specialties and "acts" were put on about every fifteen minutes at the cabarets and as soon as each turn is finished short skirted girls with bobbed hair and high heeled satin slippers went around with plates and napkins folded on them, into which every guest was supposed to slip his contribution.

No Place for a Poor Man.

Small change can only buy newspapers in Geneva. By the time a first class barber gets through with a customer his bill looks like a war budget, with extras for a hot towel, for washing the lather off the customer's face, for combing his hair and eliminating the dandruff from his coat.

Manila Pauses, Bowed, at Riot Victims' Funeral

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

MANILA, Dec. 25.—All Manila stood silent one-half minute at 4 o'clock this afternoon. Pedestrian and vehicle traffic were suspended. The town was paying tribute to the eleven victims of the constabulary riot, who were buried today. The constabulary detachment band marched in the funeral procession.

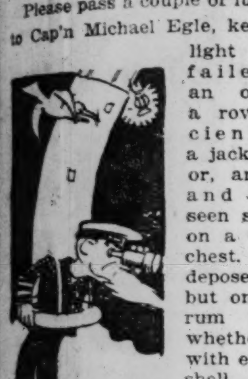
THIS SALTY TAR ROVES SEA ONLY WITH RAKISH EYE

Quit Bounding Main When Steam Doomed Sails.

Please pass a couple of lusty Yo Ho's to Cap'n Michael Egle, keeper of the light that never failed, who is an old seadog, a rover, an ancient mariner, a jack tar, a sailor, an old salt, and has never seen sixteen men on a dead man's chest. He further deposes that with but one bottle of rum he doubts whether a man with even tortoise shell pince nez could see sixteen men on a dead man's chest.



For fifty years Cap'n Egle has roved the bounding main of Lake Michigan with his eye, his coign of vantage being the teeming harbor of Michigan City. Somewhat like Moses, save that there are no bullrushes in Indiana, he was raised on the water, and still used it to bath in. He played marbles with Neptune and they also used to play hookey together from school, which, Cap'n Egle recalled yesterday, used to make the other fish pretty sore.

Steamships? Avast, Thar!

But the two distinguishing facts in Cap'n Egle's life, which our water front correspondent across the estuary gleaned exclusively yesterday, are: 1—Cap'n Egle lives on the lake and has never been on a steamship; 2—Cap'n Egle lives next door to Michigan and has never been in a flivver. His is the heart of the briny bedouins whose proud soles scorn aught but the deck of a windjammer.

"Them was the days, I reckon," our correspondent put it to him flatly yesterday.

"Aw, say, there, what's the matter with you? I ain't done nothing to warrant getting my name in the paper," remonstrated Cap'n Egle.

"But, Cap'n, you're going to retire and it is due the public to tell something of your career."

The Sail's the Thing.

"For he felt," our correspondent's story went on to read, "that a tale of the sea was waiting behind that grizzled brow that had weathered so many a Lake Michigan hurricane." But let him tell it:

"Well," slowly and modestly the old captain began, "I was born in the east of a seafaring family and took to the sailboats like a duck to water. I lived in one from the time I was knee high till I became leader of a crew that sailed the lakes. Those were the good old days, but soon the steamboats came on the lakes, and I had to give up the sailing boats; as they were too slow and cumbersome."

"Yes, yes, Captain," put in the questioner, "I suppose you at once bought a steamship and continued your sailing in it."

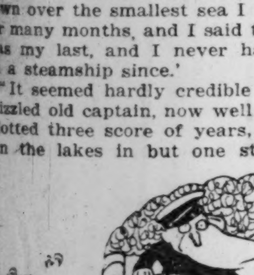
"No, sir," he answered, rather wistfully and with a long sigh. "Then was when I gave up my sailing business, and I never rode the lakes in a steamer."

Once Was Enough!

"'Do you mean that you never sailed across Lake Michigan in a steamship?'

"'I never was in one nor on one other than the time I came to Michigan City many years ago. Then the government forced me to ride in one. I rode then on an old tub that bumped up and down over the smallest sea I had seen for many months, and I said then that was my last, and I never have been on a steamship since.'

"It seemed hardly credible that the grizzled old captain, now well past the allotted three score of years, had ridden the lakes in but one steamship, but he declares that in thirty-four years of service in the government life saving station at Michigan City he has had but one ride.



"From a small log shanty in the middle '80s, accordng to old timers in Michigan City, Capt. Egle by constantly keeping at the government with letters of protest and pleading has built up one of the finest harbor entrances of the whole lake region for so small a port as that of Michigan City.

And Now Look at It.

"Now great breakwaters of heavy piling and immense stones grace the entrance and a magnificent lighthouse, the equal of which no other city on the lakes can boast, and a beautiful government house, surrounded by flowers of all kinds in the summer, make the harbor entrance at Michigan City a delight to the visitor, be he on a lake freighter or passing through via automobile.

"An deven in winter, when ice piles high above the lighthouse in the harbor and the wind whistles an eighty mile gale across the housetops, the old captain can be seen out in his slicker and boots, with his eyes scanning the horizon for some luckless fisherman who has dared the gale after the life station has legally closed for the winter.

"And about once every winter he tells the newspaper men a tale of how he picked up the remnants of some fisherman's boat and how he is still looking for he bodies."

THE OTHER FELLOW'S JOB

BRIDGETENDER SAMUEL ALLEN ON THE JOB.

DID you know that a city bridgetender has to be almost an electrician, almost a machinist, almost a policeman, almost a life saver, and almost a street sweeper, and must be able to recite a twenty-page book of rules by heart?

Samuel Allen will tell the world that aside from these duties he has nothing to do. Allen has been a bridgetender for fourteen years, during which he has had about fifty days off. Until four years ago he worked twelve hours a day. Since then he has worked only eight. He now presides over the levers at the west end of the Erie street bascule bridge.

He opens the bridge for the passage of boats on an average of fifteen times a day.

Aside from this duty, Allen must keep the bridge clean—the street sweepers do not clean bridges—clean and oil two motors and other parts of the bridge mechanism, watch for and arrest violators of the traffic rules and, if a fire engine and a boat reach the bridge at the same time, he must rush out on the bridge with a flag or red lantern and stop the boat to give the fire department the right of way.

He also must man a scow and go to the assistance of anyone who falls or leaps into the river. Allen has saved three persons from drowning and pulled thirteen bodies out of the water during his fourteen year's experience. In that time, he figures, he has watched more than 75,000 vessels sail by.

POLISH 'OTHELLO' VAMPED HEIRESS, ATTORNEY SAYS

Mrs. De Korwin Charges Money Motive in Suit.

Still question'd me the story of my life
From year to year, the battles, sieges, fortunes,
That I have pass'd.
I ran it through, even from boyish days——

She loved me for the dangers that I had passed,
And I loved her that she did pity them.
—Othello.

Mrs. Cecile Young Heyworth de Korwin, Desdemonalike, was vamped by a Polish Othello's story of his own prowess, according to her attorney, A. S. Trude. Now she is tired of the tale and——

This is a terse résumé of the beginning and the ending of the international romance that now has its sequel in a sensational court fight on before Judge McKinley over the custody of 8 year old Stanislaus de Korwin. The lad's father, Baron Joseph de Korwin, noted aeronautical expert, is attempting to obtain possession of the boy on a writ of habeas corpus.

Mrs. de Korwin, Chicago heiress of the $25,000,000 estate of the late Otto Young, pioneer merchant prince, is fighting to keep the boy who never saw his father until Friday.

Seeks Missing Papers.

She was engaged in a search yesterday for certain missing papers which Attorney Trude believes will substantiate her claim that the baron is waging the court battle solely for money.

"The baron is only seeking money," Mrs. de Korwin said. "He's not concerned about the future of Stanislaus any more now than he was about my happiness when we were married."

At the same time the baron's counsel, Edward B. Mayer, announced that the Polish noble is impatiently waiting for the resumption of Judge McKinley's hearing on Thursday of testimony in the habeas corpus proceedings.

"The baron is making no attempt to see his son," Attorney Mayer said. "He is willing to abide the court's action."

Baron Greedy, Says Attorney.

"This whole affair from the wedding to the present court fight has been featured by the baron's greed for his wife's millions," Attorney Trdude declared.

"Mrs. de Korwin never had a honeymoon. It was a financial eclipse, with the moon hidden by the baron's outstretched hand. When she got through paying off his morganatic wives she began providing for the alleged noble's living expenses. Her duties as a wife have been transcended in importance by her responsibility as a paymaster."

The baron's story of his six years' search for his son aroused ironical reply from Attorney Trude. "Mrs. de Korwin has never attempted to hide from any one," he said. "If the baron had really desired to visit the lad, born in Vienna, but reared in America, he could easily have done so by writing to his wife."

Details of the Romance.

Details of the international romance that culminated in the marriage of the Chicago heiress and the member of the Polish nobility were told by Attorney Trude.

"Mrs. Heyworth, the divorced wife of Lawrence Heyworth, a millionaire," said Mr. Trude, "was enamored by the baron's recital of valorous deeds in which he played the leading rôle. She was thrilled by his story of noble life and deceived by his enumeration of the long list of foreign rulers to whom he was supposedly related.

"Disillusionment was not long in coming," Mrs. de Korwin said yesterday. "These foreign noblemen are handsome. They have romantic eyes and make love beautifully, but, O, they're not like the American man. He is the one to marry if one would be happy."

BEG YOUR PARDON

A photograph of the Washington home of Congressman Fuller of Massachusetts appears in today's rotogravure section, with the intimation that it may become President Wilson's permanent residence. Since the picture was prepared for publication the plan to purchase the Fuller home has been abandoned and another house—one formerly owned by Henry P. Fairbanks—has been bought by the president.

University Professors Will Convene Tomorrow

AGENTS OF UNION TURN TO SANTAS AS CHILD WEEPS

Bring Glad Yule Where None Was Before.

Church bells were chiming the glad tidings that have kindled the hearts of men since that day when the three wise men of the east sighted the Star of Bethlehem. Mike Kelly heard them not. He was immured in meditation.

Mr. Kelly, who is secretary-treasurer of the Chicago Retail Butchers' union, was pondering the question of supply and demand of meat cutters; also the matter of monthly dues of union members, now payable at his office, the Federation building, 166 West Washington street, where he was.

Sitting opposite Mr. Kelly, and like him pensively puffing big, black Havanas were three square-shouldered, box-chested gentlemen who seemed, like Mr. Micawber, to be waiting for something to turn up. They were, and are his business agents—Paddy Nolan, Lefty O'Brien, and Jack Fleck.

Crossed Wires and Tears.

"Guess there won't be anything stirring after all," observed Mr. O'Brien.

"We'd better wait," said Mr. Fleck, gazing absent mindedly at Mr. Nolan, who had turned to answer a telephone ring. Mr. Nolan placed his fist over the transmitter and laughed uproariously.

"These central girls must be so busy rasslin' with turkey today they can't tend to the buzz boxes. They cut me in on a conversation—what? Hello! No, I ain't San—— Yes, this is Santa Claus' office. What is it? That so? Well, all right—sure; don't worry."

Mr. Nolan hung up the receiver.

"Funny," he observed. "Uh. Say, you guys, I just butted in on a line and some little girl was cryin' and tryin' to get Santa Claus. So I stall, and she tells me her old dad is out at the Little Sisters of the Poor and would I take him a turkey. It seems the Little Sisters were overlooked in the excitement and didn't get any turkeys this year."

Four Deputy Santas.

A profound silence, in which vast volumes of smoke spiraled upward from four cigars, was ended by Mr. Kelly, who apparently was talking to a window that looked out over the snow-mantled loop.

"A taxicab would be the berries, I reckon. Yes. That place is at Harrison and Throop streets. About 150 old timers. Let's see; half a bird to a man; that's seventy-five turks. Well, you guys, what's the hurry?"

No word passed from Paddy to Lefty to Jack. But they arose as one man, donned their overcoats and passed out. Down in the street the three business agents hailed a taxicab. They went—well, they went. They returned. In the interior of the cab, and on the driver's seat, and parked along the running boards were seventy-five turkeys, several boxes of cigars and three Christmas trees.

And after they had arrived at their destination and all the good things had been delivered, each of the three men hurried back to the cab and each returned to the waiting sister with a bundle.

"A little trimming for the tree," each explained.

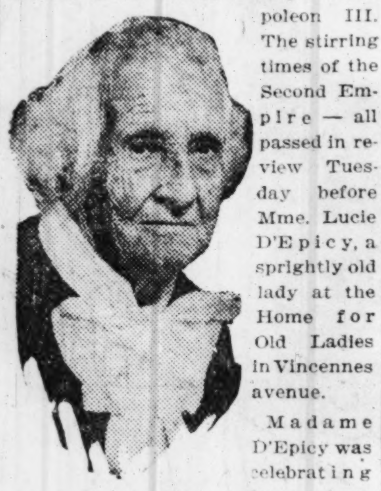
They were gone before she could undo the parcels, or thank them.

But as the church bells chimed last night there gleamed from the top of each of the three Christmas trees at the Little Sisters of the Poor—a Star of Bethlehem.

AN OPERA MASCOT'S YULE

Even the grand opera mascot, a tiny Chinese sleeve dog, shared in the opera stars' Christmas festivities, at which numberless gifts were distributed. The picture shows Rita Schipa (at left) and Rosina Strochi offering a Christmas "cracker" to the mascot. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

100 YEARS! WOMAN LIVES OVER AGAIN A LIFE'S PAGEANT



MME. LUCIE D'EPICY.

Napoleon. The French revolution of 1830. Louis Philippe. Emperor Napoleon III. The stirring times of the Second Empire — all passed in review Tuesday before Mme. Lucie D'Epicy, a sprightly old lady at the Home for Old Ladies in Vincennes avenue.

Madame D'Epicy was celebrating her one hundredth birthday. Born two years before Napolean died at St. Helena, she came to America in the early '70s with her husband, who had purchased great land tracts in the south. Failing fortunes left madame to the mercy of charity and she has lived at the home for many years.

CHRISTMAS MAIL FALLS OFF, LIST AT P. O. SHOWS

Postal officials yesterday announced that although this year's volume of mail was less than last year, more than 11,000 tons of letters and packages passed through the postoffice during the eleven days before Christmas.

Falling off in mail order business and the general business situation were named as the principal reasons for the shortage this year.

In one department, however, that of first class mail, every preceding record was broken. More letters were sent than in any previous Christmas.

Ellis Island Packed, with Other Thousands on Ships

New York, Dec. 25.—Christmas found Ellis island packed, with an overflow of 12,000 held aboard ships, while still other liners are nearing port loaded to the gunwales with aliens. This has caused an overwhelming congestion, demanding emergency measures, which were discussed at a conference here today between Rowland B. Mahany, representing the secretary of labor, and Frederick A. Wallis, immigration commissioner here.

W. Va. Military Regime Lifted for Christmas Tree

Williamson, W. Va., Dec. 25.—The first public assembly since the district was placed under military control on Nov. 29 was permitted by the military tonight about the community Christmas tree. Soldiers on strike duty, mountaineers and residents gathered about the tree erected in the courthouse yard and sang Christmas songs.

HYDE PARK CLASS OF 1915 MEETS AGAIN; 5 ABSENT

Thursday old friends renewed their acquaintance at the Chicago Beach hotel when the 1915 English class of Hyde Park High school, taught by L. M. Sears, had their reunion. Of the class of thirty-five only five were missing. After dinner Mr. Sears called the roll from his old roll book. After he had called the names of all those present he called the name of the first absentee, Miss Ruth Woollen, who is in California. Immediately a messenger boy burst in with a telegram from her sending greetings. As each absentee's name was called a similar telegram came in. Mr. Sears, now a professor at Purdue university, was honorary chairman. The party was in charge of Ralph Epstein, Miss Alice Roberts, and Sidney Frisch. The reunion grew out of an assignment given in the class five years ago to write themes on an imaginary reunion.

Civil War Hero, 78, Joins Memory Class at School

New York, Dec. 25.—[Special.]—Maj. C. Thurston Greene, 78, who won his rank and lost a leg in the civil war, is believed to be the oldest student in the country. Maj. Greene, who cannot remember recent events so well, is trying to rebuild his memory at the Bronx Y. M. C. A. evening school. As a former service man, the major received a scholarship in memory training when he applied. He wanted to go into active service when the Spanish-American war came, but they put him to training the recruits. Later he was a professor of military strategy at Fordham university, then known as St. John's college. Maj. Greene has twelve children, all of them living.

PUPILS TO PLAY "CINDERELLA" ON GRADUATION DAY

The Shakespeare school has announced that members of the eighth year class will give the play "Cinderella" on graduation night in January. The cast is headed by Allene Darnaby, who will play Cinderella. The Beautiful Prince will be Sharon Johntry. Other headliners will be Ruth Beyer, Elbyl Sherman, Irma Selz, Margaret and Elizabeth Sheffield and Eleanor Martin. The play will be coached under the direction of the eighth grade teacher, Miss M. Fahy.

ALL CHURCHES HOLD SERVICES ON CHRISTMAS

Special Musical Pogram Feature in Many Cases.

BY REV. G. A. McWHORTER.

The celebration of the great Christian festival of the Holy Nativity commonly called Christmas was begun with the singing of carols and the "midnight mass" on Christmas eve in many Episcopal churches, and early masses in all Roman Catholic churches. Both were followed by high celebrations late Christmas morning. In all Protestant churches there were special musical services and sermons by the pastors during the morning.

Churches Hold Midnight Mass.

Among the Episcopal churches having the "midnight mass," a celebration of the prayer book service of the holy communion with appropriate music held on Christmas eve at midnight were: St. Luke's, Evanston (the Rev. Dr. Stewart); Grace church, Oak Park (the Rev. Dr. Godolphin); St. Chrysostom's (the Rev. Dr. Hutton); St. Paul's (the Rev. Dr. Thomas); St. Peter's (the Rev. Dr. Mercer); All Saints' (the Rev. Dr. Rowley); Church of the Atonement (the Rev. F. S. Fleming); St. Simon's (the Rev. J. B. Haslam); St. Paul-by-the-Lake (the Rev. H. N. Hyde); Church of the Redeemer (the Rev. J. Hopkins); St. Mark's (the Rev. J. J. Van Zandt); St. Ann's (the Rev. M. Baxter); Church of the Advent (the Rev. G. G. Moore), and the Church of the Holy Nativity (the Rev. M. Cstone).

Quaint Service in Swedish Churches.

"Julotta" a quaint religious service centuries old, was observed in the Swedish churches of Chicago in the morning. A feature of it was the singing of "Var Halsad Skona Morgonstund," a psalm of greeting to Christmas morn.

Archbishop Says Mass.

Archbishop George W. Mundelein was the celebrant at the solemn pontifical high mass at the Holy Name cathedral, the sermon being preached by the Rev. Patrick Phillips, S. J. Low masses were said at every hour from 5 to 10 o'clock a. m., the Rt. Rev. Mgr. M. J. Fitzmorris being the celebrant at the 4 o'clock high mass, and the Rev. James O'Brien the preacher.

The sermon at high mass in Holy Angels' church was preached by Bishop McGavick. At St. Vincent de Paul's the Rev. P. F. Lavin preached at 5 a. m. and the Rev. J. H. Murry at 11 a. m. The Rt. Rev. Mgr. Edward A. Kelly was the celebrant and preacher at the high masses in St. Anne's. At Holy Family church the pastor, the Rev. Charles F. Wolking, S. J., preached at the high mass. At Our Lady of Sorrows the assistant pastor, Father Mulhern, preached at 11, and at St. Sabina's the Rev. Father Egan preached at high mass.

SOUTH SIDE GIRL TELLS CHRISTMAS FRIENDS SHE'LL WED

MISS INEZ BOYCE.

The engagement of Miss Inez Mae Boyce, 5845 Drexel avenue, to Orville D. Miller, 4564 Oakenwald avenue, was announced last night at a dinner dance given for the couple at Chicago Beach hotel. Miss Boyce is an instructor in the department of home economics at Chicago university and head of Drexel house. She is a graduate of the University of Wisconsin, 1916, and a member of Alpha Chi Omega sorority. Mr. Miller is an alumnus of the University of Chicago, class of 1915, and a member of Beta Theta Pi fraternity. He is now assistant manager of the Dale Machinery company.

30 ODD PACKAGES MYSTIFY OFFICIAL AT POSTOFFICE

The federal building has a new mystery. Charles Nagl, custodian, brought it to the attention of Albert E. Germer, acting chief postal inspector, yesterday following the receipt of the thirtieth package from a mysterious Uncle Sam.

"I don't know what to make of it," said Mr. Nagl. "Every two or three days for the last three months I have received a mysterious package. All are signed with the name Uncle Sam. When I opened the one received today there was nothing but a large crust of dry bread spread one inch thick with butter."

"Here's something for the needy government employés," was written on a card placed in the box.

Postal authorities think it is the work of a crank. Whoever he is, the sender has wasted several dollars in postage stamps.

DIES AT MIDNIGHT MASS.

Clinton, Ia., Dec. 25.—When the congregation at midnight mass in St. Irenaeus' church arose to leave, William Curran, an aged parishioner, was found dead, still kneeling in prayer.

HUNT 'FIELD MEN' OF $1,000,000 BOGUS BILL BAND

Trap for Counterfeiters Is Set in Dozen Cities.

Federal and police authorities of a dozen cities throughout the middle west continued their search yesterday for fugitive members of the band of counterfeiters who had planned to put $1,000,000 in spurious federal reserve notes in circulation. Two of the gang were arrested Thursday in Chicago on federal warrants.

Hunt "Field Agents."

After $20,000 in bogus notes had been seized here, Capt. Thomas I. Porter of the federal secret service notified officials at Detroit and a raid there resulted in the seizure of $500,000 counterfeit money.

Officials believe confederates of the band have been sent to other cities with quantities of the currency in an effort to distribute it. Complete apparatus for the wholesale manufacture of fraudulent money was found.

In both cities the counterfeiters lived in exclusive residence districts where suspicion was least likely to fall. George F. Choate and T. B. Tyler, the men arrested here, had the counterfeit money in a room at 930 Edgecomb place.

The operations of the gang had been watched by Detroit officials, operatives there said. The operatives had no knowledge, however, that an attempt had been made to put the spurious bank notes on the market.

Calls Coiners' Work Poor.

"The counterfeiters might have been able to distribute a large amount of the fake money if it had been of better workmanship," said Capt. Porter, "but I doubt if many of the notes as made could have been passed successfully."

Dr. Carter Again Asked to Save Poison Victim

Dr. Thomas A. Carter, who saved the lives of the little Luikart girls, was asked by telegraph yesterday if he would treat 18 year old Alva Sauve of Detroit, who swallowed bichloride of mercury by mistake for quinine. It was learned last night, however, that she was too ill to be moved to Chicago, and that Dr. Carter could not arrive in Detroit in time to save her.

Dato Believed to Have Carried Spanish Elections

MADRID, Dec. 25.—Definite results of the recent elections will not be known until tomorrow, but members of the cabinet declare Premier Dato will have at least 205 supporters in the lower house, which would give him a bare majority. The house contains 409 members.

WHO'S THEIR GRANDMA?

Hunts Lost Kin

Romance, with a story of intrigue, love, mystery, and sorrow, came to THE TRIBUNE yesterday in the person of a woman who seeks to find the mother she has never known.

The woman, only 24 years old, is the mother of three children, the wife of a wealthy business man of Chicago. She has a home in a fashionable residential district. Her married name she asks be withheld. Her husband is aiding her in her quest. She asks that she be known only as Irma Bittner, her name for eighteen years.

In 1896 she was born outside the pale. There is reason to believe her parents were and perhaps now are of the elite of the city. Born in the establishment of Mrs. Mary Zara, then at 361 Washington boulevard, she was taken to the home of Mr. and Mrs. Carl Bittner, who resided on Orchard street.

Every month a check in three figures was sent for the maintenance of the child. In 1898, Mrs. Marie Bittner, the foster-parent, died. The care of the infant was taken up by Mr. Bittner and his mother-in-law, Mrs. Catherine Reb. At 14 she was sent to a business college and then obtained a position as a stenographer. At 18 years, she met her husband. Mrs. Reb on her death bed told the girl of her parentage, refusing to name her mother or father. "Never try to find them," Mrs. Reb said. "They are of the aristocracy of the city, and they would never recognize you."

The young girl told her fiancé, expecting him to break the engagement. Instead he placed his resources at her command that she might hunt for her mother.

Mrs. Zara, unlicensed midwife, became involved with the police and went to Milwaukee years ago. The list of those who left infants in her care from June 28 to the middle of July, 1896, approximate dates of the girl's birth, was destroyed, but seven names have survived. They are Cramer, Ford, Kelley, Potter, Hitzel, Townes and Geiger.

SEIZE GARMENT UNION AID WITH ANOTHER'S WIFE

Coleman Skulman, secretary and treasurer of the Ladies' Garment Workers' union, 1815 West Division street, was sitting down to his Christmas dinner in his apartment at 1638 Humboldt boulevard yesterday with a "Mrs. Schwartz" as his guest when two detectives from the Shakespeare avenue station entered.

"Merry Christmas!" cried the sleuths. "Here's a present—a warrant for the arrest of Coleman Skulman and Mrs. Clara Passmore of New York."

"Mrs. Schwartz" paled as Skulman explained Mrs. Passmore was not present. Later "Mrs. Schwartz" admitted her identity. Her husband came to Chicago a few days ago, located her and obtained the warrants. Both Skulman and Mrs. Passmore were released on bonds.

'SCANDALS' STAR DANCER GIVEN DIVORCE HERE

Sascha Beaumont Freed by Chicago Judge.

If theater-goers who attended George White's "Scandals of 1920" during the last week of its engagement here noted an extraordinary exuberance displayed in the dancing of little Miss Sascha Beaumont, they'll be interested, perhaps, to learn the reason why.

The explanation may be found in a certain file of papers now locked up in Judge Rush's court room. The papers reveal a little bit of private scandal.

The papers are the official records of the divorce suit which the "Scandals" star filed through Attorney R. H. Grunewald during her sojourn in Chicago. The most important one—at least to the pretty dancer—is the decree signed by the jurist signifying that she is no longer Mrs. Reginald Schonemann.

And the reason for the exuberance mentioned above was the fact that before she left the city the actress—her stage name is Sascha Beaumont—was assured that the divorce suit would terminate successfully.

For Reginald—he's an actor, too—didn't even attempt to contest the suit. Maybe it was because his wife made no attempt to gain alimony. She said she was able to support herself.

The charge on which the decree was granted was desertion. Miss Beaumont claimed her theatrical spouse had failed to play the part of a loving husband and had left her in 1918 to "face the world alone." Her testimony convinced the judge and the decree was signed forthwith.

SCIENTISTS OPEN BIG CONVENTION HERE TOMORROW

Leading Men of Nation's Colleges Will Speak.

With the opening tomorrow of the seventy-third annual meeting of the American Association for the Advancement of Science, Chicago will be host to what is said will be the largest gathering of those interested in science ever held in America. The meetings will be held at the Reynolds club, Fifty-seventh street and University avenue. There will also be three special meetings at Mandel hall at the University of Chicago.

In addition to the regular meeting, thirty-seven affiliated organizations will hold short sessions during the week in conjunction with the main body, in which there are 13,000 members.

Among the featured addresses will be those of Dr. Robert W. Wood, professor of physics at Johns Hopkins, who will lecture on "High Power Phosphorescence and Fluorescence," explaining recent discoveries concerning light; Dr. Robert E. Griggs of the Ohio State, who will tell of his personal studies of the volcanic regions of Katmai, Alaska, the seat of recent seismic upheavals, and Dr. L. O. Howard, chief of the bureau of entomology of the department of agriculture, who will preside.

The meetings have been held every four years, Chicago having been the meeting place in 1868 and in 1907.

"Business as Usual"

Our GREAT READJUSTMENT SALE is enabling us to do BUSINESS. We find that the people (consumers) are anxious that business continue and are willing to buy if prices are made attractive and commensurate with the time.

If this is a secret, we cheerfully pass it on to all competitors, and others in industry.

If manufacturers have goods in our line to sell at low prices, telephone or telegraph us. We will investigate. We shall pass them on to our customers at attractive prices, equal to the values in our present readjustment sale.

Let "BUSINESS AS USUAL" be the slogan. The thought of "quitting" that many have is thought-less—a serious error, on any basis of practical calculation—an injury to themselves and to all.

Alexander H. Revell & Co.

4 NEW TYPES OF WAR CRAFT BEING BUILT FOR NAVY

Battle and Scout Cruisers, Plane Ships, Divers.

Washington, D. C., Dec. 25.—Among the 140 vessels under construction for the navy are four types new to the American battle fleet, but long in use by other maritime powers. They are the battle cruiser, of which six are being built, the scout or light cruiser, the airplane carrier and the fleet submarine.

The battle cruisers will be of great speed, light armor, long cruising radius and strong offensive armament, the ships being designed primarily for ranging work ahead of the main body and for action at long range against vessels of their own class. They are to have a speed of slightly more than thirty-three knots [about forty miles] and will carry eight sixteen-inch guns mounted two in a turret.

Fast Light Cruisers.

The ten light cruisers also will function as scout cruisers. They will have a speed of 33.7 knots and will carry an exceptionally heavy armament for vessels of their class, mounting twelve six-inch guns. They are designed to develop 90,000 horsepower, half that of the battle cruisers.

One of the most interesting of the new types is the aircraft carrier Langley, formerly the collier Jupiter. This vessel is being built along the line of the general board's policy that aircraft carriers should be combatant vessels whose speed and other characteristics will permit of their use with the fleet at sea.

The Langley will carry in the neighborhood of fifteen planes of both the military and scouting types. The ship's flying deck will consist of a huge platform, fifty-six feet above the water line, extending from bow to stern, a distance of about 525 feet, and with an amidships width of sixty-five feet.

Throw Planes Into Air.

The planes will be housed below on the hangar deck when not in use, and will be carried to the flying deck in elevators. Catapults will be provided on the flying deck to project the planes into the air and give them the necessary momentum for a start.

Arresting devices will be rigged on the flying deck to permit of landing directly on the deck while the Langley is under way; while huge cranes will also be installed to pick planes out of the water.

The fleet submarines building number six. Six others authorized have not yet been contracted for. Their principal characteristics will be a long cruising radius, enabling them to accompany the fleets under practically all conditions, and new structural designs to make them as nearly as possible proof from depth charges. The submersibles will be over 300 feet long with a displacement of about 2,000 tons.

How Submarines Travel.

The propelling machinery for surface cruising will be two main Diesel engines aft. The other Diesels forward will drive electric generators which will provide current for the two main electric motors to propel the submarines when submerged. The estimated surface speed is twenty knots and the submerged speed is ten knots.

FIFTY YEARS AGO

"FIFTY years without a quarrel" is the way Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Z. Churchill of 1023 Erie stret, Oak Park, characterized their fifty years of married life recently when sixteen relatives helped them to celebrate their golden wedding anniversary. They were married in Glen Ellyn, Ill., and have resided in Oak Park for the last forty years. They have two daughters, Mrs. B. C Davison of Wilmette and Miss Florence Churchill. There are three grandchildren.

HOW AMERICANS ARE WORKING IN STARVING CHINA

Chicago Couple Direct Shantung Relief.

BY CHARLES DAILEY.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

[Copyright: 1920: By The Chicago Tribune.]

TEHCHOW, Shantung, China, Dec. 25.—Directors Francis and Emma Tucker, formerly of Rush and Northwestern medical colleges and each a science graduate at the University of Nebraska, are at the head of American Red Cross operations for famine relief in Shantung. They have been in China for nineteen years with a Congregational mission. They have a large hospital here besides directing their mission, but all workers, including volunteers from farther south, now are concentrating on famine relief.

The principal source of relief will be the construction of a road from Tehchow to Lintsingchow via Enhsien, sixty-seven miles.

Capt. Lawrence Impey, wounded and gassed with the British army in France, is serving as field engineer for the road project, while K. O. Weeding of Rawlins, Wyo., is doing the surveying.

Americans on Job.

Paul McEachron of Waterloo, Ia., and a graduate of Grinnell, is chief commissary, with the Rev. T. F. Carter, who came from Anhwei province, as his assistant.

The Rev. W. W. Johnson, a Presbyterian missionary from Tsinangchow, a graduate of Lafayette and Princeton seminaries, is a volunteer recruiting labor. Others helping are A. D. Heininger of Adrian, Mich., who is also chairman of the famine relief committee, and the Rev. Charles E. Ewing of Janesville, Wis.

Virgil Bradfield of Omaha, the son of a Congregational minister living at Ashland, Wis., acts as accountant. Other volunteers are Master Sergeant Mott, Sergt. Higgins, with a detail of men from the 15th infantry, and Sergt. Matzen with a detail of marines.

How the Scheme Works.

The laborers are recruited in bunches of thirty from each village after a canvass has revealed the most deserving. They are housed in old temples or in camps along the route and are fed thrice daily a balanced ration totaling forty-one ounces a day. A similar quantity is accumulated during two weeks and on their two days off they take it home.

THE TRIBUNE correspondent spent three days around Chiucheng with Dr. Johnson and saw him recruit an average of 380 men daily.

Ti Tei Chang is a Catholic, owning a few acres and a house. He has torn down two rooms and is using the thatched roofs as fuel, living with his family in the two remaining. The sole food is sweet potato leaves mixed with ground elm bark, which is made into soup.

Liu Wen Pin has an acre of land and four in his family. His only food consists of turnip tops, locust pods, corncobs, and chaff. We went to house after house but found no grain anywhere.

Mothers Sell Children.

In visiting the villages one hears the same sad tales met with in Chihli. Even at the Tehchow station women are offering children for sale. They will sell a 5 year old child for 10 American cents, the price being 2 cents for each year of age.

Older girls bring slightly more, but $2 will buy a slave. Even young wives are sold for under $5.

Dr. Emma Tucker tells of many instances of brigandage coming to her notice through hospital work. A favorite method for extortion, she said, is to wrap the victim in a bed quilt soaked in kerosene, which is then set on fire. Under the slow burning cotton he is expected to tell anything to escape the torture.

The brigands sometimes cut the tendons of their victims. Women jump into wells to escape them and others are thrown in.

Ziegfeld Cleanses Play at Colonial

The management of the Colonial theater and of the Ziegfeld Follies inform THE TRIBUNE that one or two incidents in the performance of the revue, regarded by many as disorderly, have been omitted from the play. The changes were suggested by Harry J. Powers to Mr. Ziegfeld in New York over the telephone, and Mr. Ziegfeld acquiesced. The scene in which the questionable details occurred is retained in the performance by Miss Ray Dooley and W. C. Field, but the more unpleasant gestures, pantomime, and imitations will not be present hereafter, according to the management.

An Automobile Salesman Wanted

If you have had selling experience—if you are a real producer—here's an opportunity for you to associate yourself with the largest and best known distributor of motor cars in Chicago. Our line is complete—a model to satisfy every type of owner—and the range of prices is such as to eliminate competition.

To a man who has confidence in his ability to sell automobiles of the highest quality—whether he has had automobile experience or not—this will mean a chance that is rarely equaled.

BUDAPEST NEEDS COAL AND FOOD; YANKS RESPOND

Hungarian Capital Feels Grip of Famine.

BY JOHN STEELE.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Copyright: 1920: By The Chicago Tribune.]

LONDON, Dec. 25.—The headquarters of the American relief administration here has just received a long message from Budapest detailing the sufferings of the people in that city. The administration began feeding 50,000 Budapest children today, in conjunction with the International Red Cross.

Due to an epidemic of scarlet fever and the lack of fuel, the report says, all the Budapest schools have been closed since Oct. 15, and there is no prospect for their opening in the near future. Due to overcrowding, the hospitals are obliged to send away children and other patients before they are completely cured. There is an average of fifteen suicides daily in Budapest due to hunger and misery.

Need for Fuel Acute.

It is estimated that not 10 per cent of the population of Budapest are supplied with fuel. A great majority have not even fuel for cooking their scanty rations.

A serious consequence of the misery and hunger is the weakening of the moral fiber. Due to the great number of thefts, especially of food and fuel, the government has found it impossible to imprison all the culprits, and has restored the whipping penalty, which has been abandoned for over a century.

Many professors and students at the Universities of Kolozsvar and Pozsony, situated in territories lost to Hungary, the former ceded to Roumania and the latter to Czecho Slovakia, have refused to take the oath of allegiance to the new government and have left their homes.

These men have established universities in Budapest under the former names and are bravely carrying on in spite of the tremendous difficulties of finding equipment and even sufficient food.

Stage Scene Cut Short.

At a recent performance of Othello at the National theater in Budapest, the famous Hungarian tragedienne Emily Markup was playing Desdemona. The audience, waiting spellbound for the famous soliloquy was amazed to see the Moor proceed with the strangling without waiting for the delivery of the soliloquy.

Asked later why it was omitted the actor replied that when bending over Desdemona, preliminary to delivering the Moor's famous lines, she whispered to cut the action short or she would miss her last train.

The Moor complied with the request, knowing that it was serious to miss a train in Budapest, where due to the coal shortage, there were only a third of the prewar number to serve a population 50 per cent greater.

Even Animals Suffer.

Conditions in the Budapest zoo are pathetic. The animals are existing on limited rations and 80 per cent have died. The seals, depending on salt water fish for life, have all perished.

The American Relief Administration in Hungary has been forced to close its kitchens for feeding children due to lack of funds. Constant deputations of ragged children come to its office and inquire when the kitchens will be reopened.

Artist's Widow in Want.

Madame Lotz, 82 years of age, and the widow of the great painter, Charles Lotz, is living in the greatest poverty. She is trying to exist on a monthly pension of 380 crowns, equivalent to 70 cents in American money. She has been forced to sell all her valuables and most of her clothing.

Word has been received from Warsaw that the Polish diet has appropriated 200,000,000 marks as the Polish government's contribution to the fund for feeding the children of that nation. The American Relief Administration hopes to feed 1,200,000 children in Poland during the winter.

Mr. Poole Still Seems at Outs with Mr. Clyne

An old feud between District Attorney Charles F. Clyne and Russell J. Poole, secretary of the city council committee on living costs, flamed again yesterday when Mr. Poole was asked whether the fruits of his investigation of milk prices will be offered to Mr. Clyne.

"What! Take our evidence to that fellow and expect action?" he fired. "Never. We buried him long ago."

Mr. Poole indicated he would offer the data he is gathering on milk prices to State's Attorney Robert E. Crowe.

WHEAT GROWERS PLAN TO DICTATE 1921 CROP PRICE

Association Still Gaining Members.

Wichita, Kas., Dec. 25.—The Wheat Growers' Association of America expects to have the campaign to induce growers to withhold their wheat from the market so well organized within the next six months that the growers will be able to control the price paid for the 1921 wheat crop, according to W. H. McGreevy, secretary and treasurer.

The association now has a membership of approximately 100,000 in the states of Texas, Oklahoma, Kansas, and Nebraska, according to Mr. McGreevy, and it will be extended to Minnesota, North Dakota and South Dakota.

"The purpose of the association is to control the distribution and marketing of wheat through financial and selling agencies of its own selection at a price based upon cost, plus a fair and reasonable profit," said Secretary McGreevy.

Feel "Encouraged."

"Not only the wheat growers of our association, but wheat growers in general, are refusing to sell at present prices except in cases where financial conditions force the sale. With a large number of flour mills idle and the local and terminal elevators nearly empty, the wheat grower feels he has practically accomplished what seemed at first impossible, and is now encouraged to continue withholding from market in order that a price which is fair and just shall be paid him for his labor and money invested.

"Our growers are not 'striking' as is commonly meant by the term," he said. "We are still sowing and attending to the many arduous duties of the farm."

Started in Oklahoma.

The organization was formed about a year and a half ago in southern Kansas and northern Oklahoma. A Slaughter of Manchester, Okla., was the originator. Its growth the last few months has been rapid.

The four states now organized, in which a membership of 100,000 is claimed, have 220,806 wheat growers, according to Kansas statistics, and therefore 45 per cent of the growers are members of the association. The four states produced this year 232,955,000 bushels out of the total for the United States of 750,648,000 bushels.

The addition of Minnesota, North Dakota and South Dakota would bring the production up to 359,003,000 bushels, or slightly less than one-half that of the entire United States.

"VAMPED"

"BIG JIM" DONAHUE.

"BIG JIM" DONAHUE, the detective assigned to Mayor Thompson's office, nearly began to cash in on his politeness and his kindly Irish face when THE TRIBUNE awarded him its $50 politeness prize two weeks ago. Yes, you guessed it, it's a woman.

Here's her letter, written from Taylorville, Ill.: "Your writeup in THE TRIBUNE and your good face have caused me to get very fresh with you. Are you a married man? If so, I sure beg forgiveness. I'm just so lonely and you looked good to me. There is no one to help me enjoy the holidays. I have been a widow for five years. If it is not out of order, I would be pleased to receive a line from you."

The writer signs her name and gives an address.

"Big Jim" has just turned 60. He has had fourteen years of experience as a widower. He declares he is satisfied "as matters are," but cannot help feeling kindly toward the widow because of her good Irish name.

PENROSE PLANS WAR ON ACT TO ASSIST FARMERS

Tariff Bill a Boomerang, Senator Says.

Washington, D. C., Dec. 25.—[Special.]—Senator Penrose, chairman of the finance committee, has notified his colleagues here that he will return to Washington next week to confer regarding the emergency agricultural tariff bill which passed the house last week under the impetus of demands of the farmers for protection against falling prices.

Senator Penrose's sudden determination to come to Washington is regarded as a certain indication that he is opposed to this emergency tariff legislation, and it is regarded as certain he is leaving his recuperation quarters at Atlantic City to do what he can to prevent the passage of the Fordney bill by the senate.

Friends of Senator Penrose say that he is opposed to the Republican party entering upon what he terms "an emotional career" to remedy every little economic ill that develops in the radjustment period by emergency legislation. Mr. Penrose, it is said, is against any tariff legislation that does not take into consideration the actual difference between the cost of production at home and abroad. The emergency bill, in his opinion, is not a tariff bill, and because its duties are so high it will result in retaliation.

"Senator Penrose says that this is not a tariff bill, but an embargo masquerading under the name of high tariff," said one of his friends here today. "The duties are so high as to prevent imports. Senator Penrose believes that it will result in retaliation by other countries, and that the effect upon the home situation will be to depress prices beyond a normal reduction."

"Le Petit Bazaar" Opened to Raise Funds for Home

"Let Petit Bazaar," a new shop operated for the benefit of the Illinois Children's Home and Aid society, has been opened in the basement at 615 North Michigan boulevard. The shop has a French tea room, where luncheon and tea are served daily. To help the late Christmas shoppers, especially men, the shop will be open evenings until 9 o'clock before Christmas.

GRECIAN BRIDE GOES TO SCHOOL TO LEARN AMERICAN WIVES' WAY

MRS. THOMAS BLASE.

Niki Despotidis, Grecian beauty and daughter of Dr. George Despotidis, leading physician in Athens and Santoran, is going to learn how to be an American wife. She is the bride of Thomas Blase, who came to Chicago from Greece twelve years ago. He won her on a recent visit to his old home, where he went to see his parents.

When Blase returned to America with his bride he was surprised to learn that she was not a bit in favor of letting the marriage ceremony end the romance.

"Our new country is different from the old," she told him. "I must learn about the American wives because that is the kind of wife I want to be. You are an American now and I want to be one, too."

So Mrs. Blase went to a school after her arrival in Chicago and when she graduates she is going to demonstrate to her husband just how nice a real American wife can be.

TAX BODY RAPS FAVORITISM AND EXEMPT BONDS

New York, Dec. 25.—Privilege or favoritism in taxation is condemned in a report to the National Tax association by its special committee on taxation, which was made public here tonight, urging revision of the present tax exemption laws.

"It is axiomatic that taxation should be universal," said the report, "and that every person in the jurisdiction of the government should contribute to the support of that government in a proper proportion.

"The exemption of any individual or class in part or in whole is favoritism or privilege and as such is indefensible."

Declaring there is not the "least ground for exemption of interest on farm loan bonds, war finance bonds, and dividends of the federal reserve bank, the report recommends that the issuance of such tax free bonds be stopped.

ROCKEFELLER AID PROMISED FOR CZECHO-SLAVS

New York, Dec. 25.—The international health board of the Rockefeller operative program in public health, agreed upon with the government of Czecho-Slovakia.

This program provides:

Lending to the Czecho-Slovak government the services of an American competent in public health administration.

Fellowships for training a select group of young Czechs for service in the field of public health.

Expense of a Czechs commission to study public health administration in the United States and England.

Robbers Get Big Loot and Then Burn the Building

New York, Dec. 25.—Diamonds, Liberty bonds, and money, the value of which has not been determined, were taken from the safe of a wholesale clothing merchant in East Fourteenth street today. Entering an adjoining establishment, the robbers cut their way through an eighteen inch wall. In leaving they started a fire in the building through which they entered. Damage estimated at $75,000 was caused by the blaze.

CONVICTS ESCAPE DURING SERVICE.

Burlington, Ia., Dec. 25.—Stealing away from the chapel while Christmas services were going on in the Madison penitentiary, four convicts scaled the prison walls by means of ropes and escaped. Posses are searching in Iowa and Illinois for the men.

40 YEARS IN P. O., CHRISTMAS BRINGS HIM 40 FLOWERS

F. H. GALBRAITH.

Frank H. Galbraith, superintendent of mails and one of the experts on postoffice construction, was presented with a bouquet of forty American Beauty roses by fellow employés yesterday, one for each year he has been in the service.

"I came into the postal service through the front door," Mr. Galbraith said yesterday at the Federal building. "My father was a postmaster, and I started work under him. It was the proudest moment of my life when I received my first position, even though my first job was wielding a broom.

Supt. Galbraith was one of the members of the commission which planned the present postoffice at Washington, D. C. He was also engaged on the committees which arranged for the postal system at the Grand Central station at New York City.

Plans for the new mail system in Chicago which will be inaugurated when the new postal stations, now contemplated, are finished, are largely the work of Mr. Gilbraith.

Y. M. C. A. GUARDS YOUTH WHO SAYS HE WAS ROBBED

Efforts of Y. M. C. A. officials to establish communication with the parents of Edward Friberg, 19 year old blind youth, who lost his savings, $90, in his room in the Y. M. C. A. hotel, which he left unlocked a week ago last Friday, have proved unavailing. Friberg is being cared for by the Y. M. C. A. social service bureau.

He has received several donations of money since his plight became known.

As soon as the theft was reported, Friberg was turned over to the care of William E. Routson, social service secretary. Arrangements were made to pay his expenses.

Friberg wrote six letters to his parents in a suburb of Boston. No answer has been received. Friberg previously was employed as a teacher of the blind in New York.

'Campus Heroes' Make Best Rating in Intelligence Tests

The psychology department at the University of Chicago is trying to answer the charge that "campus activities" are not beneficial to young men in college. The announced results show that "campus heroes" passed the Thurston intelligence test with a higher rating than the average students. The leaders were picked by questionnaires sent out to the students. The twenty highest were given intelligence tests.

Effective September 23, 1920. Prices F. O. B. Syracuse

THE favorable position which the Franklin holds among motor cars is based on a wide appreciation of its value.

As a reflex of the buying spirit of the recent "easy days" comes a full consideration of the fundamentals of value—price and performance. One without the other means nothing.

As far as price is concerned, the Franklin position established September 23, 1920, speaks for itself.

Such comparisons invariably show how the characteristic principles of light weight, flexible construction and direct air cooling result in these outstanding Franklin advantages:

Ability to travel the longest distances in a day—

To cover rough roads comfortably and safely, without fear of tire troubles or breakage, without skidding—

To go where others can't, and when they can't, with no fear of overheating in summer, with no need of blankets, anti-freeze mixtures, or draining or refilling in winter—

To start easily or surely, and run steadily, regardless of temperature or altitude—

To avoid annoying delays on the road, and troublesome duties at the end, free from all sense of strain or worry—

All this throughout an unusually long car life, and with economy that is unequalled:

20 miles to the gallon of gasoline
12,500 miles to the set of tires
50% slower yearly depreciation

CONGRESS TO GET NEW BILL FIXING GERMAN CREDITS

Bonds of Berlin Government to Be Security.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., Dec. 25.—[Special.]—Introduction in congress of a revised bill authorizing a credit to the German government for the purchase of American products is awaiting action by President Wilson upon the resolution for the revival of the war finance corporation.

William Wallace Brauer, New York exporter, agent of the German government in negotiating a loan from the United States and in making purchases if it is granted, said today that in case of the veto of the war finance corporation resolution the new bill will provide for the appointment of a commission by the president. This commission would have authority to accept bonds of the German government as security for the credit and to sell debentures as a means of obtaining the money needed.

May Await New Administration.

In case of veto of the war finance corporation resolution, it is presumed that President Wilson also would veto any German credit measure, inasmuch as Secretary of the Treasury Houston is against both propositions. In that case the bill probably will not be passed until the new administration comes in.

If President Wilson signs the war finance corporation resolution, the German credit bill will provide that the matter shall be handled by that body.

The bill as originally drawn and as introduced in the house last spring by Representative Thomas F. Smith of New York has been changed by eliminating mention of the alien property held by the United States as part collateral. Mr. Brauer said that while congress could include the alien property if it chose, he considered that so many years would be required to straighten out the tangles involving the ownership of the property that it was useless to count upon its use as collateral.

He said the bill would provide as security the first lien upon all property in Germany, with the consent of the reparations commission, as provided in the peace treaty. Failure of the reparations commission to grant this priority would nullify the bill.

Both Houses to Get Measure.

It is the plan to introduce the revised bill simultaneously in both houses. The American Farm Bureau federation, which has indorsed the project, is expected to get a western senator and a western representative to present it.

Mr. Brauer spoke hopefully of the project, although a number of senators indicated at the joint hearing of the senate committees on banking and currency yesterday that they did not consider the German credit proposal feasible.

"I believe that it will go through ultimately in some form," said Mr. Brauer.

Expects Granting of Priority.

"There need be no delay in this matter, as feared by some. The German government already has taken up with the allied governments the question of granting the priority on the American credit over their claims. This priority will be granted without question as soon as congress takes action. It will not take more than ten days."

Mr. Brauer said he had been informed by the German government that the scheme of a group of New York bankers for the use of alien property held by the United States as the basis for the capital of an Edge law corporation did not have its sanction.

No steps will be taken by Mr. Brauer toward the formation of a shipping company, such as he has in mind, unless action is taken by congress. Mr. Brauer said if the credit is granted he will form a shipping company and endeavor to arrange to have fifty or more vessels of the shipping board allocated to it.

R. C. GANNON, LEADER IN CATHOLIC CIRCLES, DIES OF HEART DISEASE

RICHARD C. GANNON

Richard C. Gannon, resident of Chicago for more than half a century, former member of the board of education and a leading layman of the Catholic church, died Friday morning at 7:20 o'clock at the Presbyterian hospital of heart disease. Mr. Gannon was 78 years old last Sunday. He was born in Dublin, Ireland, Dec. 21, 1842, and came to Chicago in 1853. For more than thirty-five years he traveled for Franklin MacVeagh & Co.

He had been president of the central council of the St. Vincent De Paul society since 1888. He was vice president of the Illinois Commercial Men's association since 1911 and president of the Illinois Commercial Men's Health association since 1912.

Owing to his wife's ill-health, he recently gave up his residence at 123 South Throop street, and moved to Techny, Ill. A week ago he became ill and was removed to the Presbyterian hospital.

Besides his widow, Mrs. Mary A. Gannon, he is survived by two sons, Richard C. Gannon and Edward Gannon. The funeral will be held tomorrow from the home of a sister, Mrs. M. J. Kearins of 317 South Elmwood avenue, Oak Park.

EARLY HEARING URGED ON BILL TO SAVE FORESTS

Washington, D. C., Dec. 25.—[Special.]—Hearings on the Snell bill for a national forest policy, which includes better fire protection for the forest, should be planned for early in the new year, Charles Lathrop Pack, president of the American Forestry association, declared here today. The bill was introduced in the house by Bertrand H. Snell of New York district.

"This measure," said Mr. Pack, "is one of the most important pieces of legislation ever presented in congress. It has the backing of the newspaper publishers, the wood users, and every co-related industry and organization. The national forestry program committee, of which R. S. Kellogg of New York City is the chairman, is made up of representatives of organizations that are united in forest program outlined in the Snell bill.

"With the forest fire loss around $30,000,000 a year and the fact that we are using our forests about four times faster than we are reproducing them shows this is the time for action. We must put our idle land to work. Hearings on this Snell bill should be called at once."

Leaves $3,000,000 Estate; Limits Monument to $100

New York, Dec. 25.—[Special.]—The late Daniel Odell of Peekskill and wealthy stock broker of Manhattan, before his death provided that his resting place should be marked by no more pretentious monument than can be bought for less than $100. His will leaves most of the $3,000,000 estate to friends and members of his stock brokerage firm. The possibility of a contest of the will was raised when it was expressed that only the income from $12,500 was left to Mr. Odell's brother, John, of Pontiac, Mich.

Lloyd Will Take Duties of Bishop in New York

New York, Dec. 25.—[Special.]—Bishop Arthur S. Lloyd, until recently president of the Episcopal board of missions, probably will be acting bishop for the Episcopal diocese of New York through the next three months. In this event he will fill the appointments for confirmations and other Episcopal duties which were made by Bishop Charles S. Burch, who died suddenly last Monday.

HUTCHINSON—Herbert Hutchinson. In fond memory of our beloved son and brother, who died three years ago today, Dec. 26, 1917.

O, for a touch of your vanished hand,
And a sound of your voice that is still,
And a smile from that loving face of yours
That lies on Evergreen hill.
But some day, some time, our eyes shall see
The face we loved so well.
Some day, dear Herbert, our hands shall clasp yours,
And never say farewell.

WHERE THERE'S MANUFACTURING THERE'S MONEY

Universal Stamping & Mfg. Co.

A typical Chicago industry — an Illinois Corporation — offers 25,000 shares of its common participating and voting stock at $10.00 per share. No preferred stock, mortgage or bonds of any kind ahead of this issue. Normal Federal Income Tax paid at source. Free from Illinois State Tax.

Make something and sell it! That's the 20th Century idea of making money.

Since 1914 Universal has been making things — such as high grade tools, stampings, and hardware.

During the war it made special 37 millimeter gun mounts for sharpshooters' guns.

Today it has perfected and patented a marvelous phonograph motor. Not the ordinary alarm clock kind. But an improved model — smooth, silent, dustproof—that requires less winding.

Over 50,000 are under construction now for early 1921 delivery to one manufacturer. One of the biggest phonograph makers in the world is negotiating for Universal's entire output. Experts declare it superior to all others.

Average earnings the past 5 years have been 49% of invested capital. Increased capital from the sale of this stock will enable the company to take care of all business offered it that it is now compelled to refuse on account of limited capacity.

The regular quarterly dividend of 2½ per cent has been declared payable Feb. 1st.

The management remains the same as from its inception.

Universal has done highly satisfactory work for such great concerns as the Edison Electrical Appliance Co., the Automatic Electric Co., the Stewart Manufacturing Corp., and others.

Universal is equipped to manufacture any "quality" product — whether it be the most intricate technical device or a complete sewing machine or cash register.

SALAD DRESSING RECIPES
Reprinted by request of many of our patrons

Mayonnaise
Beat the yolks of two eggs; add small portion of olive oil beating it with fork; keep adding small portions of oil until it becomes thickened. Then add small portions lemon juice or vinegar. Season with paprika, pepper and salt. One cup of oil sufficient for four portions.

French Dressing
¼ teaspoon of salt, a dash of white pepper and paprika; add 6 tablespoons of olive oil and stir until thoroughly mixed and somewhat thickened. Add 2 tablespoons of vinegar. Mix thoroughly. If desired add a few drops of onion juice or rub mixing bowl with a slice of onion or garlic. French dressing separates quickly so make only the amount you wish to use.

Thousand Island
4 tablespoons of mayonnaise; 2 of whipped cream; one of vinegar; juice of half a lemon. Add hard boiled egg, one half of sweet pepper and a few chives or green onion tops all chopped fine and mixed well. Add an equal amount of Chili sauce.

Roquefort Cheese
Mash 4 ounces of roquefort cheese and add 4 portions of French dressing. Serve it immediately.

Or a great big juicy tenderloin steak with mushrooms, cooked before your eyes, for 75 cents? Or a half head lettuce with real Thousand Island dressing for 25 cents?

And these are not special prices quoted to get you to dine here. They are fair samples of all of our prices. And no matter what you pay you can't get better food.

Time and time again we have told you that you can't beat our food anywhere. Every day we are told that is true by people who dine here regularly. Those people know good food. They are dining here not only to save money. But they do object to paying fancy prices merely to have their food brought to them. So they dine here, serve themselves and save the difference.

If you will dine at the North American Restaurant regularly you will save not less than 50 per cent of what other first-class restaurants charge. Figure it out for yourself. Compare our prices with others. As a matter of fact the saving is much more than 50 per cent.

And when you are making your comparisons just remember you can't get better food no matter what you pay. If you are dining here regularly you know that.

Advantages in buying your piano NOW

MAGNIFICENT instruments of our own manufacture and player-pianos of the Aeolian Co. have been reduced to the lowest figures. Our action in readjusting costs preceded that of all other makers, and the public reaps the benefit. There is no need to wait longer to obtain a piano which will be the very last word in tone and action and a delight to the eye. You can buy here now at a figure not deemed possible a few short months ago.

Grand Pianos

There are seven makes shown side by side. You are privileged to test them all. Included are the Steinway, the Lyon & Healy Apartment Grand, and the Brambach Grand. The purchase of a Grand is usually the event of a lifetime, and we urge the wisdom of taking time for a complete and thorough investigation.

Player Pianos

There are nine makes, including, of course the unrivaled Steinway Pianola Piano, the Lyon & Healy, the Pianola Piano and others. Prices begin at $595. Our Players are built for people of musical taste, and while they are capable of striking effects in popular jazzical music, they are at their best when playing popular classics.

Upright Pianos

Fourteen styles are displayed here. There are charming little Steinways suitable for dainty rooms; and in Lyon & Healy Pianos alone there are three styles. We often hear visitors say they had no idea that there could be such a variety in Upright piano styles. Probably you will find several instruments here at the same price, one of which you would much prefer to the others.

WAR TO FINISH ON BASEBALL GAMBLERS

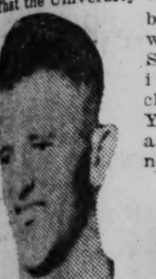
CALIFORNIA GRID CHAMPIONS SHOW POWER IN DRILL

Ohio Will Have to Meet Versatile Attack.

BY WALTER ECKERSALL.

[Copyright: 1920: By The Chicago Tribune.]

Pasadena, Cal., Dec. 25.—[Special.]—That the University of California football eleven, which will meet Ohio State in the big intersectional clash here on New Year's day, will be a worthy opponent for the western conference champion was shown today when the entire squad, under personal direction of Coach Andy Smith, took its first workout at Tournament park, where the contest will be decided.



QUARTER BACK ERB [California].

GUARD MAJORS [California].

TACKLE McMILLAN [California].

The players went about their work in a manner which augurs well for success. They handled the ball faultlessly, while their kicking and forward passing is the equal of Ohio State. The men showed they know their signals and plays in their fast, snappy signal drill, and the wind sprints revealed that some of the forwards are faster than the backs.

Has Versatile Attack.

The eleven is well versed in open tactics, while the straight attack consists of hard smashing plays on and off the tackles. Delayed bucks for use along the side lines and wide end running formations complete most of the straight plays.

All passes are direct from center to ball carrier, and the men got out in the interference in splendid fashion. At times the guards head the interference. Coach Smith always has been a strong advocate of running guards, and in Majors he has a reliable player in this department.

California's forward pass attack is very versatile. The short and long passes have been perfected to a high degree of efficiency with Erb, Toomey, and Sprott doing most of the passing, and Brick Miller as receiver. Berkey also is used to catch the tosses, while short lobs are made to either half back.

Muller Looks Like Star.

Brick Muller, the end, who is rated one of the best in the country, looks to be all that has been said of him. He is over 6 feet tall, weighs 186 pounds, and is fast for his size. It will be recalled that this player is a great high jumper. He won this event in the Pacific coast Olympic trials last summer with a leap of 6 feet 5 inches.

This ability to get high in the air has made him the best receiver of forward passes ever developed on the coast, according to competent football judges.

Muller's every action denotes thorough football knowledge. Besides his sterling offensive qualities, he is a great defensive player. He refused to permit gains of consequence around his wing and frequently broke up forward pass plays before the receiver had a chance to get down the field and into the open, during California's regular schedule. He is also a punter of ability.

Fine Tackle in McMillan.

McMillan, right tackle, who was rated the best forward on the coast during the year, is a player who should be a factor in the clash. He is big, strong, and active, while his alertness in following the ball was shown several times today when he recovered fumbles.

McMillan's forte during the season has been rushing the passer, thus making accurate throwing impossible. He is the player whom Coach Smith is relying upon to prevent Workman from completing the long passes which spelled defeats for conference elevens.

Majors, left guard, unanimous selection for all-star eleven of the coast, is an aggressive warrior who tears in all the time. He scales 183 pounds, and in today's workout was always in the vicinity of the ball. Like Muller and McMillan, he appears to have an instinct for coördination, and should play an important part in the battle.

Team Is Well Piloted.

Quarter Back Erb handles the team with the finish of a veteran. He shouts his signals loud and clear, gets out in the interference, and seems to possess the ginger necessary to drive his men at top speed at all times. Coach Smith told the writer Erb is one of the most capable men to direct a team's attack he has ever coached. This little warrior, who weighs 145 pounds, is a sure catcher of the ball and has

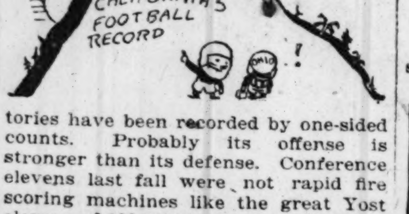
DECEIT LEADS TO CHAOS

In the Wake of the News

OHIO STATE VS. CALIFORNIA.

OHIO STATE'S eleven, unbeaten champion of the conference colleges, will be called upon in the Tournament of Roses game against California at Pasadena Saturday to meet a different type of football from any it saw last fall. At least, such are the reports from the coast received by The Wake.

California is a scoring team. Its victories have been recorded by one-sided counts. Probably its offense is stronger than its defense. Conference elevens last fall were not rapid fire scoring machines like the great Yost elevens of 1901-1904, for instance. Their defense was more effective than their offense. Ohio, therefore, by its Workman to Stinchcomb forward pass combination, always was able to come from behind and turn the tide in the nick of time.



While we have maintained that it was not "luck" alone—when any team could pull that feat not once, but four times, against able opponents—we wonder what tactics Ohio will adopt when opposed by an aggressive scoring aggregation.

Ohio must overcome the effects of a long trip, become acclimated, and then meet what is considered better than the average Pacific coast champion. Its chances depend on how well the native sons check that long passing game. No conference team did, and yet they all knew what was coming. Illinois broke up thirteen of fifteen attempts, but one in the final second of play beat the Illini.

That Ohio reserve its long passes and attempt to come from behind against California would seem foolish—unless the dope from the west is all awry—and we hope the Buckeyes will go to a flying start.

Conference followers of football are hopeful rather than confident of the result. These statements are not intended to belittle Ohio's chances, but rather to call attention to the many handicaps of the long trip that we may give Wilce's men even greater credit if they upset the Pacific coast champions.

MARKET LETTER.

WHETHER Business Depression, entering the area O(uch) in the chart, has been fully discounted by the fall in the price of speculative securities, indicated on the graph by E. Z. marks, is something we wish our clients to consider.

Commodity prices are reaching a lower level, but retail prices are not yet on the level. With the Christmas orgy of spending out of the way, we look for immediate results. Money is still in the area S(carce). These conflicting factors, according to our staff of analytical experts, make positive judgment at this time obscure, but we will apprise you of any change in underlying condition. (In other words, one bird's guess is as good as another's.)

In the week just ended buyers were chilled and holders spilled by fresh declines. Replogle and Vanadium, warbrides, suffered from alienation of affections. Mexican Pete was mostly Mex. Bosch acted the part. American Woolen shrunk. Rails were not alone in leaving the price track, so Thursday's upturn averted many serious wrecks.

We think the worst has been anticipated in many issues, and the future lies bfore us (where it has lied many times before).

Why Limited to Leash?

Dear Wake: On the gate post leading to the paddock at Tia Juana, there is a sign: "Se prohibe traer perros que vengan sueltos" ('No dogs allowed within unless on leash").

After looking them over, came to the conclusion that none should be allowed to enter without block and tackle.

As there have been seven or eight or nine Mrs. McCoys—we've rather lost the count—with proper intervening time for separations, the Kid probably figures he's an authority on gushers.

CLEANING HOUSE IN MAT GAME IS BOOST TO BOXING

Chicago Control of Sport, Hint to Legislature.

BY RAY PEARSON.

If boxing becomes legalized in the state of Illinois, those who only recently started cleansing all branches of sport, will have to be given some credit for the passage of the bill making it possible. This cleansing move is Chicago's own, and fortunately it was deemed necessary at a time when it will do much to favor the ring game.

Things often work out in strange ways, and this move which will help the cause of boxing really has nothing at all to do with the glove game at this time. It is a move which concerns wrestling, the most closely allied sport to boxing. The wrestling folks brought about the move themselves, and while it may sound strange, most of those connected with the sport believe that good will come "out of the wash."

City Council in Command.

The city of Chicago, through its city council, is going to see that wrestling is honestly contested and honestly conducted, for by the creation of an athletic commission made up of seven men, it will be on the square or there won't be any wrestling.

A riotous finish to a match staged at a burlesque theater in Chicago was the thing that spurred the aldermen to action and resulted in the formation of the commission. Therefore, in a way, boxing may be helped by the disgrace that wrestling brought upon itself.

Action looking forward to this commission was made necessary very shortly after the burlesque theater incident, for it was the opinion generally expressed in all quarters that such an affair did more to injure the chances of passage of a boxing bill—something that has been sought in Illinois for many years—than anything else could.

Something had to be done and the council, headed by Alderman Anton Cermak, found the way, or rather the cleansing remedy.

Sox Scandal Another Blow.

Those who have the interests of clean sport at heart have had much to think about in the last couple of years. Wrestling, almost always under suspicion, was sadly in need of renovation. But that was not all. Those Chicago White Sox who admitted they threw the world's series of 1919 to the Cincinnati Reds provided another reason for serious thought. So there were two sports in which the element of crookedness was conceded to be in sway.

But perhaps the question will be asked: "How is boxing to benefit when other sports, particularly baseball, have gone crooked?"

That question gives us a chance to answer, and in answering we shall make an effort to show why Chicago should get credit for whatever happens when the next legislature convenes in the state capital at Springfield. The name of the commission—City Athletic commission—is of great importance, for while shady wrestling was the thing that caused its creation, it may at its pleasure control and regulate other sports than wrestling. That was why it was named an athletic commission instead of a wrestling body.

Cermak Explains Comish Scope.

Now listen to Ald. Cermak describe the powers of his "comish," so one may get a line on how boxing is going to get a helping hand from the Chicago Athletic commission.

"We formed this commission because something had to be done to cleanse wrestling," said Ald. Cermak. "But in forming it we have not overlooked the fact that other sports may at any time need to go into the wash.

"We are in favor of boxing, strongly in favor of it—if it is properly conducted—and we intend to see that it is conducted in the right way if it becomes legal in the state of Illinois. The city of Chicago is large enough to have considerable influence in the state legislature, but the past has proven that that influence wasn't what it should be because we needed more than influence to make legislators see things as we wanted them to be seen.

Take Clean Hands to Capital.

"But our Chicago commission is going to make wrestling clean and square. It is going to take a hand in keeping every sport clean and then when we go to Springfield and ask for the passage of a legalizing measure we will be able to go with clean hands.

"We want boxing and will make and keep it clean. If we can do that with other sports, why shouldn't Chicagoans be able to convince the lawmakers of the state that it could be done with the glove sport, and help the passage of a bill legalizing it?"

Mosberg, Olympic Ring Winner, Takes "Pro" Bout

New York, Dec. 25.—Sam Mosberg, who won the world's Olympic lightweight boxing championship at Antwerp, received a judges' decision here tonight in the second professional match of his career, a ten round bout with Paul Edwards. Both are New York boys. Mosberg weighed 134½ and Edwards 133¾.

TENDLER STOPS CHICK SIMLER IN MAULING SCRAP

TRIBUNE DECISIONS

Decisions of Tribune boxing representatives are:

At Philadelphia—Lew Tendler knocked out Chick Simler [7]. Danny Kramer knocked out Johnny Solsberg [3]. Johnny Mealey beat Al Murphy [6]. Abe Golstein knocked out Tommy Murray [3]. Jimmy Sullivan beat Bobby Barrett [6]. Joe Tiplitz beat Jimmy Murphy [8]. Joe Jackson beat Young Tom Sharkey [8]. Jimmy Jordan beat Sol O'Donnell [8].

At Reading, Pa.—Mike Paulson stopped Johnny Viggi [5].

Philadelphia, Pa., Dec. 25.—[Special.]—Lew Tendler of this city picked up 4,000 easy dollars this afternoon as a Christmas gift by making a chopping block of Chick Simler of Scranton in the scheduled eight round windup at the Olympia A. A. Simler was so badly battered after six rounds of milling that Referee Slim Brennan stopped the one sided fuss at the start of the seventh to save him possible serious injury.

LEW TENDLER.

Simler a Game Receiver.

Tendler hit the Scranton carthorse with everything he had, but could not knock him off his pins. Time and again Simler hung on to stick out the round, but he invariably came up for more in the next round, much to the astonishment of the big crowd. Tendler tried hard for a K. O., but Simler took every blow without a whimper and probably would have been on his feet at the end of the eighth and final round had not the referee stopped the farce.

The best bout of the show was the semi-windup, in which Danny Kramer of Boston, tucked away Johnny Solsberg of Brooklyn in the third round. It was give and take, with no quarter, in the first two rounds, but in the third Kramer landed a hard left swing over Solsberg's heart. He duplicated the blow, then chopped a short right to the jaw for the punch that put the Brooklyn man down and out.

Tiplitz Whales Jimmy Murphy.

Joe Tiplitz administered a terrific eight round beating to Jimmy Murphy in the wind up at the National A. A., the other big club of the city to stage a Christmas boxing matinee. This makes the third consecutive time Tiplitz has won over Murphy. Both are local men.

Joe Jackson scored in the eight round semi-windup from Young Tom Sharkey. Sharkey was groggy several times, but managed to finish the bout.

The Inquiring Reporter

Every Day He Asks Five Persons, Picked at Random, a Question.

Today's Question.

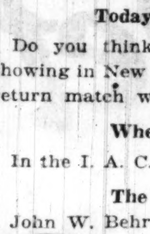
Where Asked.

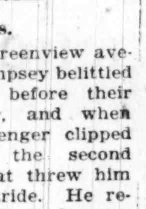
In the I. A. C. gymnasium.

The Answers.

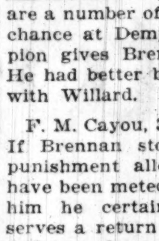
John W. Behr, 6957 Greenview avenue—Dempsey belittled Brennan before their encounter, and when the challenger clipped him in the second round that threw him off his stride. He required ten rounds to regain confidence. There are a number of men who should get a chance at Dempsey before the champion gives Brennan a return match. He had better be in trim for his bout with Willard.



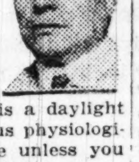
F. M. Cayou, 3311 Le Moyne street—If Brennan stood the punishment alleged to have been meted out to him he certainly deserves a return match. Judging from expert accounts of the encounter, the glare of the artificial lights may have bothered Dempsey. He is a daylight fighter. There are various physiological facts hard to analyze unless you are acquainted with the individual.



M. J. Flynn, 146 West Twenty-seventh street—My candid opinion is that Dempsey held back and stalled to help betting on the Carpentier fight. Any one who saw the fight between Dempsey and Brennan in Milwaukee will agree with me that the champion is the master. I believe, should they fight again. Dempsey could name the round in which he will put his opponent away.



Henry A. Mix, 917 East Forty-fourth street—Brennan, from all reports, put up a very game fight. He is the only man who ever punished the champion. He stayed longer than any other, and therefore is entitled to a return match. Dempsey took advantage of the only opening Brennan gave him. Brennan was as fresh as the champ up to the time of the final punch.



George Hull Porter, 546 Surf street—Brennan made the best showing against the champion of any of the many other aspirants to championship laurels. I saw Miske and Dempsey fight, and, checking up, I believe Dempsey has slowed up considerably. I think Carpentier's chances are much better than before.

GREB BELABORS JEFF SMITH IN 10 HARD ROUNDS

Pittsburgh, Pa., Dec. 25.—[Special.]—Harry Greb of Pittsburgh, added another laurel to his victory score this afternoon at the Motor Square Garden when he defeated Jeff Smith of Bayonne, N. J., in a ten round bout. It was a hard gruelling fight that both seemed anxious to end with a knockout. The local boy was on top of his man all the time, and used his lightning like left hand in deadly fashion that meant victory.

ARMY AVIATOR TAKES CUP RACE AT LONG BEACH

Long Beach, Cal., Dec. 25.—Flying at 153.2 miles an hour, Lieut. E. E. Bratten, U. S. A. aviator, today won the 106 mile free-for-all race for the Albert H. Hays challenge trophy, opening event of the three days' national winter air tournament at Dougherty field. Thirteen flyers started, twelve being army men. Eleven finished.

THERE HE COMES!
THERE HE GOES!

Lieut. Bratten's time for the 106 miles, over a triangular course, was 0:40:52. The order in which the other leaders finished and their time:

Capt. L. H. Smith, 41:37; Lieut. Harlod Brand, 42:00; Lieut. Y. A. Pitts, 42:24; Lieut. Milo N. Clark, 42:49.

Lieuts. A. Lee Foster and R. S. Worthington were forced to descend because of engine trouble. The flyers were aided on the long leg of the course by a strong tail wind. On the other legs they were protected from the wind by hills.

DETROIT TO GET 1921 PULITZER AIRPLANE RACE

Detroit, Mich., Dec. 25.—The Pulitzer trophy race, the airplane classic of America, is to be held here in 1921, according to Col. Jesse G. Vincent, head of the Aviation Country club. The decision was reached at a meeting of the club's board of directors with Lieut. Col. H. W. Allen of New York, who left for that city today to confer with the contest board of the Aero Club of America on final plans for the race.

COL. JESSIE G. VINCENT.

As tentatively planned, the contest will be staged over a triangular course, with the start at Selfridge field. The race, it was said, would be for about 250 miles with 45 miles to a leg.

The date has not been fixed, but it probably will be held late in August, Col. Vincent stated. The aviation club's board of directors has been empowered to arrange details of the contest, subject to approval of the Aero club.

Young Bob Fitzsimmons Stops Monahan in Fourth

Newark, N. J., Dec. 25.—[Special.]—Young Bob Fitzsimmons, son of the late heavyweight champion of the world, stopped Jim Monahan of New York in the fourth round of a scheduled twelve round bout at Olympic park today.

Fitzsimmons handed Monahan an unmerciful licking for four rounds, Referee Danny Sullivan finally stepping between the scrappers and stopping the bout after Monahan had taken a count of nine.

"BABE" RUTH HOPES TO SMACK OUT EVEN 100 HOMERS IN 1921

NEW YORK, Dec. 25.—"Babe" Ruth, heavyweight slugger of the Yankees, will make seventy-five home runs, and maybe a hundred, next season, he predicted today.

The Babe returned last night from Cuba for a month's rest in New Yawk. He will go up in the Maine woods later and shoot a few bears or lions, or whatever they have up there, before going south on the spring training trip.

During his brief stay in the Pearl of the Antilles, Babe cleaned up approximately $20,000. He was guaranteed $1,000 a game.

"I just got the range out at the Polo grounds about midseason," Babe said. "I'll be disappointed if I don't slam out seventy-five home runs next year. I'm all set for a good start, and I'll get a hundred if I can."

DE ORO IN DEFI TO HOPPE FOR 3 CUSHION GAME

New York, Dec. 25.—[Special.]—Alfredo De Oro takes exception to statements that Willie Hoppe, king of balkliners, is also master of the angle game. De Oro flatly declares Hoppe is being exploited as a three cushion billiardist as well as a star balkline player, and doubts that Hoppe ever ran five points in succession at three cushions.

ALFREDO DE ORO.

De Oro today issued a public challenge to play Willie an exhibition at any number of points, at any time, and for any amount Hoppe might elect.

"And I know that Hoppe will not accept," said De Oro, "because he is afraid of being beaten. I was never more confident of anything in my life that I am that I can defeat Hoppe at three cushion billiards, and I have no greater ambition at this time than to meet him."

Yost Turns Down Offer to Coach West Virginia

Morgantown, W. Va., Dec. 25.—[Special.]—Fred Dawson, Princeton graduate and later coach at Mount Union and Columbia; Jos. T. Ryan, Harvard freshman coach; Dutch Sommer and George Levene, both Penn players and coaches, are the latest possibilities for the position of head football coach at West Virginia.

Director Stansbury stated that both Fielding H. Yost, former West Virginia player and for twenty years coach at Michigan, and Al Sharpe, Yale athletic director, had refused to consider an offer.

One Punch and This Bout Is Over; Gross Winner

COURT EDICT ON COAST ADDS TO MAGNATES' IRE

BY I. E. SANBORN.

Action by the Superior court of Los Angeles county in declaring it a mere breach of contract to "throw" a ball game presages a strenuous fight by organized baseball to wrest the sport from the stranglehold the gamblers have tried to get on it.

The indictments found against eight White Sox players in connection with the world's series of 1919 will come to trial next month, it is expected in Cook county. By vote of the club owners of the American league at its recent annual meeting the best legal talent to prosecute the cases is to be obtained and reimbursed by the American league, realizing that the welfare of baseball and not that of Cook county citizens is at stake in the cases of the indicted ball players.

Civil Suits Possible.

If the courts of Illinois follow the ruling of the California jurists the indictments for conspiracy against Cicotte, Jackson, Williams, Risberg, Weaver, McMullin, Felsch, and Gandil of the White Sox will not hold up, and the only redress President Comiskey will have for the confessed "crime of 1919" will be through the civil courts in action against these eight players for breach of contract, in that they did not give him their best efforts as provided for in their contract.

Fortunately for baseball it may not be necessary to convict ball players of an offense against the criminal laws of the country in order to eliminate the danger of their doing farther damage to the sport. In the decision of the Ohio courts last spring in the case which Lee Magee brought against the Chicago National League club for releasing him unconditionally from a contract organized baseball won a decision of great importance which was overlooked at the time because the major league pennant races were then on.

It was held in that case that an unconditional release of a ball player did not constitute ground for damages.

A. L. TROUBLE BREWS

New York, Dec. 25.—Renewal of the political war in the American league in which Ban Johnson, president of the league, is receoving a broadside from T. L. Huston, part owner of the New York club, and Owner Frazee of the Boston Red Sox, is causing a divergence of opinion in baseball circles here.

Disruption of the league, threatened by the insurgents before Johnson and his five faithful club agreed to the appointment of a supreme commission, is not expected.

May Be Case for Landis.

Statements of Huston and Frazee that Johnson must leave before there can be peace in the American league family is taken to mean that the warring factions will take their case before Judge Landis if Johnson tries to get the league to pay the legal bills for fighting the same faction in court last winter in the Mays case.

Rumors that the White Sox had been placed on the market by Charles Comiskey were blamed upon Johnson, who is being accused of trying to make Comiskey appear as a quitter under fire.

Politics Being Played.

The controversy between Johnson and Comiskey about the prosecution of the indicted White Sox players is also being branded as a political move on Johnson's part. Comiskey and his faction claim Johnson is forcing himself into the case for the glory of appearing as the prosecutor.

SISLER REJECTS OFFER AS PILOT OF THE BROWNS

St. Louis, Mo., Dec. 25.—George Sisler, first baseman of the Browns, and leading batsman of the American league, has refused an offer to manage the club, but has signed a "long term" contract to continue playing here, Bob Quinn, business manager, announced tonight.

Sisler turned down the managership of the team before terms were discussed, Quinn added, saying he feared the responsibilities incident to the position would interfere with his playing.

Eddie Rickenbacker Wins N. O. Christmas Handicap

New Orleans, La., Dec. [illegible] Rickenbacker scored one of his best victories at Jefferson Park this afternoon when he galloped home first in the Christmas handicap with a purse of $1,500. A field of eight started, but Rickenbacker, Dancing Spray and Master Bill shared the honors. Eddie Rickenbacker, with odds of 18 to 5 on him, had to be urged hard during the last half mile to win. The only real outsider of the afternoon to win was War Club, a 20-to-1 shot when he went to the starting line in the sixth race.

MAROONS ENTER BASKET RACE WITH FINE SQUAD

1919 Champions Have 5 Vets, but Lose Coach.

With the approach of the 1921 basketball season only a few days away, college fans are looking over the field of western conference teams in an effort to pick the probable contenders in the winter sport that at many schools give football a good race for popularity.

In the last five years no team in the conference has won the title two years in succession, and if the usual tight race occurs this winter and recent tradition is repeated, the crown won by the University of Chicago team last year will land in the lap of another Big Ten team.

Five "C" Men for Maroons.

The Maroons start with all but two of the seven men who won letters on Pat Page's team which won the championship last year, and was beaten by two points by Pennsylvania in the final game of the series for the national title. Capt. Hinkle and Curtiss of the 1920 Maroon team have finished three years of competition.

Chicago has Capt. Fritz Crisler, generally regarded as the best back guard in the conference; Birkhoff, a flashy floor man who can sink baskets and free throws as well as any man in the west; Vollmer, the freaky star who has perfected short shots to almost mechanical perfection, and Halladay, a good center, all regulars from last season.

Stagg at Coaching Helm.

From the substitutes of last year and the sophomore material, one new man must be chosen to complete the quintet. Chicago has the greatest outlay of material in the conference, but has lost Pat Page, who coached the Maroons for ten years. Director Stagg, who has never coached or played the game, is taking over the helm, and what he accomplishes will be an interesting experiment.

The brilliant Purdue team, which finished close behind Chicago last year, has lost its greatest asset, a high powered scoring combination. Tillson, Church, and Campbell have graduated, leaving Capt. White, a superb running guard, and Miller, a steady back guard, as a nucleus for Coach Lambert.

Badger Team Dark Horse.

Wisconsin is the real dark horse. Last year the Badgers won with consistent form at home, but lost equally consistently on the road. Knapp and Weston are still crippled from football, and both will be eligible for only the first semester, which ends in the middle of the season. Capt. Taylor, a good forward; Caesar, Sundt, Frogner, and Fanning are other veterans on Meanwell's squad.

The injury to Chuck Carney in football, which has left him with a bad knee, was a serious blow to Illinois, for he was the class of the centers last year. Coach Winters, who succeeds Ralph Jones at Urbana, has Capt. Vail and Walquist, two good guards, and Mee, a forward, as the remnants of the 1920 team, but Illinois is certain to be formidable.

OHIO STATE END, KEPT OUT BY BAD LUCK, GETS "O"

Columbus, O., Dec. 25.—The spirit of sacrifice and unselfishness bred by college football was demonstrated in the last scrimmage of the Ohio State university football team the night before its trip to the coast.

Three men—all "subs"—were laid out by the heavy charges of the varsity, and the sentiment of each was, "Gee, Coach, I'm glad it wasn't one of the regulars."

One of the injured players was E. Y. Johnson, senior, of Lima, O., who for three years has been dogged by disappointment while trying for an end berth. Once he fractured a shoulder and twice his knee was put out of commission. Because he tried hard and showed well in scrimmage, he was awarded his "O" and championship gold football.

The other injured players were Speed and MacGregor, both of whom still have two years to land the coveted letter.

HERE'S NICE TRIP TO GRID BATTLE FOR PREP BOYS

Bakersfield, Cal., Dec. 25.—An automobile caravan composed of the entire Bakersfield High school, numbering 1,100 students, will make the journey to Pasadena, 150 miles west of here, next Wednesday to witness the Bakersfield-Berkeley game for the state scholastic football championship.

On appeal from the citizens, the high school trustees granted the use of the high school busses for the long trip and many private owners volunteered their cars. In addition, there will be a repair car and machinists, and several large oil companies have donated the services of their drivers for the busses. Besides the students, 3,000 citizens are planning to witness the game.

Illinois Traps Assn. to Meet in Decatur

Bloomington, Ill., Dec. 25.—[Special.]—Officers and directors of the Illinois State Sportsmen's association received a call this week to attend a special meeting at Decatur next Wednesday and Thursday to outline the program and make other arrangements for the annual shooting tournament in that city next June. In connection with the meeting of the state organization, there also will be a business meeting of the Central Illinois Trapshooters' league and also a two days shoot, arranged by the local gun club.

THE eastern intercollegiate cross-country team of Cornell university, representing America, will race the combined team of the best distance men of Oxford and Cambridge universities, over a course near London on Tuesday. The Cornell runners sailed for England early in December, staying first at Oxford and then moving to the Thames Hare and Hounds club, at Rochampton, which will be the site of the big race. Coach Jack Moakley regards his "Big Red" distance aggregation as one of the best cross-contry teams ever gathered.

2 SOCCER GAMES TODAY TO SWELL FUND FOR MEDALS

Two classy soccer tilts are billed for Bricklayers' park, Thirty-fifth street and Wentworth avenue, this afternoon. The games have been arranged to provide a fund to procure medals for the winning teams in the Chicago Soccer league and the league officials have selected a galaxy of stars to compete.

The main clash will bring together a team composed of American born players and an eleven consisting of players born on British soil.

A picked team from the first division will tackle an all star second division aggregation in the opener, starting at 1:30 p. m.

CALIFORNIA ELEVEN DISPLAYS POWER IN WORKOUT FOR OHIO

Sprott, left half, who tips the beam at 167, is a hard driving man, who is used to advance the oval on off-tackle bucks or plays into the line. He is a fast starter, who should be able to reach the scrimmage line to take advantage of momentary openings.

Toomey, the other half back, did not practice today. He stopped off on his way from San Francisco to have Christmas dinner with his parents. In his absence Coach Smith used Van Sandt, Deeds and Rowe. Each of this trio fitted in well with what appeared to be a well oiled machine.

Morrison to Bother Buckeyes.

Morrison, full back, looked extremely good in practice. He drives hard and low, reaches the line quickly and has been a consistent ground gainer all year. Where he excels, according to Coach Smith, is taking off tacklers. In fact the coach asserted that most gains of Sprott and Toomey were made possible by Morrison's splendid interference. In addition to this Morrison does all the punting. He has averaged over forty yards throughout the season, and has not had a punt blocked during the year. On defense he backs up the line.

Berkey, left end, scales 178 pounds and is an excellent running mate for Muller. He receives forward passes and goes about his other work in a manner which shows he knows the duties of his position.

Both Teams Average Heavy.

Center Latham tips the beam at 187 pounds. He uses the spiral pass on punts and is very accurate in getting the ball to receivers on other plays. Cranmer, right guard, appears to be a hard worker who will be in every play. His weight was announced as 190 pounds.

According to figures given out today by the tournament of roses committee California will average 176 pounds against 182 for Ohio.

Among the large number of substitutes which help compose the California squad is Irving Ahlswede, brother of Herb Ahlswede, who played on the University of Chicago teams in 1902-03. This player was operated on for appendicitis early in the year, but will be a regular next season.

Coast Eleven "Smart" Team.

Generally speaking, California looks like a smart football team. It is well coached and has some very good plays. Just how successful these formations will be against Ohio State is not known, but they have been worked out to the point which makes it imperative for every man to get into every play.

Coach Smith intends to give the team only light work during the week. He asserted the men have been in training ever since the Pacific coast conference season ended, and need only enough practice each day to keep them on edge for the fray.

California used the park early in the afternoon and Ohio occupied the field later. Coach Wilce gave his men a long workout, which consisted of scrimmage and signal drills. The Buckeye coach intends to put his men through the more strenuous work for a few days, and permit them to taper off as the day of the game approaches.

Willaman Unlikely to Start.

Dick Cott, substitute half back, who turned his ankle in yesterday's practice, was reported much improved today, but limped as he worked in the signal drill.

All indications point to C. Taylor's starting the game at full back for Ohio in place of Willaman, whose injured knee is not mending as quickly as expected. Blair appears to be a certainty at one half back, and Noel Workman will start at end. Coach Wilce may make some last minute changes, but he has been working these players in all practices since the team left Columbus a week ago.

Both teams were taken on a sight seeing trip through the mountains this morning. Another tour has been arranged for tomorrow. Neither coach will order practice, but the men will be sent on long walks tomorrow morning.

100,000 Seek 42,000 Seats.

Seats for the struggle are at a premium. The park has been enlarged to seat 42,000, but the committee has received over 100,000 requests for tickets. Football fans from all sections of the Pacific coast are expected to arrive early in the week, as capacity reservations at all hotels have been made. The committee announced today that the game will start at 2 o'clock.

Canadian Club Quintet on Holiday Playing Tour

The Canadian club of Chicago has formed a basketball team which includes a coterie of players hailing from five varsity and academies, and has booked opposition in a number of middle western cities for a holiday tour, beginning Dec. 27. The nine players on the squad are Canadian athletes attending American institutions.

McFernan, Coleman, Eddy, Maplesden, and Hays, Lake Forest college; Bolin, Purdue; Murphy, Loyola; Robertson, Kewatin academy, and Legare, Northwestern.

The following teams will be played on the trip:

Delta Kappas of Bluffton, Ind.; American Legion of Waterloo, Ind.; Ricabys of Toledo, O.; Kalamazoo, Mich., State Normal; Hyatt institute, Battle Creek, Mich.; South Bend, Ind., Y. M. C. A.; Elkhart, Ind., Rainbows, and Rockford, Ill., A. C.

SEATTLE HOCKEY TEAM WINS.

Victoria, B. C., Dec. 25.—Seattle's Metropolitan hockey team won an uphill contest from the Victoria Aristocrats, 4 to 3, in an extra period, in the first matinée game of the season today.

PAULSON STOPS VIGGI.

West secured ten tricks.

The feature of the deal was the manner in which the deckarer manipulated the club suit.

From the outset it seemed certain that west must lose two diamonds, one club, and one heart. The only way to gain a trick was to make both the king and queen of clubs, which seems an impossibility when the declarer was himself obliged to broach that suit.

The declarer achieved the impossible at tricks seven and eight. He knew his ruse could not work if south held both ace and knave of clubs, but that not holding the jack, south would suspect west of trying to steal a trick with that card.

Had south carefully counted the trumps he would have known that the ace of clubs could only win a useless trick, as it could not save game, and made certain the remaining tricks for the declarer.

North could not have won, but he played badly. At trick 5 he should have realized that the game was lost, unless south held the queen of spades. The king of spades should have been led at trick 6, in order to remove the ace from dummy before the diamonds were established.

South would have made a small slam at clubs had he taken his partner out of the no-trump.

PREMIER TENNIS PLAYERS MEET IN DAVIS CUP PLAY

Fans Expect U. S. Victory Over Australasians.

W. M. JOHNSTON. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

New York, Dec. 25.—The premier tennis players of the world are represented by the United States and Australasia teams which will meet on the turf at Auckland, New Zealand, during the coming week in the fifteenth struggle for the Davis cup.

The trophy, emblematic of the world's team tennis championship, occupies the unique position of being the most frequently competed for of all international sport prizes in the history of amateur athletic contests. Donated in 1900 by Dwight F. Davis, at that time American doubles champion with Holcombe Ward, the trophy has been battled for fourteen times in the last twenty years. During this period Australasian teams have won it six times, British isles' players five times, and United States combinations three times.

U. S. Team the Challenger.

In the coming matches, which will consist of four single contests and one doubles match, the United States will appear in the rôle of challenger and the Australasians as defenders.

Four Americans composing the 1920 team arrived at Auckland, Dec. 15, the party consisting of William T. Tilden, of Philadelphia; William M. Johnston of San Francisco; Watson M. Washburn of New York, and Samuel Hardy of Chicago.

The defending quartet, so far as is known in this country probably will be composed of Gerald Patterson, Norman Brookes, R. V. Thomas and H. O'Hare Wood.

The actual alignment of players will not be announced until shortly before the match. It is expected that Tilden and Johnston will bear the brunt of the American attack while Patterson and Brookes will be the Australasian "aces."

Fans Expect U. S. Victory.

Close followers of tennis are inclined to be optimistic regarding the outcome of the matches, believing that in Tilden, the world's singles champion, and Johnston, former American champion, who is rated just a stroke or two below Tilden at the present time, the United States has an invincible pair. Washburn is a formidable relief player in case either of the stars become indisposed, while Hardy, who in reality is captain and manager of the team, can play a superlative game if the occasion demands.

Patterson is the power of the Australasian team, playing a game somewhat similar to that of Maurice McLoughlin, when the latter was at the top of his tennis form. Brookes, undoubtedly one of the greatest players of all times, is well advanced in years and from a playing standpoint and cannot be expected to carry the burden of two singles matches and one doubles match in three days. If he pairs with Patterson in doubles he will not appear in the singles. It may be, however, that Brookes and Patterson will devote their efforts to the singles and leave the doubles contest to Thomas and Wood, who make a most formidable team.

WOODS and WATERS

THE YEAR IN THE OUT-OF-DOORS.

IN some respects 1920 was a great year for outdoor folks and in other ways it brought some disappointments. Take trout fishing, for instance. A fairly open winter and a sunshiny March aroused great hopes in the breasts of trout fishermen everywhere, but alas, the plans of men and mice, as the poet said, often go on the blink, and when opening day rolled around conditions were far from favorable. The fishermen never gave up hope—they never do—for hoping is one of the best things done by anglers—but, with a bright spot here and there, the season was not up to standard. This was true not only of Michigan, Wisconsin and Minnesota, but of Canada and the mountain states as well.

Black bass fishing in the middle west was "patchy"; here and there were big catches made, but on the whole the fishing was below normal. Certain Canadian waters and the rivers of the east, however, yielded excellent bassing. It was a poor muskellunge year in almost all waters.

* *

Last spring the migration of waterfowl and shore birds was unusually large, giving promise of a good shooting season; this promise was more than fulfilled, and hunters had a wonderful year. Upland game birds were not as plentiful as waterfowl. With the exception of introduced pheasants, the upland shooting was quite a bit below normal, old timers attributing it to the late, wet spring interfering with the hatches.

* *

Few states hold legislative sessions in even numbered years, but the fish and game laws passed this year were restrictive, something that hunters everywhere must expect. The enormous increase in gunners and anglers, the clearing of waste places, the more or less fixed quantity of fish and game, and above all, the ease with which game cover and fishing waters may be reached by motor cars, is cutting into the supply at an alarming rate. Stricter laws and more rigid enforcement of them are necessary.

* *

None of the states protecting quail at all times changed their attitude on this question, and New York extended the closed season to 1925. South Carolina lengthened the quail season a few days, but as congress now prohibits the sale of game in the District of Columbia—heretofore our most notorious game market—there will be more quail in the Carolinas and other south Atlantic states.

Ruffed grouse are also receiving attention from law makers. Wisconsin continues its closed season on them and New York has shortened the season one month, besides reducing the bag limits to two a day and ten a season.

* *

New York again has a buck law. After permitting the killing of does for a season, as an experiment, it was found that more than half of the deer killed were does, which is a bigger drain than the resources of the state can stand. South Carolina has passed a law protecting does until 1925.

All the Canadian provinces had legislative sessions, and the trend of the new laws shows the seriousness of the game situation. Quebec reduced the season on deer and moose nineteen days and on caribou fifty days, while Nova Scotia shortened the moose season two weeks. Several new game refuges were established in Canada.

* *

Fur bearing animals will receive more protection in the future, both in the United States and Canada. Alaska has put a closed season on its principal fur bearers, beaver being protected until 1923 and marten until 1925, and Wisconsin prohibits the taking of mink and muskrats in practically all of the state. All along the line greater restrictions are being put on trappers.

The new type of smoker

As more and more men get acquainted with Robt. Burns' full Havana filler, the habit of asking for Robt. Burns by name, is becoming crystallized, more and more, as a national habit.

Cigar dealers declare "Robt. Burns" customers are practically "substitute-proof." Robt. Burns not only makes friends—he keeps them.

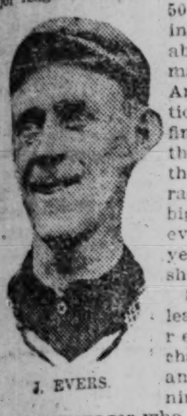
HALF OF CLUBS IN BIG LEAGUES SWITCH PILOTS

Biggest Shakeup Between Seasons in History.

BY I. E. SANBORN.



J. EVERS.

Speaking of labor turnovers, the major leagues will show approximately a 50 per cent switching of executive ability when the managers of the American and National leagues finally line up for their getaway in the 1921 pennant race. This is the biggest switch ever made in one year in the "big show."

Seven major league clubs already have changed pilots, and of the other nine it is likely that one manager who is a part owner will step out of active control of his club in favor of a lieutenant when the season opens. One of the seven changes in management has not been completed by the choice of a successor to the retiring boss.

Griffith to Step Down.

The eight holdover managers in the two big leagues are Gleason of the White Sox, Speaker of the Cleveland world's champions, Huggins of the Yankees, and Mack of the Athletics in the American league; Moran of the Reds, Gibson of the Pirates, Robinson of the Brooklyn champions, and Rickey of the Cardinals in the National league. The odd man in the equation is Griffith of Washington, who is contemplating placing the active management of the team on the broad shoulders of George McBride, retired shortstop, who has been his assistant for several years.

Beginning where charity is supposed to—at home—the Cubs will be under a new leader who already has fired the fans with great anticipations of a new spirit in the games on the north side. John Evers, who was chosen to succeed Fred Mitchell, will have everything in his favor when he resumes the reins in Chicago.

"Back Home" for Johnny.

Evers is coming back home where he made his baseball reputation, and it will be the twentieth anniversary of his debut as a big leaguer. His previous one year attempt at bossing the Cubs will not be remembered against him, because the conditions next year will be entirely different from those which existed in 1913, and John himself is different.

The Trojan will not have to win a world's championship to gain the allegiance of Cub rooters if he revives the old Cub brand of baseball, when individual averages and salaries were secondary to the result of each game.

Mitchell goes back to Boston, where as lieutenant to Stallings, he made a name for himself in 1914. He also goes back to his home city and to a team whose past deeds have not been so great as to make the fans as exacting as they are in Chicago.

Donovan Has a Jinx Job.

Bill Donovan, who has had a fling at major league management with the Yankees, will try his hand in Philadelphia as the successor to a long line of pilots of whom Cravath was the last failure.

Hugh Jennings, for many years manager of the Tigers, will have an easier task with the Giants, because he will have McGraw at his elbow most of the time to make all the important decisions, leaving Hugh the task of directing the men on the field.

Jennings' successor in the American league is Ty Cobb, the greatest ball player of all time, according to the majority of baseball men. Whether or not Cobb will prove a great manager remains to be seen. In passing, it can be taken with a large grain of salt that he is to get a $30,000 salary. Baseball men are awfully careless sometimes with the figures they put behind the dollar sign, and Cobb's salary is only a guess.

Why Rowland Was Not Picked.

The choice of Cobb in place of Clarence Rowland, who was considered for the Detroit job, was due considerably to doubt in the owner's mind how the Georgia peach would get along with a new manager from the outside.

Incidentally, Rowland fell into a much softer berth in Columbus, where he will have a free hand in control of the club without interference from the owners or without temperamental stars under him. A major league managership is not all laurels and roses, and that fact was the determining one in the mind of Mike Kelley, who turned down the leadership of the Phillies to remain in St. Paul, in spite of tempting financial bait.

Hugh Duffy, former Sox pilot, will take up the reins laid down by Barrows in Boston, the latter becoming business manager of the Giants. Burke of the Browns has retired from the job and his successor has yet to be chosen.

Chicago Boy Is Elected Westminster's Captain

Fulton, Mo., Dec. 25.—[Special.]—Torris Lyche of Chicago, star tackle of the Westminster college football team, has been elected captain for 1921. The selection of Lyche for this important post was made at the annual banquet of the Blue Jay letter men.

Lyche has been at Westminster two years, coming from Mexico, Mo., where he played on the football team of the Missouri Military academy. His work on the Westminster team this season drew forth many complimentary remarks from officials and sport writers over the Missouri Intercollegiate Athletic circuit. Lyche played in every game and many experts credited him with being the best tackle in the college circles of the state.

TORONTO HOCKEY TEAM TO TOUR U. S.

Toronto, Dec. 25.—University of Toronto's senior intercollegiate hockey team will leave tomorrow for a tour in the United States. The team will play at Pittsburgh Dec. 27 and 28; Cleveland, Dec. 30, 31, and Jan. 1, and Philadelphia Jan. 3 and 4.

FAIR POCKET BILLIARD STAR

FANS CITE EVIDENCE THAT UMP IS "BLIND"; MISCOUNTS HIS MONEY

KITTY BRASHEAR, former ball player, runs a restaurant in San Diego. Jimmy Toman, umpire, works in the place as a cashier. During the rush hour one day a customer gave Toman a $5 bill in payment for his lunch. Toman happened to give back change for only a dollar.

"The ball players yelled all season that you were blind," he said, "now I think they were right about it."

MAJOR LEAGUES USE AN AVERAGE OF 240 BALLS IN DAY'S PLAY

BY BILLY EVANS.
[American League Umpire.]

How many baseballs do you think are used in a major league contest?

BILLY EVANS

Perhaps you will be a bit surprised when I tell you about thirty are used in every game.

It may surprise you to know the cost of baseballs for every major league game runs in the neighborhood of $60.

When some player fouls off a new baseball into the stand, which you catch, and then pocket, you don't realize you have cut into the expense of the club owner to the extent of a little better than a buck and a half.

Yankees Should Sue Billy.

In a game at the Polo grounds last year forty-eight balls were required to complete the contest. I started with a dozen new balls, and three times I was compelled to request a dozen new ones from the New York bench. When the last Yankee flied for the final out of the game, not a single ball remained in the box, and only one nestled in my pocket. I decided to make a good day of it, so I kept that one for myself.

That evening while in the hotel a fan came up to me and commented on the great number of balls used in the game. He was more than surprised when I told him I had used up four dozen.

Of course a number of balls were lost by being fouled into the stands and kept by some spectators. However, during the game I was compelled to throw out a number of balls because of a break in the seam, loss of shape, or a rough spot that made it possible to throw a fast ball that greatly resembled the emery delivery.

That struck me as an interesting question. When you consider that about 240 new balls are put in play each day in the two major leagues you wonder what becomes of them. Where do all the old balls go?

I imagine it would be conservative to say that each day a dozen balls are lost through being fouled into the stands. Many are practically new. I recall one game last summer in Cleveland in which a player, before being retired, fouled off six new balls into the crowd, none of which came back.

How Practice Began.

The baseball fan for some reason believes any ball he grabs becomes his property. Such a custom was largely developed during the war days, when if a spectator grabbed a ball he looked around for a fellow in the garb of the army or navy and tossed it to him. A patriotic spirit kept the attendant from seeking the ball from a man in the service.

Now if some one gets a ball and an attaché of the park spots him and approaches to get it, he tosses it back or forward a few rows. This practice continues until the attendant gives up in disgust. Often I wonder if it is a desire to secure the ball, or merely a pleasure derived from making the attendant uncomfortable.

When I first joined the staff of the American league in 1906, it was uncommon to use more than a dozen balls in a game, and often it was nearer six. In those days the concrete stands were unknown, all the parks being of wood.

The concrete stands have been largely responsible for the great number of new balls used. When a ball hits the concrete stands, if traveling at a great speed, a large rough spot is the result. Such a rough spot is similar to the spot pitchers created when using emery paper to roughen the ball. This rough spot enables a pitcher to cause the ball to take uncanny shoots, if properly delivered.

That is why one often sees the umpire throw out any number of balls that to one sitting in the grand stand look perfectly good.

Used for Practice.

What becomes of these balls the umpire declares are not up to specifications? Most of them are regarded as practice balls. They are used for infield practice, hitting fungoes to the outfield, batting practice, and for morning practice.

A good brand of baseball is necessary for the stunts I have mentioned. Using a ball that is too badly roughed may result in unpleasant situations during practice. There is always a chance that it will take some break and injure a batter. Likewise, throwing a ball that is too wingy often injures the arm. Therefore after a ball is declared unfit for playing during the game it becomes a practice ball.

Every ball player has a great number of friends. It is surprising how much some of them value as a souvenir a ball that has seen major league service.

Sent to Charitable Institutions.

And then many club owners keep the balls that are deemed unfit for major league practice and give them to charitable institutions, where the inmates look on them as the last word in baseballs.

The small boys who hang around the ball park and chase balls in batting practice also are often rewarded with an old ball for their efforts.

However, a big majority of the balls pass out of play, because the fans take them when fouled into the stands. Most of them never look on it in the light of a theft, but rather as a right. Mr. Lannin, when owner of the Boston American league club, never tried forcibly to get a ball from a fan. Rather he supplied his head usher with a block of passes, and when a fan secured a ball the usher tendered him a pass for the game in return. It was a system that got results and might be more universally tried.

LYNCH MAY SIGN UP TO MEET WINNER OF SHARKEY-MOORE TILT

NEW YORK, Dec. 25.—[Special.]—Joe Lynch's acquisition of the bantamweight championship title from Pete Herman has stimulated interest in the ring's midget class.

It is probable that Lynch will make his first appearance in defense of his crown at Madison Square garden in the same ring in which he won the championship. Pal Moore of Memphis, Tenn., bantamweight, and Jack Sharkey, the little west side Italian, meet here Wednesday night, and it is understood Tex Rickard plans a bout between the winner of this match and Lynch.

The bout Wednesday night between Sharkey and Moore will give both boxers an opportunity to demonstrate their qualifications for a meeting against the champion. Sharkey, despite his recent knockout at the hands of Lynch, is confident he possesses the ability to make things interesting for the new champion.

ARE BIG N. Y. PURSES FOR BOXERS A DREAM? QUESTION IS RAISED

BY HARRY NEWMAN.

New York, Dec. 25.—[Special.]—A group of fight fans were discussing the large purses now being paid to boxers when one of the members ventured the opinion that perhaps everything was not on the up and up regarding the honesty of the actual amounts being slipped to the boxers.

GEORGES CARPENTIER.

"I have had my doubts for some time," said this person, "about these fabulous sums. You can't make me believe that Dempsey nor Carpentier are going to get anything like the amount which has been so generally advertised by those promoters. Where do they get off with the $300,000 stuff for Dempsey and $200,000 for Carpentier? Why, it's a fairy tale, pure and simple. Of course, it is true enough that the boxers of the present day are getting more money than the old-timers ever dreamed of, but nothing doing on those six figure prizes; unless they are palming off some Mexican money on them."

Did They Get It.

"Take the Dempsey and Brennan row at Madison Square garden recently," continued said member. "Do you think that the champion got $100,000 for his share of the purse and that Brennan drew down $25,000 as was reported? It may be so, but I am a Missourian and you have got to show me.

"I firmly believe that these ridiculous figures are tossed about carelesslike for advertising purposes. It gets the public interested and serves to boost the box office receipts. Just a queer angle with the gullible public; tell them about unheard of prizes and they will flock like sheep to get a peek at the contestants. It may be on the level, but I am repeating that I come from that Show Me state. Personally I don't think that it helps the game any and the sooner these promoters get down to normal conditions the better it will be for everyone concerned.

Small Coin in Old Days.

The conversation suddenly shifted along to the days of John L. Sullivan, Jake Kilrain, Paddy Ryan, and others of the old days who fought some real battles and half the time did not get anything for their trouble.

"I remember when Bob Fitzsimmons fought Jim Hall for the then unheard of sum of $40,000," interposed one of the party. "That was some purse for those days and the whole country was amazed. Well, they went through with the fight all right and when Fitz stopped Hall in four rounds and stepped up to get his prize all he got was a queer check and a few paltry dollars. Much different nowadays, isn't it? The fighters of today are getting a whole lot of money for their work, but they do not get anything like what the promoters are trying to make the public believe."

SPORT LULL AS TEAMS PREPARE FOR NEW SEASON

Athletes Are Training for Indoor Contests.

BY WALTER ECKERSALL.

Following the lull in all branches of sports between the close of the football season and the opening of universities and colleges for the winter semester, indications point to a busy winter season in all departments of indoor athletics.

W. ECKERSALL.

In some cases coaches of basketball teams have worked their squads during the Christmas vacation and some of the players have passed up the trip to their homes in order to be in first class condition for the opening games just after New Year's. A number of college teams, following a practice popular for years in varsity sports, have plotted basketball trips covering the holiday season. Princeton, for instance, is taking an extensive western trip, and will meet important fives of the western conference, including a game Dec. 30 with University of Chicago, last year's "Big Ten" champion.

Big Ten Opens Jan. 3.

The western intercollegiate conference basketball season will open Jan. 3, when Wisconsin will meet Northwestern on the latter's floor. The Badgers this year will be developed by Dr. Meanwell, who turned out strong fives at Madison in past years, and did the same at University of Missouri more recently. The Purple will have a strong quintet and a lot of the season's success will depend upon the result of the initial clash with the Cardinals.

Other conference fives have postponed their openings until later, but a big majority will have played their first games by Jan. 15. Chicago, last year's champion, will be developed by A. A. Stagg, who has undertaken a new role. Stagg has acquired his basket knowledge by watching games, and learned some coaching points from Pat Page.

With the exception of Michigan, Iowa and Indiana, which have scheduled ten games, other teams will play the maximum number of twelve. As all the teams will play each other, it will be much easier to rate the teams at the close of the season that it was in football last fall. Reports from all camps have it that strong teams will be put in the field, and an interesting season should result.

Look to March Track Meets.

Track and field athletes, although they will settle down to hard training for dual meets, will be pointed to the annual relay games of the University of Illinois in the mammoth armory on March 5, and for the annual indoor track and field meet at Patten gymnasium, Northwestern university, on March 17 and 18.

The Illinois relay festival is growing into one of the most popular sets of indoor games held in the country. The events attracted talent from all sections of the country last year; and Harry Gill, who is in charge of the meet, already has assurances that the 1921 entry list will eclipse that.

The indoor conference, one of the most attractive affairs of the winter season for Big Ten performers, should attract a record breaking list of entries.

Swimming Meet March 17.

The indoor conference swimming championship also will be decided on March 17 and 18 at Patten gymnasium. Tom Robinson, veteran mentor at the Purple institution, has had a deal of success with his natators, who have won the title so many times. Other coaches, including Dr. Joe White of Chicago, have reported such good prospects that Northwestern may not have an easy time to retain the honors won last year.

While the basketball players, track, and field athletes, and gymnasts are busily engaged getting into form, coaches of baseball teams will start weeding out candidates by indoor work.

Club Athletes Get Busy.

Although the university and college athletes will be absorbed in their lines of athletic activity, performers representing clubs, high, and preparatory schools will be just as busily engaged. In the middle west, stars of the large organizations already have started training for the Central A. A. U. championships to be held the latter part of March, and for the many handicap meets promoted by various organizations.

Other branches of sport will come in for their share of attention. Besides the many skating events held each year, THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE will stage its silver skates derbies at Humboldt park, Chicago, on Jan. 30. There is a silver skates derby for boys under 16 years of age, a senior silver skates derby open to all, and a silver skates derby for girls. The only restriction on entries is that all skaters must be amateurs.

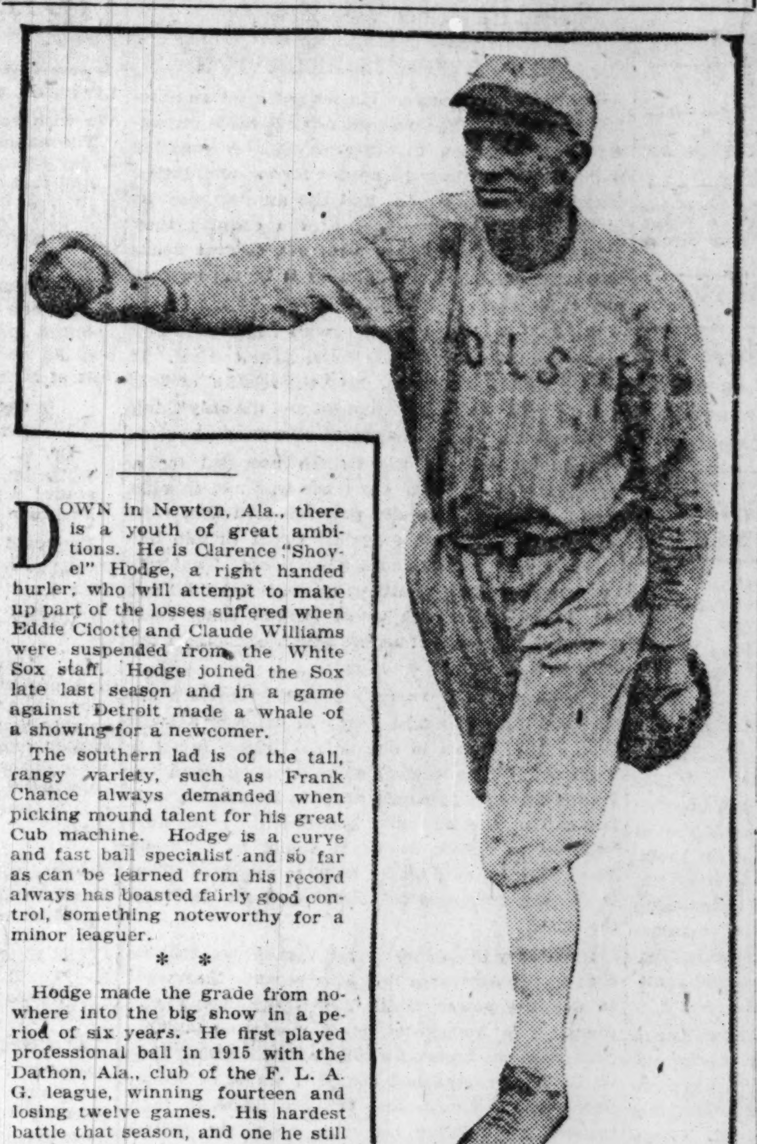
PATCH ON WORN WHITE SOX



CLARENCE HODGE.

DOWN in Newton, Ala., there is a youth of great ambitions. He is Clarence "Shovel" Hodge, a right handed hurler, who will attempt to make up part of the losses suffered when Eddie Cicotte and Claude Williams were suspended from the White Sox staff. Hodge joined the Sox late last season and in a game against Detroit made a whale of a showing for a newcomer.

The southern lad is of the tall, rangy variety, such as Frank Chance always demanded when picking mound talent for his great Cub machine. Hodge is a curve and fast ball specialist and so far as can be learned from his record always has boasted fairly good control, something noteworthy for a minor leaguer.

Hodge made the grade from nowhere into the big show in a period of six years. He played his first professional ball in 1915 with the Dathon, Ala., club of the F. L. A. G. league, winning fourteen and losing twelve games. His hardest battle that season, and one he still looks back upon as his greatest achievement, was a seventeen inning affair the morning of July 4. He pitched the full route and gave only six hits and five passes, but was beaten, 3 to 2.

The season of 1916 found "Shovel" with the Montgomery club of the Sally league. Next year he was at Jacksonville, Fla., under Lee Tannehill, old Sox star. Waco, Tex., was his next stopping place and he finished the season there by winning his last six starts. In 1918 he was out of baseball because of the war, and when he returned to Waco the next season he was so far off form that he was shipped to the Nashville club of the Southern association. He wound up there in such impressive style that he was told to come back for his job in the spring.

His work at Nashville last summer was what attracted White Sox scouts. He seemed to be such a good prospect that a deal for him was consummated in August. He was brought on immediately because there then appeared to be a chance for the Sox to win the pennant and Gleason was woefully shy on pitching talent. He had something like eighteen victories against fourteen defeats with the Southern association team.

CATHOLIC PREPS PLAY FOR TITLE

St. Patrick's Commercial academy, and De La Salle institute, which have been principals in the Catholic High School Indoor league championship struggle for four successive years, will hook up in the crucial game of the present campaign at 2:15 o'clock today at St. Patrick's hall.

The home team has won all six games played, while De La Salle dropped one to St. Patrick and captured five. If St. Patrick wins today, the race will be settled, but if De La Salle wins, they will play off. Wilson and Murray will work the points for the home boys, while the institute will rely on Groark and Landusky.

CHICAGO RIFLE CLUB REGISTERS FINE 999 TOTAL

One Shy of Perfect Score; Irving Team Leader.

Irving Park stepped away to a five point lead in the aggregate totals in the fifth weekly installment of the Chicago Rifle association's annual tournament for THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE trophy last week. Headed by T. G. Lively and H. Newgard, with perfect totals of 200 in the weekly shoot, the Irving Parkers compiled 997 points, second to Chicago, with a phenomenal 999.

THE U. S. AND HUMAN MISERY.

In the Anping district of starving China 10,000 people may be saved by American grain, but 110,000 must die. They must starve to death because food cannot be given to them. The workers in charge of the relief have abandoned hope for them.

Famine is merciless and man cannot be merciful. He may think that it would be better, considering the inevitable fate of these unfortunates, to resort to euthanasia, to use a quiet, painless means of disposing of these tortured lives, but the moral sentiment of the reliever stops that kindness.

In barbarism it was common enough and even with pagan peoples who had civilization. Deformed children whose lives would have been futile, painful, or tragic were exposed to die. The Romans had at least the legend of killing the aged. Christianity, with its doctrine of pity and mercy, teaches that life must not be taken even to prevent suffering. The Christian peoples who are trying to aid the Chinese cannot help exterminate painlessly where they cannot provide food.

The Chinese may kill themselves, but not many of the starving thousands will do that. They will cling to hope and take the long road to death no matter how anguished it is.

China is starving because of several causes. One is drought. There has been no rain for eight months; in places for a year or more. There has been a drought because there are no trees. China also has an impoverished soil because there are no trees. The rains when they come are torrential. They sweep the soil into the streams, as they do in this country.

Great Britain is said to have a permanent soil because the rains are not torrential. The United States is like China, but trees, which it still has, hold the moisture. If we have foresight we will plant trees and save the soil and the moisture. If we have foresight in this it will be a departure from our tradition, but if we do not have it there is a conceivable generation of Americans which, in a single district, will find it possible to save 10,000 and will allow 110,000 to starve to death.

Another cause of Chinese starvation is the bureaucracy, almost universally stupid everywhere, but in China designed to be stupid in administration. Its officials and its clerks have been educated in the morass of Chinese learning, which is a profound abstraction fitted for no application. The ability to handle thousands of ideagraphs has no relation to the administration of government and the crafty mandarins and droning clerks do not administer.

The third reason is that Chinese population has never had any relation to resources or limitations. French population never was allowed to exceed resources. This limitation has even been a danger to France. Although it kept them comfortable it did not make them strong. The Chinese overpopulate and with overpopulation come starvation and plague.

China is the most tortured land, but not the only one. Russia is famished in the cities and may have a winter of starvation. Austria is starving and the Austrians hope merely that they can keep flesh and bones together. There is distress in Germany and, through unemployment, there is distress in Great Britain. There is unemployment in the United States.

Whatever distress the United States feels it will still be the least touched nation in the world. It will respond to Mr. Hoover's plea to feed the 3,500,000 starving children in central Europe and it will send what grain it can to starving China. It will do its best to pull Europe and Asia through what might be another dark age when civilization lapsed and peoples sank almost to an animal level.

The work which the United States can do can be done only because it preserves itself. We do not allow the Chinese to establish here the conditions under which they live in China. The gates are shut against them, although Americans always have proved their sympathy for the Chinese. We should only ruin the United States if we permitted an influx of Chinese. No one suggests that the gates be opened to them, not even now, when America realizes that they are starving.

If we have an overpowering moral duty which compels us to disregard our own considerations and to adopt domestic policies for the good of other people and not for our own good, the greatest moral obligation would be to the Chinese because they are the most wretched.

If our greatest moral duty is to preserve the United States the attitude we maintain towards the Chinese is the attitude we must adopt towards all immigration which would be a detriment.

We cannot safely receive great hordes driven by panic, destitution, and suffering. The incentive driving people out of Europe and Asia is not the incentive which makes citizenship in another land. It is panic and the people seeking refuge in the United States have not considered what will happen to them here. They merely seek to transfer their misery to what they think will be relief.

If they succeeded in transferring their destitution to the United States they might succeed in reproducing in the United States the conditions from which they seek to escape. Our proper policy is to keep our own country sound and to give what relief we can to misery where it is, in Europe and Asia.

The salvation of Europeans and Asiatics should be worked out where they are and it is not the moral duty of the United States to assemble all the wretchedness here, where the distressed peoples may propagate more distress and drag us down without being able to drag themselves up.

American nationalism should not be subjected to alien infusions in this critical time. The United States will do well to keep its own house in order and the first requirement is that its walls be sound. Americans who are trying to breach them are not considering the good of their country.

SEA POWER IS RELATIVE.

Sea power is relative. It does not meet an absolute standard. The strongest navy is made strongest by its relation to other navies. A specified number of ships may be needed for specific duties, cruising, patrolling, etc., and the number may be indicated by the character of the country they serve; but for battle purposes sea control needs only that the navy maintaining it be superior to any other navy.

If a fleet of twenty triremes were superior to any other fleet they eventually could have control. If every country doubled its navy the relation of fleet to fleet would remain unchanged and the only thing accomplished would be a waste of money.

Germany declined the British proposal for a naval holiday—and thereby made war unescapable—and in replying to the proposal said that Germany was not building against Great Britain but was merely meeting her maritime needs. That was not true. German maritime needs, if they did not contemplate war with Great Britain some time, were satisfied without a fleet which challenged the British.

The Japanese have said that they merely are meeting their maritime needs in building a great fleet. That again is not true. Unless Japan is building to take control of the Pacific from the United States a Japanese navy in its present relation to the American navy is sufficient. If we were building to attack Japan it would be different. Then the Japanese would build to repel us. That is not the case, and the Japanese know it is not the case.

If they try to change the relation of the Japanese fleet to the American fleet it is because they want to use the power which superiority would give them. The Americans would meet this building challenge, we hope and believe, but nothing then would be accomplished except a waste of money unless the Japanese and the Americans in their competitive building began to make the British uneasy. Then a great deal would happen.

If the Japanese and Americans keep building against each other they must ultimately be building against Great Britain unless the British waste money by building ships which are not needed except to keep the relation between the British fleet and the second fleet unchanged.

A naval holiday would accept the present relation, which is one fitted to the peaceful needs of the only three maritime powers. If they want to change the relation it is not for peace but for war. In any holiday we assume that the American naval intelligence would be comprehensive and that we could not be tricked. A Japanese admiral told a TRIBUNE correspondent that Japan would incline towards a naval holiday because she wanted to establish extensive ship works. That would not do.

Suspension must be actual suspension. If the Japanese took advantage of it to disguise war measures under commercial aspects or to lay the foundations upon which they could rapidly outbuild competitors at the finish of the agreement, the nations which accepted the agreement in complete good faith would soon be in danger.

We assume that our naval intelligence could prevent that and could keep subterfuges from being perilous to us. A naval agreement, kept in letter and spirit, would be a great pacifier. Rivalry in naval building may lead to war.

SABBATARIAN STRATEGY.

The attack for a change in Sunday habits begins in the District of Columbia, the favorite front for an assault to penetrate into the nation. The congressmen are the local law makers for their parliamentary home and when a moral question affecting it is presented to them they are forced into a peculiar attitude. If they do not accept for the District of Columbia a moral regulation they seem to reject it where it affects chiefly the agencies of government and the people engaged in government.

The government of the American democracy cannot afford to seem even lukewarm when a moral standard is presented for adoption. For that reason the district is an easy front in the strategy of reform. No one need be astonished if Sabbatarian regulations are imposed on it.

Although few citizens are affected a moral victory then has been gained and there is the committal of the government to a policy. If the city of Washington is deprived of street cars, newspapers, amusements and recreations which are taboo in the Puritan Sabbath, the government has established a standard of Sabbath observance.

The next favored point of attack is in the agrarian states where in small communities there is not much of the activity to be forbidden and where there is likely to be a strong tradition of old American conventions. That was the course taken by the liquor amendment. It carried the District of Columbia and the country districts before it came to the cities.

The cities were not paying much attention to it until war prohibition reached them and constitutional prohibition then was upon them before they realized it. This probably will be the course taken by Sabbatarian regulations and if the Sabbatarians are earnestly committed to their policy we may soon find many southern and western states strictly regulated by state laws, with the federal government committed to the policy for the district and a constitutional amendment urged to make the regulatory laws general and permanent.

The movement may fail, but we believe it will be tried seriously and earnestly and that it will receive support in some unexpected quarters. Middle aged Americans who were brought up under a stricter discipline than they are able to make prevail with the juveniles look at their successors with some dismay and apprehension.

Editorial of the Day

TEACHERS.

[From the Detroit News.]

In the matter of schools and education the people of the United States have had of late a chance to learn a lesson which it would be well to take to heart. Mr. P. P. Claxton, federal commissioner of education, in his annual report, says that while we shall need at once between 110,000 and 150,000 teachers, "we shall have at the outside less than 30,000 teachers available." Nor is this shortage to be made up easily. At the very least it takes two years of normal school training and several years of experience to make any one qualified to teach. So that even though we did increase salaries in 1919 and 1920, it will take some little time before conditions right themselves in the teaching profession.

Having made it necessary for many teachers to leave the profession in very recent years, and finding it impossible to fill our normal schools with students at that time whom we could use today as teachers, we are apparently up against it. If we are to maintain our educational ideals, the remedy for this shortage of teachers is too obvious to need pointing out.

WHAT ABOUT DISPENSING WITH THE REAR COLLARBUTTON?

Sir: Having made continual use of a suggestion appearing in the Line some years ago, I should like to hear what others think was the most useful thing ever printed in the Colyum. AT SURGEON GENERAL'S.

WALKING along B street S. W. in Washington I came within hearing distance of two ladies just as they approached the library and museum of the surgeon general, United States army. This is the conversation I overheard:

"'Library and museum of the surgeon general,'" read one. "A regular chamber of horrors," the other commented. The first lady was not certain she had been in there since before she was married, and that was twenty-five years ago. I decided to drop in and find out if it was a "chamber of horrors."

On entering I turned to the left and landed in the library without seeing what was in the museum. Here are some of the things I learned in two hours: A very extended, careful, detailed study indicated that the English middle classes are not dying out. Their birth rate is low, but it is high enough to keep up the population so long as they take care to keep the babies alive and healthy.

There are authorities who hold that a great middle class is necessary for the salvation of society. Some of these authorities hold that certain nations are in trouble because they have no great middle class to act as a balance between the aristocrats and the hoi polloi.

The information that the middle classes are surviving was not so horrible.

Next I found a very scientific study which proved that there can never be an inherited aristocracy of brains. The strength of the stock must be repeatedly recruited by marriage between persons of different social levels. The progeny of the proletariat contribute a share to the ranks of intellectuality, mental vigor, character, and leadership.

Having roamed around on the top shelf for a while, I concluded to drop down to the waist line. Here I found very definite scientific proof that we were not entirely beholden to milk for our welfare. While milk in proper quantities is the best of all foods, I learned that children could grow satisfactorily when fed other foods. The growth principle without which children will not grow, despite an abundance of carbohydrates, proteids, and fats, is found in good quantities in carrots, rutabaga turnips, all the yellow vegetables, potatoes, greens, pumpkins and squashes, salads, roots of various sorts, the leafy vegetables, the seeds—in fact, in a multitude of vegetables.

We are getting to be so crowded and artificial in the cities that we cannot keep our own cows, but many of us still have room enough for a few rows of vegetables. I learned, furthermore, that this growth principle is not destroyed by heating and drying. Therefore, children can grow when fed dried fruit and vegetables. Nor is it destroyed by cooking. We are not compelled to go around gnawing raw food, at least not in order to get growth principle.

I learned that it is not necessary to take an iron tonic through a quill or to swallow a bitter iron potion. Good meat and good vegetables are more effective, and they taste better.

I think these ladies ought to turn in to this building some time. Twenty-five years between visits is too long. There is plenty of helpful, hopeful stuff there. Of course, any person with a chamber of horrors mind could find what he was looking for.

PARALYSIS AND APOPLEXY.

A. W. B. writes: "What are the causes of paralysis and apoplexy?

"What is the distinction between the two?

"Are these diseases ever permanently cured?

"What treatment has been found beneficial?

"Has the severity of the first stroke any bearing on the probability of a recurrence?"

REPLY.

The paralysis which is limited to one arm, one leg, one side of the face, or all combined is generally the result of apoplexy. Apoplexy results from a break in one of the blood vessels of the brain or a clot forming in such a vessel or one carried to such a vessel. Both paralysis and apoplexy are loosely used words referring to this one sided paralysis caused as noted. In the proper sense apoplexy is not cured. However, the paralyzed member sometimes gets strong enough for all practical purposes. It is after treatment you have in mind. Graduated use of the paralyzed limb, patient practice, massage, passive motion, and electricity are serviceable. The blood vessel which was diseased enough to break in the first place is quite apt to break again. The nature of the first attack gives no indication of the severity of later attacks. Among underlying causes are venereal diseases, lead poisoning, heavy meat eating, constipation, high blood pressure.

SEVERAL VARIETIES OF HICCOUGHS.

Mrs. W. M. H. writes: "I have had two or three spells of hiccoughs every day for a year or more. How can I get rid of it? What causes it? I am 52 years old."

REPLY.

Hiccoughing results from a spasmodic contraction of the breathing muscles. Among the causes are stomach trouble, trouble with the esophagus and some conditions of the nerves. There are scores of successful procedures for simple hiccough. Among these are pulling the tongue hard and pressing hard on the nose, drinking water. For more difficult cases benzyl benzoate is given. Some persisting cases call for investigation because of conditions of which hiccough is a symptom.

MIGHT INCREASE EXERCISE.

J. F. K. writes: "I am 52 years of age. Never been ill since a young lad. Sleep fine. No pain of any kind. I walk a great deal, but no other kind of exercise. Do not smoke or drink and eat very little meat. Had my blood tested today. Doctor said it was high—160. Do you think I should exercise more—tennis, golf, etc.?"

REPLY.

A blood pressure of 160 is high, but not excessively so. Have your physical examination completed. If no organic disease is found take about 25 per cent more exercise, 25 per cent less meat and eggs, keep your bowels regular, and let it go at that.

CINDER ALLEY.

Chicago, Dec. 20.—[Friend of the People.]—The alley between Milwaukee avenue and Robey street is not paved, and the short crossing where hundreds of people pass daily is especially bad in rainy weather. I wish that something could be done about this before the slushy weather gets here. J. B.

Some one has dumped a load of cinders in the vacant lot at the point referred to which will remedy the condition.

"BE SURE YOU'RE RIGHT," ETC.

Chicago, Dec. 22.—[Friend of the Soldier.]—A man was drafted into the United States army and after a few weeks he was released through influence and bribery. His discharge states no reason why he was rejected and he is not a citizen. Is there any law against such proceedings? To whom should I report this case? G. P.

It is rather late to report such a case. There may be many reasons for his discharge about which you do not know.

The officer accepting such a bribe to release him would doubtless suffer heavy punishment. The United States army intelligence section, Washington, D. C., would investigate the case.

CALL FOR GEGRE PIOTROSKI.

PROVISION FOR THE CHILDREN.

Darlington, Wis., Dec. 20.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—Will you kindly advise if there is any state aid provided for the raising of little children when the father dies, leaving just a couple of thousand dollars? J. B.

Yes, on proper facts, under section 573-f of your 1917 statutes. Apply to the judge of the Juvenile or County court.
TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

MEDALS AND CLASPS.

Tunnell Hill, Ill., Dec. 20.—[Friend of the Soldier.]—I should like to know if the victory medals are given to all soldiers who served overseas or only to those who were in battles? M. J.

The victory medal is issued to all soldiers who served in the late war. Clasps to attach to the victory medal are awarded for major operations.

A SERIOUS CONDITION.

Geneva, Ill., Dec. 19.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—A man deserted his wife and children six years ago. The wife has no means of support except doing washing. Is there a mother's pension act whereby she could get relief? W.

No, the pension applies only to widows and wives of disabled husbands. Her remedy is by prosecution for wife abandonment.

MEMORY TESTS. CAN YOU ANSWER THESE?

DAIRY CATTLE.

1. What breed of dairy cattle produces more milk on the average and at less cost for 100 pounds than any other?
2. What other name is sometimes given the Jersey and Guernsey breeds?
3. Based on numbers, what breed of dairy cattle is most popular in America?
4. For what chief reasons is the Jersey popular?
5. The milk and butter of which breed of dairy cattle has the yellowest color?
6. From what country do the Ayrshire cattle come?
7. What dairy breed do we get from Switzerland?
8. Which dairy breed is peculiarly marked with a white belt between the coal black ends of its body?
9. What dairy breed originated in Ohio?
10. What is the smallest breed of dairy cattle?

ENGLISH—ANSWERS.

1. Which pronoun should be used in the following sentences: "I had rather it were (he, him) than (I, me); you must understand that this is between you and (I, me); I saw no one but (he, him)." I had rather it were he than I; you must understand that this is between you and me; I saw no one but him.
2. Supply who, whom, or which in the following sentences: "There stood John, —— they both hated, and —— I thought was not coming. I insist upon knowing —— you mean." The first sentence should read: There stood John, whom they both hated, and who I thought was not coming. The second sentence: I insist upon knowing whom you mean.
3. Is it correct to use the plural after singular nouns connected by "or" or "nor"? No, the singular should be used, as: Neither his father nor his mother is alive.
4. Is this correct: "Henry, as well as Mary, is coming?" It is correct because Henry is the subject of the verb.
5. What is the difference in meaning between "may" and "can"? "May" is used to ask permission; e. g., "May I go?" On the other hand, "can" implies ability; e. g., "Can you get there in time?"
6. What are the principal parts of the verb "lie"? What of the verb "lay"? "Lie" is intransitive; its principal parts are lie, lay, lain. "Lay" is transitive; its principal parts are lay, laid, laid.
7. How should one write: "He discovered it easy"? He discovered it easily.
8. When might "ain't" be used correctly? "Ain't" is a contraction of am not. It might be used correctly following the first person singular, as "I ain't"; however, good usage forbids this use. It is better to say "I am not." After he, she, it, we, you and they "ain't" should never be used under any circumstances.
9. What is the meaning of the three letters, p. p. c., which appear on visiting cards occasionally? The letters stand for the French words "pour prendre congé," to take leave; the person leaving his card so marked signifies his intention of leaving town.
10. What does the abbreviation "q. e. d." mean? It is from the Latin, quod exeat demonstrandum, which was to be proved.

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE

EARNED AMERICANISM.

Chicago, Dec. 20.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—"There is a well organized alienism in this country that will direct its concentrated influence upon congress and the executive to keep the gates open to their racial or religious kin. Americanism must defeat this influence," so said THE TRIBUNE in the editorial, "Americanism Awake," in its issue of Nov. 19.

The writer is an immigrant, and with due respect for THE TRIBUNE begs to differ on this subject. He came here when a boy. Reviewing his past, the rough road he traveled, he summarizes that his schooling of life and his experiences are about the same as of a great many more immigrants. Such an immigrant's life is entirely enveloped in the United States of America. He feels himself as grown together with this country, and as a rule often proves a better citizen than the inborn. And logically so. It was not accidental with him. He earned his Americanism, is conscious of its value, and realizes that his life can only be likened to the lives of the immigrant fathers of this country. They paved a way for a great America. Their sons wrote the constitution and the Declaration of Independence. The immigrants of today may pave the way for a still greater America.

The influence such citizens may have upon congress and the executive can only be wholesome and constructive. The racial or religious kin of such Americans are in many instances more desirable than those rich Americans who colonize the capitals of Europe.

Organized alienism, if it means the fraternal societies and orders maintained by the immigrant population in this country for their mutual aid and advancement, is a factor working in the interest of the United States.

LAMENTING OUR USE OF MONEY.

Lombard, Ill., Dec. 22.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—For several weeks you have been giving away $50 a day to the most polite person your reporter could find. This is $300 per week, not counting the salary of the reporter.

Seems to me this money could be put to much better use by helping some poor family to at least have a square meal for Christmas.

People are on the alert for your reporter while this is going on, but when it is over you will still find impolite people. Seems to me $5 or $10 a day is sufficient to give away, providing you do not give it to the poor. F. R. M.

SUGGESTING A CHECK ON MURDER.

Chicago, Dec. 21.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—The United States government has made so many reform laws to disturb common people's habits in eating, drinking, and behaving, so I think it's time to get laws for criminals, too.

We read in every day's papers that this class of people or monsters are doing as they please, murdering, stealing, raiding banks, stores, homes, etc., and if they happened to be caught there is always a "fake" bondsman or politician to release them.

And what, besides this, make the robbers so bold? Just that little concealed weapon, the automatic pistol, the terror of any honest man, invented and made for man killing, and man killing only. It is not a sport goods or a toy, but sporting stores and pawnshops are selling it freely to any youth, who wants it.

Why does the government allow the manufacture, selling, buying, and carrying of this death and sorrow bringing weapon, aiding lazy bandits to make a splendid living on hard working people's money, often killing their victims?

Why will not the government stop this kind of manufacturing and marketing of this menace making instrument, as it did with liquor? G. ROOS.

FOR A SPEAKERS' BEG PARDON DEPARTMENT.

Springfield, Ill., Dec. 20.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—Why is it that speakers at banquets and other public gatherings make such wild and unfounded statements as was made by Mr. Edward James Cattell, city statistician of Philadelphia, when speaking at the Congress hotel at the thirty-eighth annual banquet of the Chicago real estate board? He is reported in THE TRIBUNE of Dec. 20 to have said that if all the men in the United States would shine their own shoes the saving would be sufficient to pay the national war debt in one year. The facts are, if every man in the United States saved 10 cents per day throughout the year in this way it would not be enough to pay the interest on the war debt. A wild statement indeed for a statistician to make who is supposed to be a collector of facts.

If such ridiculous statements were not made about more important matters than the foregoing, it would be of little importance, but equally absurd ones are frequently made by public speakers concerning matters in which the people are vitally interested, that work injury to individuals and corporations. Many people read and accept as facts the things that are said by speakers without stopping to see if they are borne out by the facts, and impressions are thus created that do a great deal of harm in the U. S. A. There should be a federal statistician to follow up the careless ones and point out to the people their misleading utterances. It might have the effect to make them a little more careful about knowing and stating facts instead of fiction labeled facts.
J. W. HOSS.

THE INSPIRATION OF THE BLUE LAWS.

Chicago, Dec. 21.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—I quote from a recent Dr. Crane article: "Democracy means self-government. It means the people get what they want, and it is the only form of government under which they can. Other forms, such as monarchy, socialism, sovietism, benevolent tyranny, hierarchy and the like propose to give the people what is good for them."

The proposed blue laws, it would seem, then, are inspirations of sovietism and socialism and the like—an attempt to force upon us what is supposed to be good for us, rather than what we want!

The only possible defense I can see for prohibition is the good it is supposed to be to poor, weak humanity.

It is high time for Americans to voice their protest against a band of reformers, whose activities can only lead to the one end that America will be deprived of the reputation she has borne—that of Freeland.

Or will the subject not be regarded with seriousness until we find ourselves bound, hand and foot, by a multitude of selfish, narrow laws—which I might liken to the pygmies, who, though very small, were so numerous as to securely bind down the mighty Gulliver?

This is a political issue—religion must not enter into the discussion at all.

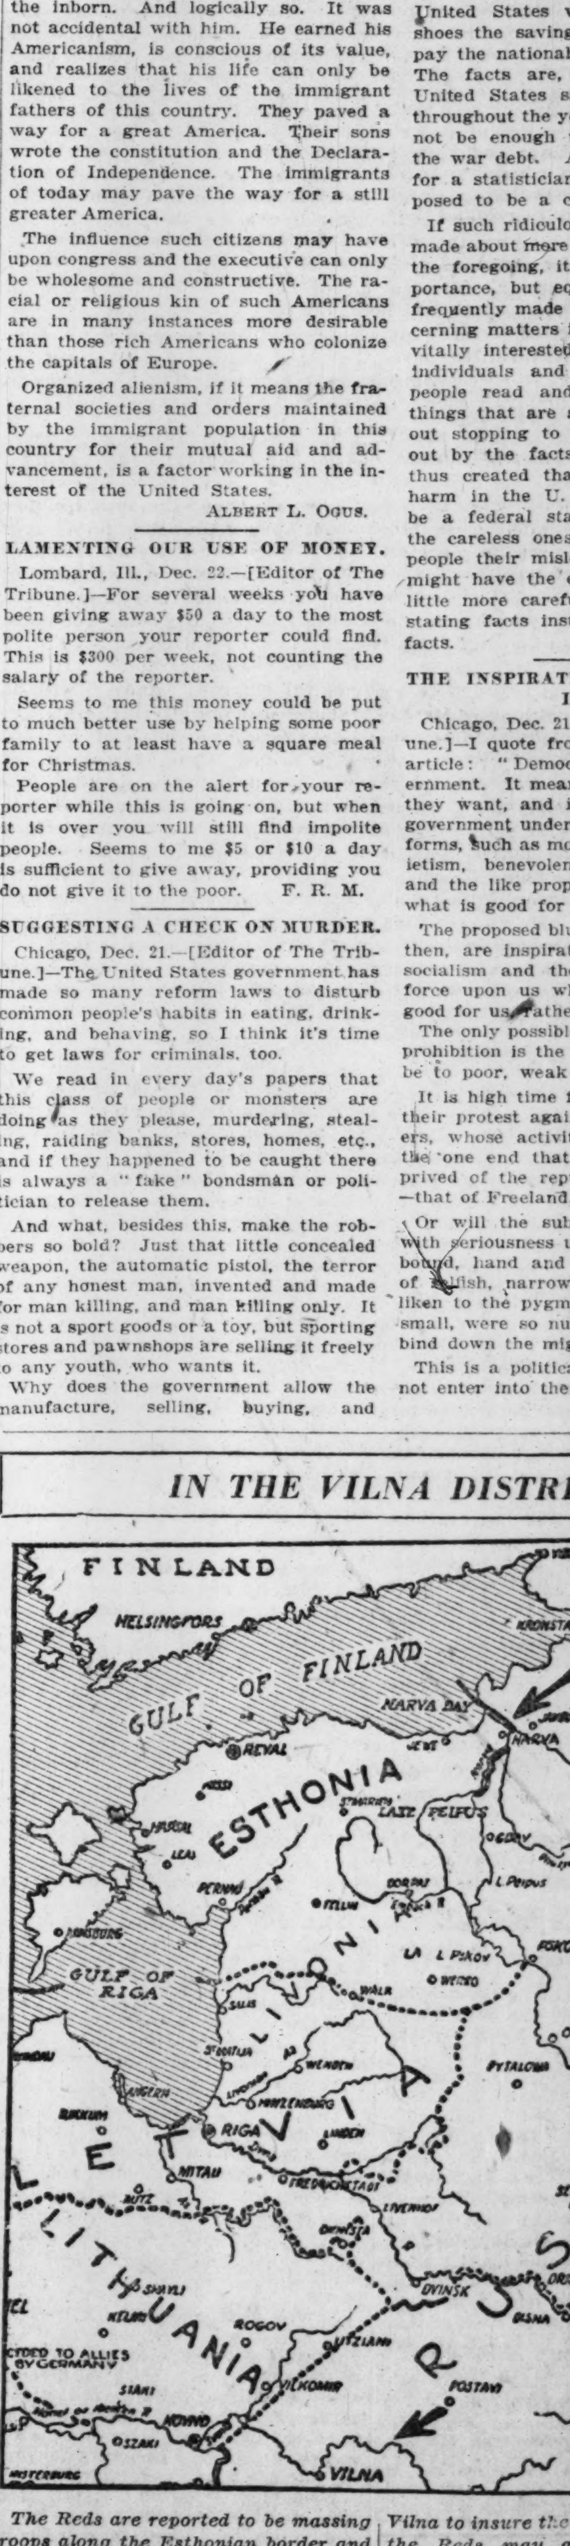
IN THE VILNA DISTRICT



The Reds are reported to be massing troops along the Esthonian border and against the Vilna district. Esthonia is at peace with Russia, and this move is causing alarm. The allied troops at Vilna to insure the plebiscite there fear the Reds may attempt some coup against them, as they already have assured Lithuania that Vilna shall go to it.

TABLOID BOOK REVIEW

BY FANNY BUTCHER.

Last week's six best sellers in a leading Chicago book store were:

FICTION.

"Main Street" [Harcourt, Brace & Howe], by Sinclair Lewis.
"Harriet and the Piper" [Doubleday-Page], by Kathleen Norris.
"Mary Wollaston" [Bobbs Merrill], by Henry Kitchell Webster.
"A Man for the Ages" [Bobbs Merrill], by Irving Bacheller.
"Woman" [Seltzer], by Magdeline Marx.
"Erskine Dale, Pioneer" [Scribner's], by John Fox Jr.

NONFICTION.

"Tales of a Vanishing River" [Lane], by Earl Reed.
"The Sea and the Jungle" [Dutton], by H. M. Tomlinson.
"The Letters of William James" [Atlantic Monthly Press].

Last week's six best circulators at the public library were:
"Margot Asquith: An Autobiography."
"Outline of History," by H. G. Wells.
"Steeplejack," by James Huneker.
"Main Street," by Sinclair Lewis.
"Potterism," by Rose Macaulay.
"The Age of Innocence," by Edith Wharton.

WITH the special fancy dress literary parties of Christmas past, with the spring styles in fiction, imported and made in the U. S. A., merely sketched, with many of the late fall styles entirely out of date, the next few weeks may properly be devoted by the reader who must have the very latest come what twaddle may, to the rejuvenation of old friendships or to the cementing of new ones with rereadings or with further explorations into the special literary country which has been most interesting during the hectic "season." There will soon be new novels, new biographies, new soul rending confessions—there always will be. "The crowds," as Bernard Shaw said in "Antony and Cleopatra," "the crowds along the Appian Way are ever the same age."

"Pins for Wings," by Emanual Morgan, is a collection of labels which have been pinned onto his fellow poets by Witter Bynner. Emanual Morgan, you remember, was the half of the Spectra hoax. Whenever Mr. Bynner wants to cavort he puts on his Morgan makeup and trips all over the place. These pins for wings are "just terribly clever," as the members of the flapperage would say. Sometimes they are charming, sometimes very deft, and sometimes just "just." They are dedicated to William Marion Reedy—very beautifully—"a mirror breathed upon by death but undimmed." Caricatures by Bill Saphier and Ivan Opffer do the pin pricking that Mr. Bynner omits. Mr. Bynner does noble by himself, thus: "God

And he does up Arthur Symons thus:
"enchanted Roquefort."

It's all very amusing—even when you can understand it!

The old home of Walt Whitman in Camden has been sold to the city and will be converted into a museum which is to be a memorial to the good gray poet. This is the little two story frame house in which the poet spent his last years. When he was no longer able to walk or drive through the streets of Camden he sat by the window and looked out at the world as it passed. There visitors found him in the little room which has been described by those who saw it as "an old sea captain's cabin." He sat propped up in a large rocking chair, with a warm bearskin rug thrown across the back, and talked to his visitors or corrected proofs of the latest edition of "Leaves of Grass." Around him was an enormous library of clippings filed in old envelopes and stacked in apparent disorder on the tables, the chairs, and the floor. But the aged poet always knew just where to find any clipping that he wanted. The walls were bare except for portraits of his mother and father and a small canvas of a maternal ancestor This was the first home the poet ever owned—the realization of a dream of sixty-five years. He was deeply attached to what he called his "shanty." Miss Whitman has given the city a number of portraits of her uncle and many other little relics which were in her possession. A committee will maintain it as a literary shrine.

"The Americanization of Edward Bok, an Autobiography," is the most ingenuous piece of literature that I have ever read. It is, first of all, written in the third person, which gives it an exotic air, as though the author-subject were willing to say infinitely nicer things about himself thus than he would if he used the personal pronoun constantly. It is more like those old fashioned Alger books than anything I have ever read. Edward Bok was the original of the whole series of them—the bright lad who let no opportunity pass to turn an honest penny, the boy who, always a candidate for the fifty dollar politeness prize, found virtue its own overflowing reward. I cannot imagine a boy's story more thoroughly "uplifting" than Edward Bok's autobiography. It is a romance of diligence and hard work repaying the diligence. And yet with all of its supergoodness, with all of Mr. Bok's almost maudlin glorying in his own morality, it is a volume full of fascination—for the first two-thirds of the book. The last third, in which he explains how the Ladies' Home Journal ran the country during the late war, is, to say the least, a trifle out of perspective. The early struggles of the boy and the young man are more like fiction than fact. He, for instance, was the person who originated the idea of using theater programs for advertising purposes. The newspaper syndicate feature—in its highest form—was his idea. He got the best writers available and syndicated them, working at night on his journalism while he was working as a stenographer during the day. He was the first magazine editor to carry a story back into the advertising sections—one of the most revolutionary ideas in the entire history of magazine advertising. He was undoubtedly a great force in the magazine world, but his autobiography is a trifle colored by the ego complex. You'll enjoy it, though, more than you would a novel.

"The Pleasures of Collecting," by Gardner Teall, is a volume of pleasant chats about china, pewter, furniture, all of the what-nots that collectors delight in. It is a book for the incipient amateur. One especially alluring group of curios that he talks about are wax portraits. After just reading "The Romance of Madame Tussaud" wax portraits have a vivid appeal. Those famous wax works, visited by tourists great and small for three generations, have a real romance in their cases. The story of old Madame Tussaud is a charming one, written by her grandson, rich with anecdotes of the great who sat for their modelings.

A. E. Gallatin's "Portraits of Whistler," which has previously been privately printed, is now obtainable in a limited edition de luxe. It is a book which any one interested in Whistleriana must have. Another handsome volume with an appeal to a special group is "The Bookplates of Frank Brangwyn," which contains reproductions of the bookplates of the man who turns his brush or his etching needle or his wood-carving knife to his fancy.

Karl Edwin Harriman, friend of writers, struggling as well as arrived, told me this bit of news about Knut Hamsun and "Hunger." The English translation was published in 1899. It was done by George Egerton, who gave him an autographed copy of the book. Stephen Crane read it, became so passionately devoted to what he considered the greatest thing he'd ever read of the sort that he made special pilgrimages to such people as Henry James and the older London luminaries, carrying a copy of the book with him and reading from it; in other words, using it as a testament to preach the gospel of Hamsun. Even the fiery missionary spirit of that great artist did little more than ruffle the dumb calm of the artistic puddle. Soon the little flurry was forgotten. Mr. Harriman kept that book; the very one that had been Stephen Crane's evangel book. He showed it to me, and I hold it in my hand now.

Two words from W. L. George's memorable lecture on Anatole France will always remain in my mind as the most brilliant, terse, critical label ever pinned to an author. What characterizes Anatole France, he said, throughout his varied and widely differentiated literary career is his "cosmic irony." "Cosmic irony"—there you have him. Not the often futile and almost always ephemeral irony of most men who do brilliant pictures of their own people or their own time, but an irony of the cosmos, of things as they are, as they always have been, as they always will be.

Anatole France is a writer who is talked about in America but not read. There is no end of literary four-flushing among our so-called "intellectuals," and Anatole France is one of the writers about whom most of it is done. He is so fundamentally great, however, that no amount of balderdash by people who haven't read him can spoil him when you actually do discover him.

His "Penguin Island," just to mention one book every one talks of with an air of cognizance, and which has been read by probably one-tenth of that number, is the most brilliant satire on the human race that I have ever read. But one might name over ten absolutely unlike pieces of work, and all masterpieces. Sufficient if this hint leads any one to a real friendship with him.

Three new volumes in the Bodley Head translation have been added this fall, "The Seven Wives of Bluebeard" (from authentic documents), which contains many marvelous tales; "The Bride of Corinth," the only volume of his poems, I believe, which has been translated. It contains five poems, metaphysical and religious, and three prose plays, among them that wholly delightful "The Man Who Married a Dumb Wife." And, finally, "Little Pierre," that charming record of his own youth, the latest volume to be published in France. "Little Pierre" is like, and yet unlike, "Pierre Noziere"—like because any somewhat autobiographical record of youth is bound to be like any other.

There was much excitement in Paris a few weeks ago when there was discovered in the old files of Les Lettres et les Arts a novel by Anatole France which has never been included in his works. "Marguerite" it was called. It will be published in an edition of 550 copies. It is a story related by an unknown individual whose manuscript M. France pretends to have found in a railway train.

Some idea of the value of really valuable rare books may be had from the fact that the British museum, in a few cases in the king's library, is displaying first editions worth more than a million dollars. On the other hand, rare books aren't half such treasure trove as rare postage stamps. Twenty-two thousand dollars has just been paid in Paris for a twopenny Mauritius stamp and $5,000 for a penny stamp in the same series.

POEMS YOU OUGHT TO KNOW

THE PARADOX OF TIME.

By Austin Dobson.

Time goes, you say? Ah, no!
Alas! Time stays, we go;
Or else, were this not so,
What need to chain the hours,
For youth were always ours?
Time goes, you say?—ah, no!

Ours is the eyes' deceit
Of men whose flying feet
Lead through some landscape low;
We pass, and think we see
The earth's fixed surface flee;
Alas! Time stays—we go!

Once, in the days of old,
Your locks were curling gold,
And mine had shamed the crow;
Now, in the selfsame stage,
We've reached the silver age;
Time goes, you say?—ah, no!

Once, when my voice was strong,
I filled the woods with song
To praise your "rose" and "snow";
My bird that sung is dead;
Where are your roses fled?
Alas! Time stays—we go!
See in what traversed ways,
What backward fate delays
The hopes we used to know;
Where are our old desires—
Ah! where those vanished fires?
Time goes, you say?—ah, no!

How far, how far, O sweet,
The past behind our feet
Lies in the even-glow!
Now, on the forward way,
Let us fold hands and pray;
Alas! Time stays—we go!

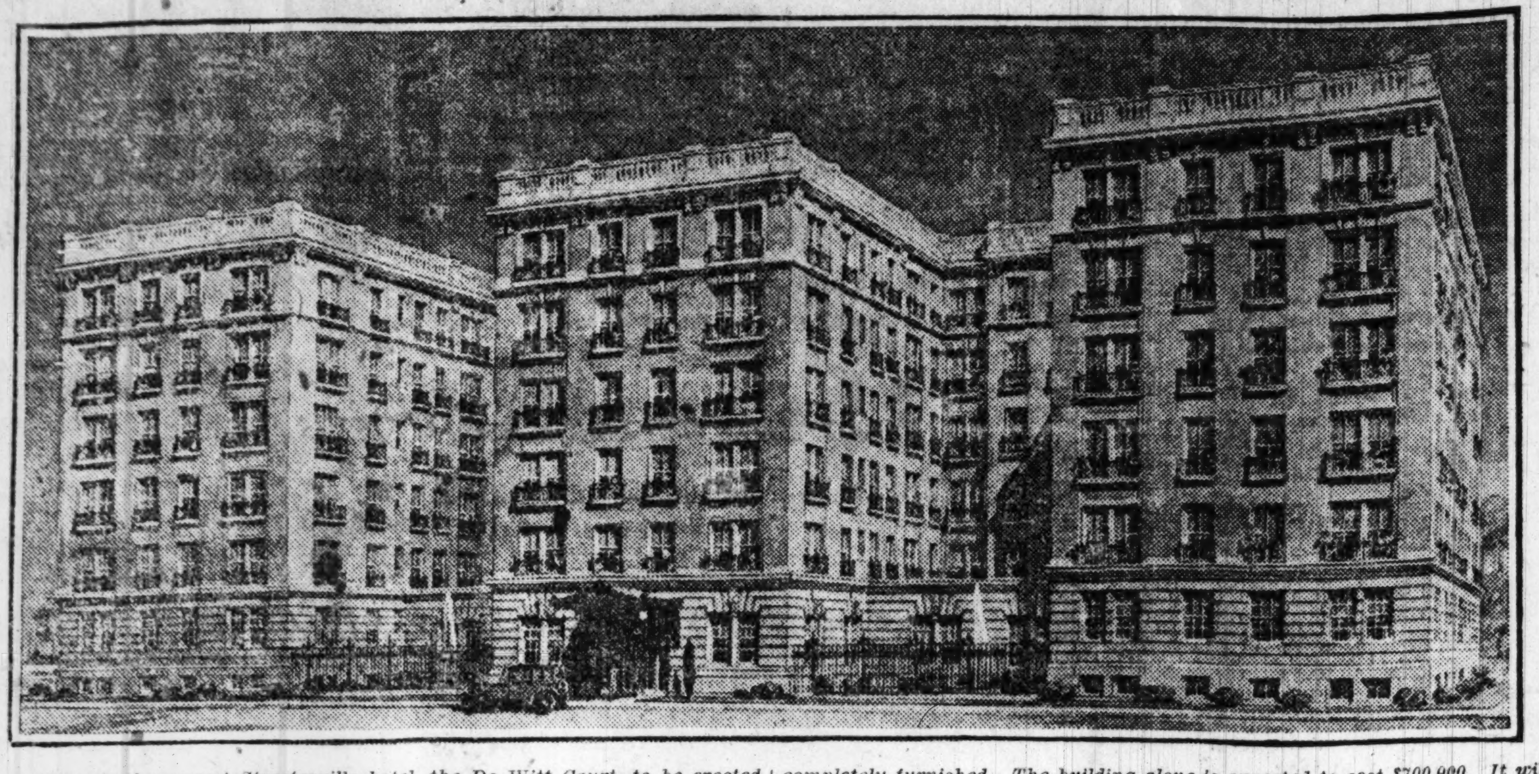
REAL ESTATE NEWS



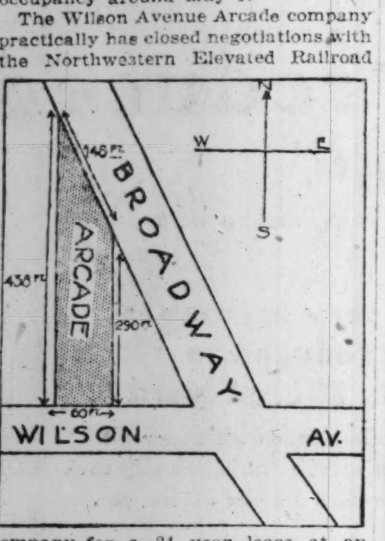
Above is the newest Streeterville hotel, the De Witt Court, to be erected from plans by Architect Henry J. Schlacks, in De Witt court, fronting west, between Delaware place and Chestnut street. It will have 104 apartments, all completely furnished. The building alone is expected to cost $700,000. It will be half a block west of the Lake Shore drive and about two blocks from the new Drake.

PLAN $130,000 48 SHOP ARCADE IN JUNIOR LOOP

Will Run from Broadway to Wilson Avenue.

BY AL CHASE.

Here's our Junior loop coming forward with another interesting real estate and building proposition in the shape of a $130,000 concrete arcade running from Wilson avenue to Broadway and containing forty-eight shops. According to Albert I. Doerr, manager of the Wilson Avenue Real Estate company, and the prime mover in the project, the arcade will be ready for occupancy around May 1.



The Wilson Avenue Arcade company practically has closed negotiations with the Northwestern Elevated Railroad company for a 24 year lease at an annual rental of $15,000 for the strip of land fronting sixty feet on the north side of Wilson avenue, east of the L structure, at numbers 1114-16 and extending north to Broadway. The land has a frontage on Broadway of 156 feet and will be at 4646-54 Broadway. It is 290 feet long on the east and 438 feet on the west.

All Night Thoroughfare.

Down the center of the strip will be a fifteen foot mosaic paved, brilliantly lighted thoroughfare, open at both Wilson avenue and Broadway, and flanked on each side by attractive shops. Lights will be kept burning all night in case any of the tenants, such as cigar stores or drug stores, run on a twenty-four hour schedule, and the arcade it is expected will be much used by L patrons as a short cut from Wilson to Broadway, both night and day.

The shops will be about 22½ feet deep and will vary in width. Rentals will run from $75 a month up to $150. Heat, water, and janitor service will be furnished free. The concrete elevated structure of the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul railroad runs directly over the west twenty feet of the proposed arcade.

Study European Arcades.

"We plan to make it one of the finest arcades in the country," said Mr. Doerr. "We have made a careful study of some of the finest European arcades, especially the one in Milan, and while we don't expect ours to be as imposing as some of the European ones so far as height goes, we are planning to make it the equal in beauty and comfort of any.

"We are going to have about the most attractive shop windows of any in the country and the lighting system is going to be especially interesting. If our present tentative plans are carried out, a walk through the Wilson avenue arcade will be like taking a stroll along an old world thoroughfare.

Restrictions Planned.

"There has been a demand already for about 60 per cent of the space and we are placing enough restrictions on tenants to guarantee the arcade will have none but the very highest class shops."

Albert I. and George W. Doerr, his brother, were instrumental last spring in getting the old Siegel-Cooper store building back into life again as a merchandise mart and handled the entire project for the Leiter estate. George W. Doerr is now in Montreal, Canada.

Theatrical Hospital Association Gets Site

A site for a new hospital building for the American Theatrical Hospital association was secured yesterday when the association took title to the 50x130 feet occupied by a residence at 846-48 Irving Park boulevard, just east of the building of the American hospital at 850 Irving Park boulevard.

Several years ago the association, which cares for needy actors, bought an $8,000 equity in the residence property, leaving a $12,000 mortgage in the name of former Judge Charles N. Goodnow. This mortgage has been taken up.

At present the association rents the fourth floor of the American hospital. The residence just bought is used as a nurses' home. Judge Joseph Sabath is president of the association.

Kedzie and Forty-seventh Corner Sold at Big Profit

Twenty years ago Frank J. Kohn, now vice president of the Peoples Stock Yards State bank, bought the 102x125 at the northwest corner of Kedzie avenue and West Forty-seventh street, for the Schlitz Brewery company of Milwaukee, for $2,800. Yesterday Robert Uihlein of Milwaukee sold this property to Stergios Bros. for a reported $45,000. Joseph F. Forbrich of the Peoples Real Estate, Loan and Insurance company, and William F. King, were brokers.

Audience Laughs Beardslee Banquet Schedule to Pieces

With the Sunday real estate section gone to press several hours before and the news section so full of news that the city editor scorns anything but the hottest kind of a stickup yarn, a story turned in by a real estate editor at 10:45 on a Saturday night doesn't create much excitement in the local room.

BYRON V. KANALEY [Koehne Photo.] LOUIS B. BEARDSLEE. [Koehne Photo.]

This department's report of the thirty-eighth annual banquet of the Chicago Real Estate board failed to appear at all in last Sunday's paper. Although it's pretty late for news, this is the big realty festivity of the year, so here's something about it.

It had some unusual features. For instance, there was a toastmaster, Byron V. Kanaley, who failed to tell a funny story. He promised when he started things going that he wouldn't, and he kept his promise. At that, he got more laughs than the usual joke repeating toastmaster.

Louis B. Beardslee, who promised every one on "Boul. Mich. by 10:30," sat with a stop watch in his hand and a worried look in his eye, but when Edward James Cattell of Philadelphia got started talking the banqueters laughed the Beardslee schedule to pieces. The Pennsylvania "parcel of sunshine" brought a chuckle with his first words, the audience roared and yelled and applauded till the peroration, and then many a handkerchief wiped away tears not caused by laughter.

Senator Howard Sutherland of West Virginia at the last minute wired Mr. Beardslee he could not be present. Col. Abel Davis, vice president of the Chicago Title and Trust company, took his place as speaker. He gave a behind the scenes view of the "con-con" doings at Springfield and brought applause from the audience and a tribute from Mr. Cattell.

The Rev. George Craig Stewart of Evanston gave the invocation and both the new president, Lewis M. Smith, and the retiring executive, Adolph F. Kramer, spoke briefly.

"It's up to all of us, including bankers and merchants, to put a stop to this cry for legislation against improved real estate for housing purposes," said Mr. Kramer. "It is socialistic propaganda, and I'm firmly convinced that the people behind this movement are either misguided individuals or ordinary dupes of foreign societies that are trying to disrupt our republic.

"If there is no vicious legislation, and if there is free competition in the purchasing and manufacture of building material, with an easy money market, I predict an era of prosperity for the builders and real estate men such as we have never seen before."

REALTY BOARD SAYS HIGH INTEREST PUTS BRAKES ON BUILDING

After much discussion the Cook County Real Estate board at its last meeting passed resolutions, introduced by I. Whiteson, declaring that an impression was being created in the public mind, as the result of a few banks and mortgage investment companies offering bonds to net 7 per cent, that 7 per cent is the normal prevailing rate for all first mortgage loans, irrespective of the character of the property or the margin of security back of such investments.

The resolutions state that excessive interest rates for real estate loans delay building operations, discourages home ownership, depresses real estate values, and lessens its attractiveness as an investment.

The resolutions end with the following: "Resolved, with local funds for real estate loans abundantly ample and available, we urge our members to extend their circle of inquiry and to discourage wherever possible the payment of a rate of interest above 6 per cent."

Pained, but Ready to Eat

Chicago, Dec. 23.—[Real Estate Editor.]—Recent articles in your paper stating that the cost of building was going down give me a pain.

I tried to build a bungalow last summer and found it cost too much. Recently I asked my architect to get bids again. He did, with the result that the plumbing, which last summer would have cost $560, would now cost $700, and the millwork that was offered at $700 now is $800.

A friend who got bids on an apartment hotel found the cost of elevators is just double what it was a few months ago.

Also I have another grievance to air. Your paper and others quote building material prices as sent you by the dealers or some association or other. I read where cement was quoted as cut to $3. I'll eat all I could buy this week at less than $4, with 25 cents off for return of the sacks.

Building prices won't come down until the United States government busts the three ring trust of manufacturers, contractors, and labor unions. And there won't be any building boom next spring unless Uncle Sam busts it.

THE MAN WHO TRIED TO BUILD.

Goodrich Rubber Company Renews Boul. Mich. Lease

The B. F. Goodrich Rubber company of Akron, O., has closed a new lease with Ferdinand W. Peck for the three story building at 1925-27 South Michigan avenue for fifteen years from Jan. 1, at a rental understood to be more than $15,000 a year, the lessee to pay taxes, insurance, and operating expenses, in addition. The property is 55½x160. The original lease was at $10,800 a year. Ferdinand W. Peck Jr. negotiated the new lease directly with officials of the company at Akron.

Beg Your Pardon

M. G. Condon of the Sturges & Burn Manufacturing company, writes regarding the story about Columbus park in last Sunday's real estate department: "Evidently the Harrison street surface car line was overlooked. This line runs to Central avenue, which is the eastern boundary of the park. While the service on this line is not altogether desirable, it could be improved if traffic to Columbus park would warrant. Furthermore, on the Garfield park L there is a station at Central avenue which, I think, is the proper station to get off at when Columbusing from town."

The name of the architects of the new Federal Reserve bank building, Graham, Anderson, Probst & White, was inadvertently omitted from the story of the new structure written by the financial department, which appeared in the news section of THE TRIBUNE last week.

A-B POLISH COMPANY TO BUILD.

The A-B Polish company is to start work at once on additions and alterations to its plant at 1515 Haddon avenue, near Milwaukee avenue, to cost approximately $42,000. The plans by Architect G. E. Pearson call for 15,000 feet additional floor space.

Streeterville to Have New Six Story Apartment Hotel

Work will start simultaneously next month on a $700,000 apartment hotel for Streeterville and several hundred thousand dollars' worth of furniture to go into it. According to Architect Henry J. Schlacks, who has designed the De Witt court hotel, as much attention is being paid to detail in the design and construction of the furniture as to the building itself. The furnishings are to be on an unusually elaborate scale, all of the 104 apartments to be rented completely equipped.

The new hotel will front 219 feet on De Witt court, facing west, extending from Delaware place to Chestnut street, with a 100 foot south frontage on Chsetnut and 95 feet north frontage on Delaware place.

Apartments will have from two to five rooms, all with kitchenettes, and in addition there will be a general kitchen with service by electric dumb waiter to every apartment if wanted. There will be a filtration plant and refrigerating machinery serving all apartment refrigerators and furnishing cold drinking water.

The kitchenette dining rooms are to have Westfield green and Alabama cream white marble floors with tile walls. All cases in the kitchenettes are to be of enameled metal. All baths are to be tile. There will be a beauty parlor, a tailor shop, and other hotel conveniences on the main floor.

A fountain will splash in each of the two courts fronting on De Witt. The Builders' Directing company is the owner of the property and will erect the hotel. Work is planned to start about the middle of January and Architect Schlacks hopes to have it finished by next fall.

South Side Factory for Miles Piston Ring Co.

J. J. Harrington has purchased the northeast corner of State and Fifty-fourth streets, 98x161, on which he is having erected a one and two story building covering the entire lot, which he has sold to the Miles Piston Ring company, who will occupy the premises as soon as completed. The company makes piston rings for about fifteen automobile concerns. J. J. Harrington & Co. represented both parties.

The Gill Piston Ring company has just completed an addition to its plant at 8300 South Chicago avenue. This company owns 1,450 feet in South Chicago avenue between Eighty-third and Eighty-fifth streets, and plans further additions next year.

Lansing Truck Co. Buys Morris & Co. Warehouse

The Lansing Truck company of Lansing, Mich., has taken title through Harry E. Moore to the four story warehouse property in South State street, west front, 216 feet north of Sixteenth street, from Morris & Co., for an indicated $50,000. The property extends forty-two feet back to the South Side L structure.

CHICAGO BANK CLEARINGS

Chicago bank clearings for last week totaled $476,528,538, a decrease of $141,696,496 from the preceding week, due largely to the fact that last week contained the Christmas holiday, and also a decrease of $89,228,057 from the corresponding week in 1919. Useless Gifts

Manufacturers have done a lot of useless giving in the past few years by way of unnecessary handling of materials, due to badly laid out plants. They cannot continue this, however, if they expect to show a profit, but must make their spending cover certain definite accomplishments, without wastage.

Economical manufacturing can only be carried on in factories that fit. To show a profit, it is also necessary that the first cost of factories be reasonable.

No useless gifts in the way of material or labor go into the plants that we design.

FOR SALE

A complete line of over 300 high grade formulas for the production of commercial chemical products. These formulas represent a very great expenditure of money and have to be sold immediately at any sacrifice. They are suitable for either large or small scale production, or they can be re-sold to individual buyers of single formulas. A fine proposition for a chemist or a pharmacist who wants to go into a chemical service business supplying the formulas by direct mail methods. Also a completely equipped office goes with the purchase. For immediate appointment

Investors Want All the Facts.

If all the sound utility companies whose securities are held by small investors will make public complete reports next year they probably will improve the market standing of their bonds and stocks. A majority of these companies already furnish fairly complete data for publication in the manuals, but some either refuse altogether or supply data only on special request and not for publication.

The giving of a statement occasionally on request is far from filling the requirements of the situation. If an investor wants to know the condition of a company and finds all the facts in the public manuals he has not only the report for the last year, but similar data for five or six years preceding, and can see instantly whether the position of the securities has been improving or deteriorating. If he can get only the latest report he is in the dark as to the past, and therefore has only a narrow basis for an estimate of the future.

There is need of great care in selecting utility securities. Bonds of the better companies are among the most conservative of investments, but those of unsound companies are not. This year is closing with about $500,000,000 of utility bonds in default. Investors need all possible data in making their selections.

Colorado and Southern.

F. B., Duluth, Minn.: The Colorado and Southern refunding and extension 4½s are secured by first collateral lien on 1,250 miles of road, a second lien on 1,000 miles, and a second collateral lien on other mileage. As the road has usually covered fixed charges with a wide margin of safety, these bonds are well secured. At 72½ they yield 7¾ per cent.

Brief Answers.

S. H., Springfield, Ill.—The American Steel Foundries company has been paying cash dividends of 75 cents a share quarterly on its common stock of $33 1-3 par ever since that stock was issued last year. Recently it declared a 12 per cent dividend in stock payable Dec. 31.

O. B.—Wilson & Co., first mortgage bonds, and New York Telephone debentures have been reviewed. Both are well secured.

FINANCIAL N·OTES

Stockholders of the Standard Oil Company of California will be asked at a special meeting March 30 to authorize an increased capitalization of $15,000,000. The additional stock is to be sol dto employés on the installment plan.

A director of the American Sumatra Tobacco company states there is every reason now why the company should continue the 10 per cent dividend rate on its common stock. The next quarterly payment, he says, involves a disbursement of only $375,000, as against earnings for the quarter ended Oct. 31 of $1,147,000, and the company is in a strong cash position, with current assets of more than $18,500,000, as against current liabilities of about $4,500,000.

Distribution of Cities Service company bankers' shares to be made Jan. 1 will be made to 16,914 shareholders of record. This is an increase of 1,278 shareholders of record over the number to which distribution was made on Nov. 1 last and an increase of 11,378 shareholders of record since Jan. 1, 1920, the number of shareholders on that date having been 5,538.

R. G. Dun & Co. report 374 commercial failures in the United States this week, against 360 last week, 326 for the preceding week, and 92 for the corresponding week last year.

James L. Martin will enter the firm of Pynchon & Co. on Jan. 1 as a general partner. The business of James L. Martin & Co. will be discontinued on that date.

CHICAGO CURB STOCKS

Local unlisted securities reflected the tendency of the New York market, being weak, with many declines the forepart of the week, but closing at generally higher prices. Butler Brothers sold down to 31¼, but quickly advanced to sales at 34½, latest quotations were 33½@34½. Kellogg Switchboard and Supply was traded in between 37 and 40, stock was wanted at this price, with light offerings at the close. Wahl preferred sold at 80, this price was bid, ex-dividend, at the close, with offerings at 83. Goodyear Tire and Rubber was very active, preferred selling as low as 38, but later rallied to sales at 47. The common ranged between 15¾ and 23, at the close the preferred was offered for sale at 45 and the common at 21. Willys corporation preferred was also active, sales ranging between 15 and 19, stock was offered at 17, with little interest on the buying side. Consumers preferred was steady at 76 to 80, while Brunswick-Balke was offered at 90. Little change was noted in the sugar issues, Holland-St. Louis being traded in at 8⅜, and Columbia between 11 and 12. Michigan was easier at 8 to 8½.

In the motor issues Reo improved a point to sales at 18, closing at 17¾ to 18¼. Packard common changed hands between 10 and 11, while the preferred ranged between 67 and 74. Paige-Detroit sold down to 14, but closed stronger at 15 bid, 17 asked.

Public utility sales were as follows: Cities Service common, 234-236; preferred, 63-64; Standard Gas common, 10½-11; preferred, 30½-31; United Light common, 15½-16; preferred, 48-49; American Light and Traction common, 84-86; preferred, 72-74; Commonwealth Power common, 9½-11; preferred, 27½-28½.

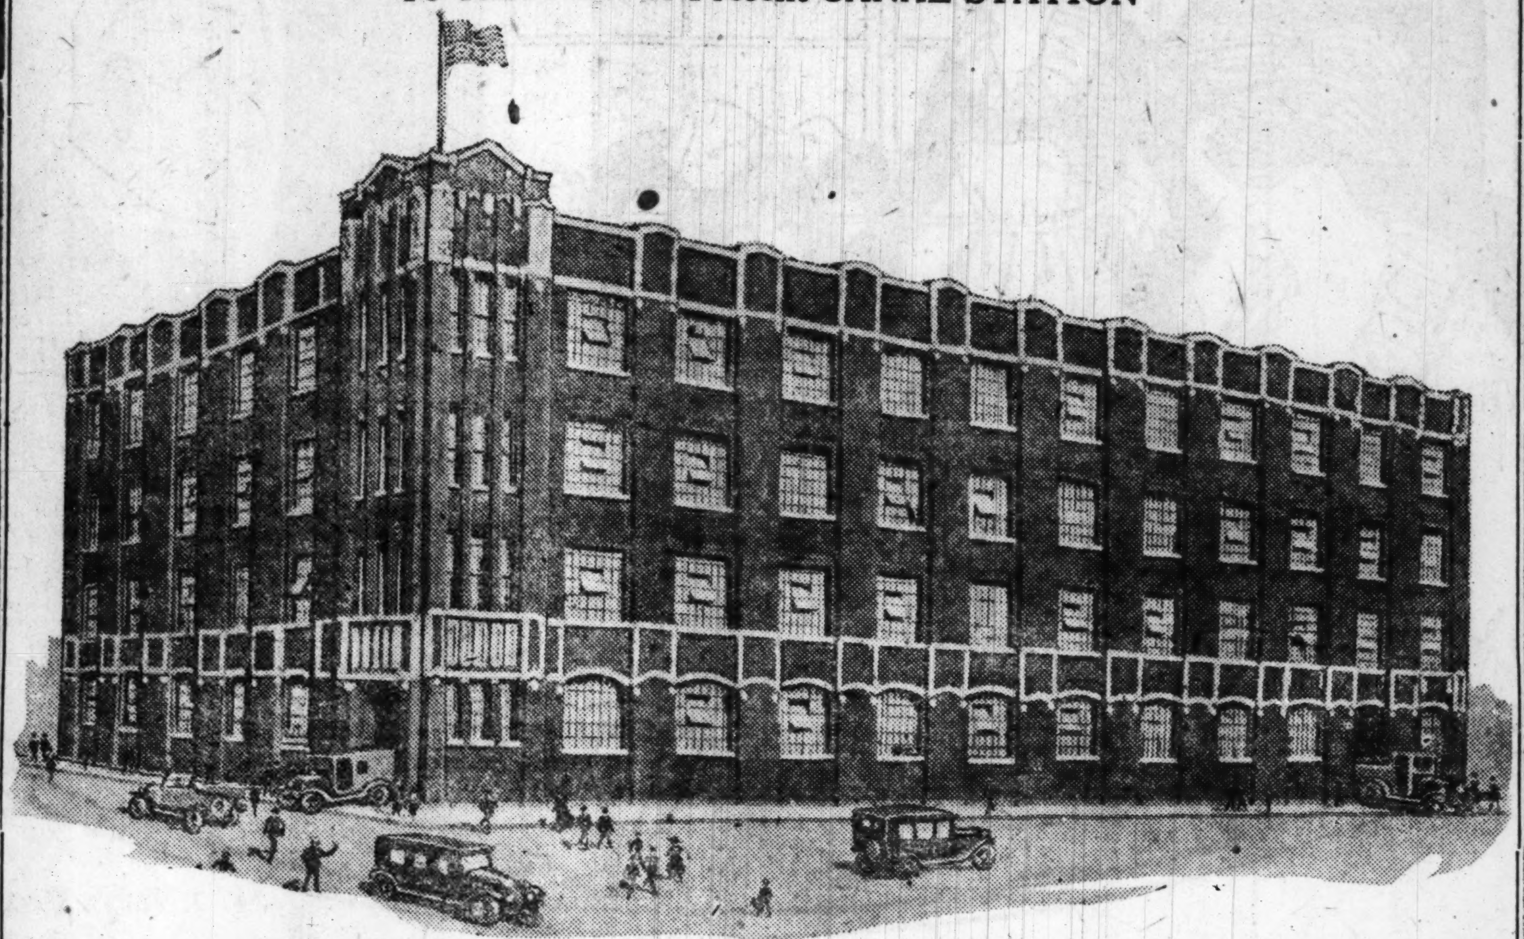
Quincy Station Building First Mortgage 7% Gold Bonds

Secured by Building, Land and Equipment Located at Northeast Corner of Jefferson and Quincy Streets, Chicago, Leased as a

United States Government Postoffice

To Take Place of Present CANAL STATION



Income ASSURED Through Non-Cancelable Lease to Government

The building has been leased to the Government for twenty years at $125,000 per annum, or $2,500,000 for the term. The yearly income is over two and one-half times the greatest annual interest charge and the term rental is sufficient to pay the entire bond issue almost three and one-half times. This lease is ironclad and non-cancelable. It will run uninterruptedly for twenty years. Thus the earnings are a certainty.

Chicago's Largest Postoffice Station

The new Quincy Station, which will take the place of the world famous Canal Station now housed in the Union Depot, will be the largest postoffice station in Chicago. It will be four stories and basement in height, constructed of brick, stone and steel, and conforms fully to the specifications of the United States Postoffice Department.

Security is valued greatly in excess of bond issue and decreased so rapidly each year that at final maturity only $400,000 of the bonds are outstanding.

Unequaled Location

The location is just across the river from the loop, one hundred feet from the new Union Station and three blocks from the Chicago & North Western Terminal, in the world's greatest transportation center. This is a section which, although crowded with huge mercantile and manufacturing buildings, will witness within the next decade development of vast proportions as part of the plans for the "City Beautiful" and the new Union Depot.

Denominations, $100, $500 and $1,000. Maturities, one and one-half to ten years. Federal income tax of 4% paid by mortgagor.

In our opinion—and our long experience, intimate knowledge of investments and superior facilities enable us to speak with authority—this is the most attractive first mortgage investment ever offered. If you have money to invest, you cannot, in justice to yourself, overlook this opportunity. Come direct to our office, or if this is not possible, telephone or write.

A Grapefruit Grove on your pantry shelf

Now you can have perfect, tree-ripened grapefruit—in bottles—ready to serve

Here it is—at last.

It is in bottles. Keep a case on hand. Snap off the cork, and you have the most delicious grapefruit you ever tasted, the pure, natural pressed juice, all ready to serve.

From full-ripened fruit

Grapefruit, to be at its best, must be sun-ripened on the tree. Scientists of the University of Florida, by a series of careful tests, have found that it is in the final period of maturing that the fruit draws from the soil most of the valuable sugars, acids and mineral salts which make grapefruit so healthful.

You who have enjoyed grapefruit in its native tropic groves know how much more delicious is this naturally full-ripened fruit.

Here, now, is this perfect fruit, fully ripened on the tree, as you get it only in the tropics, with that fascinating tartness, and that appetizing touch of bittersweet which is characteristic of the finest grapefruit.

And this perfect fruit you can have on your pantry shelf, ready for instant service, at any time, in or out of season, and it is always good—always at its best; always uniform in quality.

A startling discovery

The J. T. Polk Company has been experimenting for years to perfect a process for bottling the natural juice without preservatives, coloring matter or adulterants of any kind.

At last this process has been discovered.

Polk's Juice of Grapefruit is the natural, pure fruit juice, pressed from delicious, sun-ripened fruit, slightly sweetened with pure cane sugar. Nothing else.

No trouble to prepare it

No cutting, seeding, separating of the fruit pulp from peel or membrane to do.

No bitter particles of peel or membrane to spoil your enjoyment of this most delicious of citrus fruits.

All you have to do is to keep a few bottles in the ice box, so it will be thoroughly chilled; remove the patent cork, and pour out a portion. It is clean, easy and convenient.

Grapefruit stimulates health

Physicians introduced grapefruit by recommending it as a health stimulant and digestive tonic.

A wine glass of Polk's before meals will double your enjoyment of the food and will aid digestion and assimilation by activating the flow of salivary and gastric juices.

Always order Polk's by name

The success of Polk's Juice of Grapefruit is due to the fact that it is nothing but the pure, natural juice of the fruit. So be sure and order Polk's by name.

Your grocer has it, or can get it for you. Order it by the case so you will always have it on hand. Ask for Polk's, by name, in restaurants, hotels, clubs, dining cars and at soda fountains.

Women who keep house will be interested in its many uses in the preparation of delightful beverages, jellies, cake icings, desserts and salad dressings.

You will appreciate its convenience and delicious flavor.

Why the J. T. Polk Company is bottling the juice of grapefruit

By RALPH POLK
President the J. T. Polk Company

My first knowledge of Grapefruit, when it was still but little known, came when a physician prescribed it for a sick friend. I have always thought of it as our great health fruit. It is not only its luscious, appetizing goodness that has made it so popular but the actual benefits derived by the sick and convalescent; thousands have been grateful to Grapefruit for its soothing and vitalizing effect.

I have spent many winters in the glorious climate of Florida. There I can obtain Grapefruit in its highest state of perfection. This I have found somewhat difficult in the North. The quality varies so. It occurred to me several years ago that if there was some way of giving the people up North the kind of Grapefruit I got in Florida, and give it to them so it would be absolutely natural, always uniform in quality, and no trouble at all to prepare, that it would not only be a good commercial proposition but a real public service.

Our Company has been manufacturing high quality foods for forty-seven years. Our equipment and organization are such that the very best scientific talent could be centered on this problem. Now after two years of scientific research and experimentation we are offering the public a delicious, uniform, natural Grapefruit in its most convenient form.

That is why the J. T. Polk Company is bottling Polk's Juice of Grapefruit.

The LESSON

By R. S. WARREN BELL

"Oh, how are you?" he said, without gush. "Beastly night for traveling."

What Happened to One Who Set Out to Teach Wisdom to a Woman, and Wound Up by Learning a Thing or Two Himself

GEORGE WASTE was a sentimental bully. When he courted Doris Dean, this proved a rather potent mixture, for Doris, a handsome, fly-away, slap-dash sort of a girl, was a hard one to hold, as a horseman would say, and that touch of the bully in George was, although he didn't know it, and she only half acknowledged it, even to herself, the determining factor in his success. For others, lacking this necessary whip, had failed. Curates had charged in and been repelled like kittens hurling themselves against a stone wall. For she was a fine girl, clear-skinned, brown-eyed, with ropes of hair in whose eternal burnish you read her abundant vitality. The bullying of a lover, however, has a savor which departs when that lover is made fast to his woman by hymeneal bonds, and at the end of seven years the corroded link had worn to a perilous thinness, while in another year it had apparently snapped altogether, seeing that Doris, having had enough bullying, had departed from her husband's house.

An amateur actress of some distinction, she did not doubt her ability, when put to it, to make her way on the stage. Anyhow, only in that sphere could she hope to establish her independence. A woman of looks and address, not to speak of an ample wardrobe, she experienced little difficulty in obtaining a walking-on part at a West End theater, and incontinently broke off all communication with George, her husband, leaving him and his nice house on the front at Minxhampton, The Deodars; his housekeeper, Miss Whiteley—known playfully between them, on account of her pallor and general frigidity, as "Whitewash"—and his little boy, Bobby, to get along as best they could without her.

The primary cause of their difference had been her extravagance. George was what is called a "financial agent." It is a mysterious occupation, occasioning much journeying, long confabulations at clubs and offices, a good deal of guarded letter-writing, but practically no office work. For the main duty of a financial agent is to introduce somebody who wants to sell to somebody who wants to buy, and draw a commission on the deal if a deal accrue. It is a restless occupation, and gentlemen following it are by turns in funds and out of them. It will therefore be understood that, with Doris conducting herself invariably on the "in funds" principle, George had grounds for irritability. On the other hand, he did not realize that his wife's desire for new frocks and hats, gewgaws, and pleasures could hardly be expected to wax and wane in accordance with the flow and ebb of his makings. In funds or out, however, George made good money.

It was sleeting. It does not snow nowadays on the approach of Christmas, it sleets. The ground was covered with that unpicturesque gray slush which no artist has ever yet ventured to reproduce on a Christmas card. In George's dining room at The Deodars it was warm and comfortable, and George, awaiting dinner on the twenty-third of December, sat at ease in a saddle back chair.

He was soliloquizing. Since he had been a grass widower he had been much given to this.

"She's had," he said, "her lesson, and I shouldn't wonder if she's had enough. It ought to have taught her."

Nodding agreement with this, he mended the fire.

"I suppose she thought it would punish me!" He smiled derisively. "But I've carried on. It would be a nasty knock for her if she knew that. I now understand why there are so many bachelors. 'Peace,' that is the watchword. . . . Look how smoothly we go on. Excellent housekeeper, old Whitewash. Good maid, Laura. Happy as larks with no 'missus' to worrit them. And so we go! And all this time she imagines that I'm having my lesson—that her absence has created an unfillable blank. But no, Doris! We carry on. We are 'The Compleat Bachelor,' and we don't mind it a little bit. And there are no bills. Whitewash pays everybody come a Saturday. So, like the village blacksmith, I can look the whole world in the face—and a devilish hard, ugly, grasping face it is, as a rule! So that's my lesson. I'm solvent. In fact, I have one hundred and five pounds at the bank—whereas last year, at this time, it was the other way about. All things considered, I think I'll drink my own health on it."

Going to the sideboard, he mixed himself a whisky-and-soda, held it up to the light, and then swallowed it neatly without drawing a breath. The cumulative effect of whiskies-and-sodas is to give a man a bad temper, or, at any rate, an uncertain one. Their temporary effect, however, is to make him pleased with life. George sat down, hitched up his trousers, crossed his legs, and proceeded complacently:

"Yes, we survive. We survive, Doris, dear. Our housekeeping is competent and self-effacing. A good-looking one, in the absence of the mistress of the house, might evince a tendency to 'carry on' with the master. But I cannot envisage Whitewash carrying on with any one warmer than a snow man. Which is as well."

George, a stoutly built, clean shaven, fresh colored man, chuckled. He could not have been more fortunately served than in his housekeeper. Not a breath of scandal would ever circle round that pallid icicle of a woman.

"And Laura—quick, devoted, and nice to the eye. Yet firm in the grip of Whitewash. And Bobby, our son, cheeriest of little chaps, and you have The Deodars' home circle. So we carry on."

He drew a gold cigaret case from his pocket, selected a cigaret, tapped it on the case, and lit it. Leaning back then, he smoked at his ease. No more business now till after Christmas. His time his own, to do as he liked with. Take Bobby to the pantomime and to the pictures. Treat Whitewash and Laura to them. Go to the club and play poker. O, yes! Christmas would slide away right merrily. He was all right. Quite all right. No good living with a wife you couldn't get on with, who wouldn't study your purse. Life was too short for wrangling. Of two evils, then, choose the lesser—and part. Result: both happy.

So far we have been watching the bully in George, the self-envisaged strong man, the master of his house and of his fortunes. But, to temper this side of his nature, there existed that leaning toward sentiment. And now this began to bubble up. He began to pull fast and furiously at his cigaret. He began, in spite of himself, to recall the happy, rough and tumble times of their early married years—when squabbles occurred only occasionally. And suddenly, jumping up with something that was half a clearing of the throat and half a groan, George dragged open a drawer of the sideboard, snatched out a portrait, and placed it on the mantelpiece.

"There," he said, as if defying his stronger

This Appliance is so rapidly replacing all the old time harness, steel springs, and hard pads, that every day you put off ordering yours you are suffering needless inconvenience.

Men, women and children—even infants—find the Brooks Appliance equally effective. So no matter what your age nor how long you have been afflicted—you should not fail to profit by this NO RISK TRIAL OFFER. No other support, truss, lock, device, pad or plaster is offered to the public under so broad a guarantee of satisfaction.

Ten Reasons Why You Should Accept This Offer

1. The Brooks Appliance is absolutely the only rupture retainer embodying the principles that inventors have sought for years.
2. The appliance ALWAYS HOLDS and CANNOT be thrown out of position.
3. Being an air cushion of soft rubber, it clings closely to the body, yet never blisters the flesh nor causes irritation.
4. Unlike the usual "pad," it is not cumbersome or ungainly.
5. It is small, soft and pliable, and positively cannot be detected through the clothing of either men or women.
6. The soft, pliable bands do not give the unpleasant sensation of wearing a harness or steel spring.
7. There is nothing to get foul—and the appliance can be washed as frequently as desired without injury.
8. There are no metal springs to rust or torture one by cutting or bruising the flesh.
9. All materials are the very best that money can buy, making the appliance durable and safe to wear.
10. Above all else WE GUARANTEE YOUR COMFORT—at all times and in all positions.

A Brooks Appliance Is An All-the-Year-Round Comfort

wiser self, "it's Christmas time, and we'll have her out. That's for remembrance."

And he was just going to mix himself another whisky-and-soda when the door opened and a curly-headed boy was looking at him.

"Well, sonny?"

"Please, father," said Bobby, "will you address this, please? Miss Whiteley doesn't know the address."

"Who's it to?"

"Mother." The little boy was looking at him with large, serious eyes. "You see, I've just learned to write, and so I've written to mother. I partic'ly want to get her answer by Christmas day, so please send it at once." He held out a small, grubby-looking, blank envelope. "I've stamped it—Laura bought me a stamp—and all it wants is the address."

The boy, placing it on the table, rushed out with cachinnations of delight. "He does know," he shouted. "I said he did, Laura. He's going to send it!"

George Waste, altering his mind about the whisky-and-soda, closed the door and dropped into his saddlebag chair again.

He had forgotten Bobby. To Bobby's queries as to where mother was he had announced that she was on a visit. Children, engrossed in the life that is near to them, forget, and Bobby's queries had grown less frequent of late. But now his father understood. Bobby had been diligently studying the art of calligraphy, in order, it would appear, to communicate with that mother who was paying such a long visit. Evidently the housekeeper had tried to dissuade him from writing this letter, saying that his father did not know where his mother was visiting. But the pertinacity of a child leaves an arctic explorer winded and beaten in the race. Bobby had written his letter, and here it was, and he, George Waste, had promised to address it and dispatch it.

An awkward promise to make, because he didn't know where to send it—at least in time to reach her by Christmas eve, so that she could answer it by Christmas day. For George Waste had not attempted to communicate with his wife. When she had left him he had, as it were, closed the door completely on her. A row royal had preceded her departure, and the memory of it had burned into his mind. Let her go! He understood she was earning her living on the stage. Where, in what rôle, he had not troubled to discover, but a friend of his had casually mentioned that he had seen her name on the program of the Folly theater as one of forty ladies composing the revue chorus—a program his wife (who did not know, as the friend did, that Miss Doris Dean was in real life Mrs. George Waste) had brought home from London.

In our small world information is gathered like this. His wife had said nothing to George about the stage work she proposed to do, but he guessed she would take her maiden name. It annoyed him to think of her acting in the chorus of the revue, and he had studiously avoided going to see her. Nevertheless his eye would often wander to the Folly advertisements in the papers, and he had observed that the Folly was closed this week, reopening on Boxing day.

How then, George asked himself, could he keep his promise to Bobby? That is to say, let Doris have the letter in time to reply to it by Christmas day? For, the theater being closed, he knew not where to send it. To transmit it by way of her people would be equally ineffective as far as Bobby was concerned, for her people lived in Derbyshire, right in the country, their letters reaching them via one of those bags which are dropped out of a train whirling by at express speed, and their outward mail being gathered in a similar manner. Doris, in those happier days, would laugh over the stirring times letters to and from her family enjoyed—"to," flung out on to a rural platform; "from," whisked off an inverted pot hook. Clearly, a letter whacked down on that rural platform and readdressed by way of the pot hook would take its time to reach its addressee, and so George dismissed this route as impossible under the circumstances.

His dinner was served, and afterward he sat smoking and thinking over Bobby's letter, incidentally missing the last post to town. But before he went to bed George Waste had arrived at his decision.

"I'll take it. I'll get her address at the theater—somebody will be there—and send it on to her by special messenger. She shall have it. That's the way, and I must have been an ass not to have thought of it before!

His mind made up on this point, he went to bed. But by the first post in the morning came an unexpected summons to the neighboring town of Dillbeach. It was an important matter, and could not be postponed. Arriving back late in the afternoon, he remembered Bobby's letter. Go it must—there was still time—and he found that there was a train which would get him to London by 6.

George Waste therefore partook of a cup of tea and then told Miss Whiteley he was running up to town, but would not be back late, and set off for the station.

In spite of the sleet—for it was still sleeting—everybody seemed Christmassy, and the ticket collector at the up platform door, in spite of his exposed position, was whistling cheerily: "If You're Going to Marry Me, Marry Me, Bill."

"Ah!" thought George Waste.

For by this time George's ideas on "Compleat Bachelordom" had undergone an astonishing change. A sentimentalist, he saw everywhere happy husbands and wives, as often as not attended by Bobbies, sometimes tribes of them. . . . Money! Hang the money! After this lesson—for the bully in him still insisted that she deserved one—she should come back. He'd ask. Bobby's letter would work it. Could she resist that?

She'd had her lesson. So now to start again—all over again.

George knew enough about theaterland to be aware that, though a theater be officially "closed," it is generally to be found open as far as the stage door is concerned. He found this to be so in the case of the Folly. The stage door keeper, a stout, elderly man of malevolent appearance, was ensconced in his cuddy hole.

"Good evening," said George in a brisk cordial way. "Can you oblige me with the private address of one of the ladies appearing here—Miss Doris Dean?"

A sentinel with a fixed bayonet is a pliable chap compared with a London stage door keeper. For the glare of the footlights attracts many moths, and only a man of long experience can handle with dispatch the numberless persons who would brazen their way "behind."

"I don't know where she lives," was the ungracious answer, "and if I did I couldn't tell you."

"That is awkward," said George. "Is there anybody else I can inquire of?"

"Not a soul."

"Look here," George said desperately, "you must often have heard Miss Dean give her address to cabmen. Try and think."

"It wouldn't matter if I could remember it," returned the custodian. "Ladies and gentlemen playing here wouldn't thank me for giving away where they lived."

"No, I appreciate that," returned George. "But I have very particular business with the lady."

"No doubt," retored the custodian dryly as he adjusted his spectacles and took up the evening paper. "Sorry I can't help you, sir."

It was not George's first interview with a stage door keeper. In his pre-marriage days, indeed, his acquaintance with the species had been a somewhat extensive one. He had been standing in the hall, talking through the window of the cuddy hole. Now he stepped boldly into the hall keeper's box.

"Look here, old chap," he said as he insinuated a silver coin into the horny palm that accepted it much like a footballer receiving a pass, "between you and me and nobody else, I'm the lady's husband."

And there followed a silence. Obviously the custodian's comment should have been: "Then of all persons you ought to be acquainted with her private address." But the veteran stagedoor keeper was a man of the world. He was also one of resource, a quick thinker—one ready to seize an opportunity, to strike the iron while it was hot. He drew a small notebook from his pocket, but just as George was congratulating himself upon the swift-working efficacy of his tip the custodian murmured: "Then, perhaps, sir, you'd not mind settling a little account she has with me for cab fares and such?"

"Certainly," said George, though a little blankly. "How much?"

"Eighteen and ninepence," replied the man.

George laid down a pound note.

"Never mind the change," he said. "Now, you have her address?"

"I'm sorry, but I don't know it; and I don't know as I should be warranted in giving it you if I did."

"So you've said," retorted George shortly. "But I tell you I'm her husband, and I've a right to know it. Come, now, can't you assist me?"

The custodian had done well—right well by the gentleman. As for being the lady's husband, that was as might be. Anyhow, he had paid the lady's bill.

"Tell you what, sir," he said slowly. "I don't say as there's much 'ope, but there's a little restaurant"—he made it rhyme with "bant"—"just 'round the corner where the ladies and gentlemen often goes to have a bit of something to eat, or send to for something—name of the Restaurant Rivoli, a Frenchy place——"

"I see. Miss Dean frequents this restaurant, and they may know——"

"Possible," replied the custodian.

"Thank you," said George, going.

"Thank you, sir," said the man, transformed, as you see, from a morose, brief-worded he-bear into almost a chatterbox by that spellworking pound note, to George's vanishing figure, "and the compliments of the season, sir!"

George walked round the corner and looked about for the Restaurant Rivoli. . . . Here it was! Going in, he found the little place packed. A babel of tongues filled the air; corks popped; laughter rang through the smoke. He concluded that it would be no use going up to the proprietor and demanding the address. He must work to it gradually through a friendly waiter. As his wife was an habituee, it was just on the cards they knew where she lived—hardly probable, but "possible," as the stagedoor keeper had hinted. Another good round piece of silver should prove a doughty ally.

An exceedingly small, smooth faced waiter had fastened on him, and, with many wavings of a not very clean serviette, conducted him to a vacant table at the far end of the chief salon. George allowed the waiter to grab his hat and tear off his overcoat. Then the little man snatched up a menu and held it for the gentleman's perusal much as he would have offered him a look over his hymn book.

The closeness, the smallness, and the stuffiness of the eating house revolted George. He liked big, open restaurants.

"Don't think I'll dine, waiter. Bring me a plate of soup."

"Soup, sare? Yes, sare."

Before going, however, the waiter produced a volume of few leaves and heavy covers and perched it up on end before George. "Wine, sir?"

"Whisky and soda," said George.

The waiter knew this sort of customer. Pretended he didn't want anything and finished up by having the full dinner. He skipped off and brought the soup, then fetched the whisky, then held the menu coaxingly before the diner.

"M'sieu will try a little feesh?"

"Look here, garçon," he said. "I don't want the dinner——"

"Don't want? Vare good. As you please, sare. What you like."

"Ah!" The garçon was bright eyed, a monument of potential intelligence.

"Ah, yes," said the waiter. "And what is it?"

"Do you happen to know where she lives?"

"Ah! That is difficult? Monsieur gentleman-friend of lady?"

"I am her husband," said George bluntly. "I have been out of town, and I believe she has moved. Anyhow, can your people assist me?"

"Monsieur Dean, husband—le mari—of madame? I see. Well, I inquire. I tank you," added the waiter, picking up the florin George had pushed across the table. And he was away like the wind.

"Let's hope," thought George. "Quite on the cards they know."

The little waiter was absent quite a long time. At length a large, oily complexioned man in a frock coat, a good deal of shirt front, and a made-up black bow beneath a polo collar, approached George's table.

"Monsieur Dean?"

George acknowledged the soft impeachment.

"Madame's account," quoth the large man—no doubt the redoubtable Rivoli himself—as he laid a long bill before George. "Four pounds seven-teen shillings and fourpence-'appeny."

George goggled at it.

"What's this for?" he demanded. "Pretty good size, this, isn't it?"

"Madame entertains her friends," cried the large man, shrugging his shoulders and washing his hands in the air. "She is generous. She assures us—my husband will pay."

"O, does she?" said George blankly, feeling for his pocketbook.

"We take the word of a lady," returned the proprietor smoothly.

Well, Miss Dean's word must be proved a good one, and George laid down a 5 pound note.

"I thank you, sare," crid the proprietor most cordially, and bore the bank note away, the little waiter presently reappearing with the receipted bill and the change on a plate. George let the latter lie there.

"What about the address?" he demanded.

"I will see. I inquire, sare," cried the mannikin, skipping away again. He came back a minute later. "Alas, sare, they do not know. But the proprietor, M'sieur Rivoli, he say, perhaps one of the cabmen know. There is one taxi constant without here."

"Ask him, will you?"

"With pleasure, m'sieur."

Turning up the collar of his dresscoat, the little fellow darted out into the weather. He returned covered with sleet, but radiant.

"He know," he cried. "He know not name, but I describe lady, and he say 'Yes,' he have often driven madame. It is at Notting 'ill Gate."

"Good boy," said George. "Get my coat and hat."

It was with some relief that George found that Doris did not owe anything to the taxi driver who appeared to make the restaurant his especial mark. The cabman assured him that he knew the lady and her house as well as he knew his own—driven her scores of times.

"All right—tool me out there," said George, getting in and sitting back with a certain content. It was costing him a bit, delivering Bobby's letter, but he was fairly on the trail now. Doris might be in—more probably she would be out; but he would track her down somehow. The fever of the chase was in him now, and he was determined to see the thing through. In the old horse cab days it would have been a tedious drive to Notting Hill Gate on a night like this, but the neck-or-nothing taxicab soon reeled off the distance, and George quickly found himself set down before a funereal looking house with dimly illumined fan-light.

"Now, then!" said he, walking up the steps and giving a good pull at the old fashioned bell. He had told the taxi to wait.

The door was opened by a lady somewhat like Whitewash in appearance, but gloomier and more dingy looking.

"Miss Dean in?" asked George smartly.

"Miss Dean has left," was the answer.

"O!" It was a hollow ejaculation. "Can you tell me where she has gone?"

"I cannot." And the gloomy lady began to close the door.

"Wait a moment," George cried desperately. "I am most anxious to find out where she is."

"You had better ask at the theater," snarled the woman. "That's where my lawyer is writing, anyhow."

"Lawyer! What for?"

"Her account for board and lodging."

The door was nearly closed.

"Fifteen pounds nine and eightpence."

"Just let me see it," said George, walking in brusquely. He felt that he could not be beholden to this mildewed looking lady for his wife's keep. "I happen to be Miss Dean's husband, I'll have you to know."

"Come this way," said the creature in a more cordial tone. "She told me she had a husband who was abroad or somewhere—I don't remember rightly where; they do tell you such tales, these stage ladies—and that was one reason why I let the account run on. I'll get it."

George sat down in a bleak looking front sitting room, furnished in the usual lodging house way—that is to say, with furniture that had seen better days, like its owner.

The lady floated in with a long sheet of paper and a sheaf of letters. "These bills have come in since she left," she said. "I was going to readdress them to the theater."

With a smothered groan George shoved the lot of them into his overcoat pocket. The creature brought him an antique inkstand and a bad pen, and he wrote her a check.

"Thank you," she said, as she took it. "I'm obliged to you." Her voice faltered a little. "It's rent time, you know, and I was looking for this to make up the amount. It happens that at the time I have no other lodgers, and I should have been in an awkward position—but for this. I am exceedingly obliged to you, Mr.—er—" she looked at the check—"Waste."

"Well, there it is," said George. "Glad to hear it will be useful. And now—you really have no idea where she's moved to?"

"No idea at all. We—ahem!—had words before we parted. But her brother may be able to tell you. He ought to know."

"Her brother!" And George only just pulled himself up in time, for he had almost replied that his wife had no brother. But he merely added, "Oh, yes. I may find out that way. Good evening."

"Good evening," said the lady of the melancholy house and the furniture with a past. "Compliments of the season," she added wistfully, as she followed George out into the hall.

"Same to you," said George, and went with a dull step into the night.

He told the cabman to drive him to the station, and sat back with a bitter and heavy heart. Lesson! So much for the lesson he had meant to teach her. . . . Yet he was hardly thinking of the money, tidy hole as it had made in his finances. "Her brother." So it had come to that! Just like the rest. That convenient "brother"!

He laughed bitterly and sat snuggled, cigarless, within the upturned collar of his big coat as the train carried him back to Minxhampton. It was snowing in earnest when he reached Minxhampton, and he hailed the one cab visible, though he knew the driver of old as an extortionate rogue. However, "home" was the word, his own fireside, his Compleat Bachelordom again. Entirely Compleat now, for she had found a brother.

He was in no mood for further generosity, and gave the plundering seaside Jehu but a trifle over his fare.

"You've paid me tuppence too much," said the red nosed ruffian sarcastically.

"So I have," said George, and took it back with a savage smile.

"Well, there, you deserve a 'Appy Christmas,' retorted the cabman, laying his whip about his roan horse.

"Home again!" And with Bobby's loving little letter undelivered. He was in no bullying mood now, and the sentiment in him seemed to be frozen over. . . . Yet he had paid her way round for her. He had at least played the husband and the man. If she had failed in a like sportsmanship, well, so let it be. With his broad shoulders bowed, he walked up the path, put his key into the door, and entered The Deodars.

To experience a start of surprise. A voice, a familiar voice, smote upon his ear. And Bobby's, too—full of gladness and lightness. That voice—why, it was hers.

He stood in the doorway, the snow beating in upon the mat. She had come back, driven back. His face hardened.

He closed the door, and as he did so Bobby came dancing out. Like those of most little boys who have run past their proper bedtime, his eyes were unusually bright.

"Father, mother's come home!"

George, steadying himself, walked into the room, and, as he did so, Whitewash, coming out, brushed past him and, alertly seizing Bobby despite his struggles and cries, bore him upstairs. It was well done.

Doris, wife of George Waste, was standing by the fire. As he entered she looked at him timidly, and yet with a smile. She had never been a craven. She had left home of her own accord; now she had returned of her own accord. That was what the expression on her face said. And, was she welcome?

Was she welcome?

And George, notwithstanding those unpaid bills, showing how completely she had failed to learn her lesson, felt that she would have been, but for those two fatal words let slip by the forlorn landlady of Notting Hill Gate.

"Oh, how are you?" he said, without gush. "Beastly night for traveling."

"And how are you, George?" she said, her voice—she had a delightful voice—trembling a little, her eyes misty, as she held out her hand. "Are—are you glad to see me?"

"Dashed glad to have caught up with you at last," he said. "Been chasing you all the evening, only to find you home first."

She looked puzzled. She spoke brusquely.

"Been chasing me? What do you mean?"

"I've been trying to find you to give you this," he answered, handing her the boy's first letter. "He wanted an answer by Christmas day. Didn't want to disappoint the kiddie, you know." He spoke casually, to gloss over the sentimentality of the act.

"But I've just come from Burnley," she said. "Poor old chap! Have you been chasing me round town?"

"Yes, and squaring up a few little accounts you left behind you," he said, thinking it as well to get this said and done with before Christmas. For he had meant her to have a lesson, yet she had not profited by it. He wanted to let her know still that he could not afford such a luxury as an extravagant wife.

"'Accounts,'" she murmured. "I've left no accounts in town. I've been for months with a touring company playing 'Saved from the Sea.' They were going from Burnley to Bodmin—and that finished me. I gave my notice in at the beginning of the week, and as soon as they'd got another woman I skedaddled—and here I am. And—please—are you cross?"

"Cross! No, my dear, I'm very glad to see you! But who—great snakes! What have I done?—who's the woman whose bills I've been paying—Doris Dean, of the Folly theater?"

Her lips parted in astonishment. As for him, he had never looked so blank in all his days.

"'Doris Dean, of the Folly theater,'" she repeated. "Did you think that was I?"

"What else was I to think? Isn't that the name you play under? Jackson said he saw your name on the bill."

She laid her hands on his shoulder.

"My dear George, don't you know that about every third chorus-lady is called 'Doris,' and about every fourth 'Dean'? A woman in our company told me she knew at least two other Doris Deans! My poor George—what bills have you paid?"

"Why," George replied heatedly, "first the stage-door man for cabs, then the restaurant bill, and finally your rooms—in all, something over twenty quid."

"Dear, dear George!" cried Doris, putting her arms round his neck and burying her face in his shoulder, "how good, how nice of you to square up for me!" Then she burst out laughing. Disengaging herself, she dropped into a chair, laughing consumedly, and George, the comical side of his adventure at length presenting itself to him, also found a chair, and there they sat laughing. How they laughed! It was very good to hear and see them.

"Dear George," cried Doris, "I can't help thinking how obliged the real Doris Dean will be to you—and how surprised! What a Christmas box for a girl!"

"'Girl'! She's got a husband somewhere. I heard of him in two places. And a——"

But he stopped there. He wouldn't say anything about that "brother" now—nor of how he had felt. That would keep.

"But, George," Doris inquired, as she wiped her eyes, "how did you manage to pay them all? You must have had a lot of money on you."

"I don't go about penniless," he said. Then he bounded up. "But I can stop that check—the check I gave the old landlady! It won't be any good to her till the banks——"

He paused. From without came a sound of carol-singing. The good old custom—they were keeping it up. It was Christmas time. He thought of that forlorn woman in the dark house with her rent to pay—of her thankfulness.

"No, he growled, "Ill let the poor old devil keep it. I've had a good half-year. He looked at his wife, and his voice softened. "A sort of thank-offering, eh?

There was a scuffle outside, the voice of Whitewash sounded in reprimand, and the door flew open, admitting Bobby in his nightgown.

"Mother, have you had my letter?"

She flew to him and caught him up in her arms.

"Yes, my darling! Thank you so much! Now come to bed at once, you naughty runaway, or you'll catch cold."

She bore him out and back to his cot. George threw up the window and tossed a shilling to the carol-singers. Then, going into the hall, he awaited his wife's return down the stairs.

He had noticed, as he came in, that somebody had hung a piece of mistletoe up in the hall.

"I never ceased to dislike her, though I loved her more and more senselessly each minute. Had she been my sister, I should have spanked her forty times a day. As it was, I was scheming chimerical plots to elope with her, to kidnap her if need be, to possess her at any cost. I did not carry any of these into execution. I don't know why, but one doesn't do those things, you know—the difference between us, Bill, and our savage forebears is that we want to do the things they did; it's in the customs, restrictions, habits, forms, not in the refined minds or the purified souls.

"I waited for her to again appoint a secret meeting. I ached for it. I had ribbed myself up to say things and do things I had never done when that chance should come again. But, she who had forced the one rendezvous on me against my will and judgment, did not again offer one when I was rabid for ten minutes alone with her. Any feeling of courtesy due the man who had presented me had been pigeonholed. It was no time for clubby hairsplitting. The woman was mine! The primal instinct knocked out my conscience in one wallop. No, I did not go to him and tell him so—why should I have? I had not been served official notice that he had a substantial equity, and I felt it better served the ends of love to avoid scandal and blood letting, though I would have beaten him to death if physical conquest could give to me what was mine.

"She continued to flirt with me discreetly. Now and again she 'phoned me to bid me a tender good night, or to laugh into my ear, or to wake me in the morning, or to tell me that I was an overgrown booby, who didn't know what to do or how to do what he shouldn't do or when to be where or which could be what. In these talks I dared not get too personal, because the operators in the hotel always 'listened in,' and she would let me circumnavigate the point and close in toward it in spiral ambiguities until I was almost ready to set a time and place, whereupon she would laugh and say ta-ta.

"Of course there were stretches when I came to myself, like every booby in love, and told myself how many different kinds of babboons I was, and that I was leaving in the morning. Never leaving right away—always next morning. There were always dreams between those oases of comparative sanity and the following mornings, and the dreams always held me another day at least.

"I tried golf to forget her. Whew. I did that cinch course in 109 and my partner in the foursome, a gouty bank director, cut me in the lobby that night. I tried the gambling house nearby, and the dealers had to chide me for my absent minded play; once I won several thousand because I forgot to take down my checks at roulette and the OO repeated. But it was no use. There was only one thing on my wrecked mind, and only one thing that could restore that mind. And that one thing was butterflying about, looking more intoxicatingly sirenic and more incongruously bejeweled every time I saw her. Sometimes she was with her first escort; sometimes she was alone; sometimes she was gadding with a flock of women, all of whom glared vitriol at her and all of whom worshiped her.

"This couldn't go on forever. My schoolboy plans were pushed back, and I determined with what degree of calmness two highballs and a carton of cigarets could produce, to demand a tête-a-tête, declare myself, ask for my answer and take no answer but the answer. Working the wire was no go, I had found. So I wrote a letter. It ran somewhat thus:

"'Dear Lady: It is important that I see you alone for five minutes. Kindly indicate to me, by whatever means you deem best, where and when your convenience will provide me this pleasure and opportunity to communicate to you what is uppermost in my heart and mind.

"'Sincerely, P. W.'

"I did not trust it to a bellboy, nor in her mail box; I slipped it under her door in the middle of the night, in my own person, and just missed having a house officer catch me wandering strange corridors in pajamas and a dressing gown. I did not sleep after that. My Lady never arose early, so it was somewhere past 9 when my telephone jarred me from the numb condition into which I had sunk in a chair. I picked the receiver up with shaky hand.

"To my 'hello' she said 'Good morning, funny man. Sleep well?' I growled that I hadn't slept at all. She yodeled that this was too bad—I mustn't ruin my health. I told her my health would be all right if she'd do as I had asked her. She seemed surprised. Hadn't she seen the note? No. She put the instrument down and I heard the springs as she slipped to the floor. I waited. I could hear her laughing clear across the room. When she again held the telephone she was in the throes of a giggling fit. She managed to gurgle that it was the most amusing piece of paper she had read since 'Tom Sawyer.' I begged to inquire what she found so hilariously facetious in it, and she said 'Everything.' Then she told me to meet her in the balcony 'parlor' in half an hour—no one ever went there, especially in the morning.

"I was ahead of time. She wafted in on a cloud of her knockout drops cologne—a woman who would soak herself with smelly liquids in the morning should be tarred and feathered—and she looked radiant. She was dressed for a hike, with plaid skirt to her knees, elkskin boots that she picked up in some shop for spoiled children, a curiously woven sweater waist that glistened and threw sparks, a tam to match, and a diamond necklace around her throat, which was otherwise bare down to the point of the V. She also wore a smile; on any one else I should have called it a grin. She greeted me effusively, gave me her hand, and sat beside me on a rattan bench.

"'How do I look this morning, Poor Thing?' she asked. I said she looked bully—everything does when it's the one thing one wants to see. She said that was a good line and wanted the name of the book I had stolen it from. I took her by the wrist and suggested rather sternly that she please dispense with the badinage for a few moments and listen to some serious stuff. She complimented me—said she loved rough men; didn't know I had it in me; proceed. I proceeded.

"For several minutes, between choking and whispering in emotional falsetto, I told her—everything. I asked her to marry me and before she could answer I begged her to marry me, and before she could answer I commanded her to marry me.

"She—she laughed.

"'Didn't I tell you?' she said. 'How careless of me.'

"Tell me what? What was there to tell?

"'Why, that I—I thought you knew it all the time—that I am to be married to F—— next month."

"F—— was a frat brother of mine, on the way back from France. No—she had never told me. Why, if that were so, had she dragged me on that ride, thrown herself at me in the ballroom? Why. For what? She shrugged her supershoulders and said she hardly knew—she just had liked me and thought we should know one another better; said she wanted to have it over with before she married because it would not have been the thing to do after she married, would it? I tried to scold her. She looked at me as though I were blaming the sun for shining. What had she done? I asked her whether she loved F——. She said she hadn't given much thought to it, but he was a good sort—never questioned her or found fault with her or denied her anything, and all that; she hadn't seen him in two years, but she guessed she loved him. Then she said that if I'd be out swimming that afternoon she would show me a new stroke.

"I was not swimming that afternoon. My driver was taking dangerous curves on country roads in high.

"That's all there is to the story. I told it to you only because you analyze women so scientifically."

"Just one question," said Bill. "This woman was a blonde, then?"

"O, didn't I tell you? She had the most gorgeous and overpowering crown of Titian wilderness that ever made a man turn pale."

"And I let you finish all that long, dreary Niagara of detail thinking she was blonde! Why didn't you say she was a redhead in the first place—then I could have finished it for you. Whatever formulæ one can lay down does not apply to any shade of red deeper than golden auburn. The laws of X are not applicable. If a brunette or blonde is X, an unknown quantity, a redhaired one is X plus Y, two unknown quantities."

"I think," said Pete, "you mean X plus Why."

"I mean," said Bill, "X plus wow! Peonies in red hair!"

A Little Matter of Science, Red Hair, and the Unknown Quantity, Which Is Human Nature

By JACK LAIT

"REDUCING women to algebraic terms," said Bill Grannan, "each of them is represented by X, the unknown quantity."

"My observation has been," added Pete Ormsby, "that mathematics is an exact science, and, therefore, women cannot officiate in any of its quantities or the symbols thereof. I had a $40 a month teacher who could solve the value of X in any problem that was X-able and solvable. But if X is feminine, Pythagoras himself, or Ty Cobb, or Nicholas Murray Butler, or the wisest of them all—this year's valedictorian of any high school—couldn't put an answer the other side of the 'equals' lines that would prove back."

"Largely true," agreed Bill. "When I studied the higher—or harder—ometries, we used to have two stickers: zero and infinity. Woman equals somewhere between those two extremes, and she is a fluctuating figure. I know one I used to think infinity who now registers zero, and I knew one once who started at zero and went up faster than steel preferred when the administration was awarding 10 per-cent-plus war contracts."

"And where does she rate now?"

"Well, that's none of your business, brother. By which I do not mean that you can't know, but you never could understand."

"No, of course not. Being only a human male, gifted with all the wishes, vices, impulses, instincts, virtues, vibrations, corpus, and consciousness of the sex, species, race, and type, I could never assimilate the ingredients of your romance—no man could. Once to every man cometh one skirted episode that no other breathing mortal could comprehend. I know—I've had mine."

"I have found out this formula on females," said Bill, ignoring the obvious irony. "And it is a chemical rather than mathematical analysis. A woman is composed of 2 per cent intellectuality, 3 per cent spirituality and 95 per cent anatomy."

"Your deduction is cross-eyed, Bill, not to say rude. In the first place, it is rather biological than chemical, and, from your results, I might infer it was more nearly zoological."

"Don't you say that again!"

"All right, I won't. But—to express a woman in percentages of elements you must use all the sciences, even including theology, the study of the soul, pathology, psychology, paleontology—vertebrate and invertebrate; criminology, geography, mineralogy, the call of wild birds to their mates, how to calm the jaguar by a steady look into the fierce eyes, the sweet language of lilies, postage stamp flirtation, Latin, the proper way in which to write a letter apologizing for having blown out an inner tube, political economy, domestic economy, erosion, high finance, literature of all the ages, lost and found columns, best selling popular ballads, the state of the moon, linear and cubic measure, the gypsy's mystic fortune teller, the binomial theorem, secrets of electrical contact, how to become a persuasive public speaker, how to improve your memory, how to borrow money without adequate security, where to dine tonight, who's who and how much, the blue book, the black book, the telephone book, dramatic criticism, applied hygiene, the Darwinian theory, Houdini's black art, man and superwoman, Bill Sikes' power over Nancy, Genesis, Walt Whitman, B. L. T., C. O. D., N. S. F., P. D. Q., H. C. L., T. N. T, G. T. H., and S. O. S."

"And then——"

"And then you know nothing about it. It takes one man one lifetime to get a fair idea of what one woman may be. No two are alike. I doubt if any one is alike—meaning that even the same one doesn't jump twice the same in the same circumstances, if you can fancy circumstances being the same twice. There are age, weather, humor, hour, mental state, physical condition, pulse, heart action, blood pressure, relation of humidity to undulations in coiffure, presence or absence of maid, condition of bank balance, day of the week, day of the month, month of the year, year of the corporeal calendar, year of the matrimonial calendar—if any—price of spare-ribs, time of husband's homecoming, alcoholic box-score of same, husband's attitude toward her relations, current, voltage, amperage, cold storage and cold camouflage—all to be multiplied into the divisor. Then, if you have an approximate estimate of the dividend, you may calculate a quotient. And you'll miss it a mile and have the decimal point four columns offside."

"That may be the case with you, but I——"

"It has been the case with me. And you may have been more fortunate than I or less, but if you don't agree with the very lucid findings I have set forth it is because you have not given the Great Subject the same deep and absorbing study that I have, or because you chanced not to vivisect so ideal a specimen.

"You know, physicians and metaphysicians hold autopsies and psycho-analogical clinics not for the purpose of ill-bred curiosity into the secrets of their subjects, but to learn if possible from individual facts some general principles that may be applied to the mass. The fact that you did not discover these things means only that you were denied either the gift of the explorer or the vision of the discoverer—or the opportunity of either. You might say I had no brain, because you have never seen my brain. But I know I have a brain—I have used it. And I know what I know—I know it.

"And if you'll give me another of those fair cigars, I'll be pleased to tell you how I came to know it.

"You see, Bill, I am a man of parts. The world will tell you so. I have a physique beyond the average, my income and business standing surpass the commonplace, I was voted the handsomest man in my class at college, I graduated with a fair education considering how much fun I had, I was an athlete, my family name isn't a social barrier, I think I know how to dress so I don't look like a Hottentot, I never eat with my knife, I wear no diamonds, my hair isn't shaved off my neck, I drink but never kiss waiters or fight bouncers, I read from Kipling to Moore, I have never addressed a strange woman familiarly in my life, I have no gold teeth, I have never been convicted of a felony, I have never voted the Democratic or Prohibition or Socialist ticket, I belong to a few decent clubs, I swear to my income tax schedule without crossing my fingers, I go to church on occasions, I have some fine friends like yourself, I rarely play cards and never touch dice, I have never been sued for breach of promise, I am on speaking terms with my father, my name is seldom in the newspapers—all around, I'm a reasonably regular fellow, and not a bad 'catch'—eh?

"I think I'd make a middling husband..

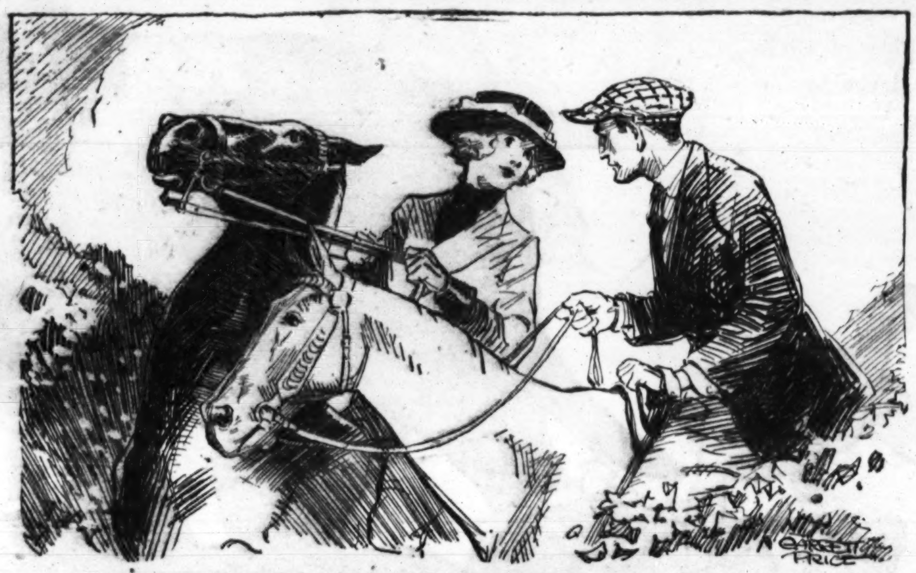
"I have always had a preference in women—that, I hold, is any man's privilege. I mean to say I have always looked for certain qualities and certain attributes, narrowing down the number of fems that soothed my sensibilities to those who had such and such figures, eyes, dispositions, mentalities and personalities. I had a general aversion against blonde deadliers, arbitrary but absolute. I had in turn an antithetical predilection for the dark haired of the seeker sex. These in turn were classified and graded until I knew just what was my ideal.

"I dreamed of a petite brunette—chestnut preferred—with light skin, pinkish cheeks, blue eyes, a tippy tilted noselet, a li'l bitty mouth, tiny hands, inconspicuously perfect teeth; she was to be cheery and lightsome not hot frivolous, hearty but not giddy, feminine but not sappy, romantic but not sloppy, young but not hoydenish, wide-eyed but not stupid, matrimonially inclined but not matrimonially bent, chipper but not fidgety, neither too rich to need me nor too poor to afford me, a sportswoman but not sporty, a dancer without being a danseuse, an all-woman girl who had no ambitions for business or the stage or professional china decorating or journalism or ballet nonsense; educated but not an animated reference book; clever but not assertively epigrammatic, one who had a few illusions left, but didn't believe in Santa Claus; clingy but not hangy: a sweetheart, a pal, a wife, a mother, a hostess, a golf partner, a chummy roadster companion, a breakfast vis-a-vis, a thing of beauty and a joy all over."

"I'll say," said Bill, "that you picked yourself some girl. Did you ever find her?"

"Did you hear of any new miracles lately? No. But I looked for her—that was doing my share. I met a few that angled toward her in some ways, and once or twice I thought I had her—for a while—but the brass always came up through the triple plating somewhere. They couldn't stand propinquity.

"I wasn't impatient—I wasn't going anywhere in particular. But I kept on prospecting. Then, very abruptly, I met a woman. I did not know I had hit any crisis at all, because she was scarcely my type. In truth, I learned to enthusiastically dislike her two minutes after we were introduced.



"She chirped in that oily melody that always came when she spoke, and said she had dreamt of me."

"She appeared to be a halfway fiance to a halfway friend of mine, whom we may call Charlie for purpose of identification in this narrative. Charlie had recited me a couple of panegyrics regarding the lady's superior points before I chanced to be presented. It was on a beach. He had neglected to tell me the color of her hair, and when I ran into them at the seaside she had on one of those teach-me-to-swim skull caps that make pretty girls ravishing and plain ones atrocious. Not a strand of her hair showed under it.

"I judged her to be blonde, however, because I conceived an almost immediate distaste toward her. Her figure was chic enough, and her profile was a cover designer's absinthe dream. But she had a smile that was part sneer, an ultra easy confidence in her good looks that men who didn't look at her as I did had put there, a way of shrugging her shoulders that was just short of profane, and an amiable habit of making every one wait on her every minute. I tried not to be bluntly rude, but the wild waves called me, and I took a header off the springboard and came up for air a hundred yards out to sea. I though I had dodged her—so I had; she came up two hundred yards out.

"I met her again that evening. She was formally gowned, and I may say she had a discriminating selection in modistes. She made every other woman in the ballroom look like a hen. And there were some rather upper crust women there. She did not strut—she glided—but a peacock could not have been more nearly offensive to me, really. A gentleman should not dislike a lady, but I guess I'm no gent. I danced with her. Bill, that girl could foxtrot as no living other thing on high heels can. Give her credit—this baby was a dancing cadenza. After the most perfect dance I had ever stumbled through I cared even less for her.

"She affected perfume. But, oh—such perfume. It was imperceptible and anesthetic at once. I couldn't smell it, but I could feel it—could feel it gassing me. She had a peony in her hair. Fancy that, Billie—a peony! An ordinary dame would get thirty days for that. It was the perfect flower for her. It helped her looks and showed up the peony.

"And she flirted with me. Yes, flirted. Not subtly—cold turkey. She whispered to me while we were dancing that I hadn't been out of her thoughts all evening. Did you ever hear the equal of that? I blushed like a bride. I tried to change the subject; she changed it back. She told me Charlie didn't ride, but she adored it, and would be riding around the golf links at 10 next morning. I stuttered something to the end that I was sure she would enjoy it—it was a beautiful ride. She gave me one look and said, 'Don't be a boor. One never enjoys riding alone. You ride, do you not?' I think I said I did. I think she said, 'Very well.' All I know is that I knew I had inferentially become party to a tryst—a rendezvous—yes, a 'date'—I who despised such petty, silly intrigues, I who had never deceived a friend, I who had prattled about honor, was committed to clandestinely meet the impossible probable bride-to-be of a man I had shaken by the hand.

"I could not withdraw now. I had, in a daze, conducted her back to Charlie's table, and had bowed myself off. Shortly thereafter Charlie led her out. I went to my room and smoked a dozen cigarettes, then dozed off and awoke with a jerk at sunrise, having dreamt of sirens with peonies and demons with perfumery. I slurred my breakfast. It had been my intention to do eighteen holes that morning, but I found myself reaching for the riding duds. At half after nine I was haranguing at the groom because my horse wasn't there ahead of time. By 10 I was tearing around the edge of the golf course on horseback, peering this way and that, like an Indian scout seeking the foe. The foe came into sight.

"And let me tell you the foe could trot just like she could foxtrot. She had a five-gaited thoroughbred under her that I wouldn't have dared send a postal card to; she had him as spirited as a lion and as tame as a collie; she roweled him to change his pace and he whinnied—I'm sure he was thanking her. When she pulled up beside me I got a good flash of the tout ensemble. It was the most beautiful horse I had ever seen, and I couldn't see him. She was so pretty she wasn't human. Her gauntlets were of green kid, so were her boots; her togs were khaki color, but spun by angels or devils. In her stock she carelessly wore a diamond stud of huge karatage and candle power. Picture it, Bill, old man—a diamond with a riding outfit. It would have ostracized a duchess or excommunicated a chambermaid. It was just right on her. The diamond did glisten considerably, but it couldn't touch her eyes.

"Well, I tried to ride gracefully, but I bumped up and down and made a ludicrous spectacle, I'm certain. However, she did not seem to think so. She kept close beside me—she had to do the keeping, my horse was a selling plater compared to hers and my mastery of him had even less class—and she chirped in that oily melody that always came when she spoke, and said she had dreamt of me. What the tarnation right did she have to dream of me—and tell me about it? I feebly coughed up something about having dreamt of her, too. That settled it. She turned up a road and I followed, and I thought she was taking me to a minister.

"She asked—I mean ordered—me to say nothing of this to Charlie. Much as I had already learned to dislike her, that made me hate her. I was about to tell her so. But instead I gulped that I wouldn't say a word—of course not—what had ever given her the idea that I would think of such a thing?

"We parted before returning to the hotel, and I don't remember how I got in—I was chloroformed.

"I went upstairs and threw myself on the bed, punched the pillows, kicked my left chin with my right heel, drank four highballs, smoked nine fags, told myself I loathed the creature, and realized with a million conflicting and chaotic emotions that I was insanely, hysterically, torrentially in love.

"Did you ever hear of anything so exasperating? Helplessly, defenselessly, spurlos versenkt with this girl, whom I so wholeheartedly disliked, of whose everything I so ardently disapproved. But there was no ducking the fact, paraxodical or logical, and so I did the usual feeble minded things that a chump in love may be counted on to do.

"I sent flowers. There was a florist shop in the hotel, but they said peonies were out—a lady had bought up all there were. So I sent my chauffeur thirty miles to the nearest town to get some. I haunted the nooks and corners where she might most likely

"Well—say I didn't," he replied stupidly.

"You're not telling me the truth now! You know where she is!" Peggy accused, in her pain.

Ted hung his head a moment and answered dully, "What's the use of my telling you anything, Peg—if I'm a liar?"

"What is the use?" she retorted.

At which Ted got up and walked away toward Overlook House, a great woe in his mind—and some resentment.. He might be lazy and careless and selfish and aimless; but he really didn't deserve this!

So plodding, with a heavy and uncertain mind, he reached Overlook house. Two morning newspapers from Boston had been delivered and lay on the hall table. Gloomily and absently he picked them up and stepped into the big room called the library, where he settled himself in a chair—uncertain as to what else to do at the moment—and mechanically addressed himself to the newspapers. He gave a casual glance at the headlines on the first page, in the act of turning the page over; and without even a glance turned on through the barren areas of politics, commerce, labor, and like dead matter—especially past the waste area of the editorial page—until he came to the part of the paper which justified its publication—namely, the sporting pages. Those he proceeded to read, with ripe wisdom and keen appreciation of the values therein expressed. Many other readers skipped the sporting pages which were so much Greek to them. But he was young, superabundantly healthy, with no need to worry over income and outgo. Who won an election or a strike was a fact of much less significance in his life than who won a tennis match.

All the same, he read with a divided mind—the cloud lowering. Presently he was aware of Benjamin puttering over something at the other end of the room. Across that distance he now and then regarded Benjamin out of the corner of his eye. The stout, sealed up butler, with a little patch of gray whisker in front of each ear—the ear itself embedded in flesh—and with dignity in his double chin became to Ted a figure of temptation. Presently he laid aside the paper, sauntered down the room, glanced out of a wide, many paned window toward the sea, lit a cigaret. Then with an elaborate casualness he strolled over to the butler.

"Benjamin, what time was it Katey telephoned she wasn't coming back?" he asked.

The butler ceased his task of arranging some flowers in a vase, straightened from his slightly stooping posture, and looked the young man in the face for a moment. A brain seemed to be active behind his small, twinkling eyes; there seemed something like a hint of resentment on his broad, parchment face. But after the moment he replied, automatically:

"About 3 o'clock, sir!"

"You haven't heard anything from her since?"

"No, sir."

A pause. Then Ted asked, "has any mail come here to the house for her?"

"There are two or three letters, I think."

"You haven't any address to forward them to?"

"No, sir."

"Her clothes are still here?"

"Yes, sir."

Again there was a pause; then Ted remarked, "I see," and walked out on the terrace.

Benjamin looked after him a moment and compressed his lips and resumed his task. But before he had finished the task Ted reentered the room hurriedly, some ill suppressed excitement visible in his manner. Striding up to the butler, he said peremptorily: "Benjamin, I want to look in Katey's room. Take me up there."

It was a command; but Benjamin hesitated over it a long moment, his eyes twinkling at the young man and his face impassive except that his lips were slightly compressed. Then he replied: "Very well, sir; I'll get the key."

But he turned to give a finishing touch to the flowers, and in his broad back Ted seemed to read a sort of obstinacy, as though he might be waiting for some explanation or justification of the command. Ted kept quite still, however, and in a moment Benjamin went pudgily from the room. Ted followed a little after him and waited in the hall, for they would no doubt go up that way. His nerves were on edge lest some one to whom an explanation might be due should step in. No one did step in, however, and soon Benjamin reappeared—with a little gesture inviting Ted to go up the stairs.

They went up to the third story. There Benjamin unlocked a door and stood aside, with a little butlerish bow, for Ted to enter. Stepping through the doorway, Ted found himself in a neat, sunny bedroom, simply but sufficiently furnished—Katey's room, of course. He noted that the room was in some disorder and the bed was not made up, as though the key had been turned upon it just as the maid had left it. The key was sticking in the lock; Benjamin was standing impassively just inside the room.

Ted took the key out of the lock, dropped it in his coat pocket, and addressed the butler: "You needn't wait. I'll lock the door and bring the key down to you when I'm through."

It was a command, but again the butler waited a long moment, his eyes twinkling and his lips compressed. Then he said, "Very well, sir."

As the butler went out of the room Ted closed the door after him. Pausing in the hall and listening, Benjamin heard the key turn in the lock. Evidently the young man was locking himself in the maid's room to remain for some time. Benjamin then sought his master.

Quite a company assembled at Overlook House informally for dinner that evening—Judge Crane and his wife, of course, and Danforth Crane and Mr. and Mrs. Lester Hilton. Mrs. Loughman and daughter were there, and Dr. Bradford McKeon and his wife. The eminent specialist was what is commonly called dish faced, with a nubbin nose. His red and gray whiskers were parted in the middle and combed stiffly outward from the chin. An exasperated lady had once called him a "supercilious icicle." Usually there was in his manner the frost of exclusiveness and intellectual pride. He frankly cared only for people who were well worth caring for. His genealogical line missed the Mayflower by only a score of years, and while the family had missed a good many things since then—sometimes even a comfortable habitation—his attitude was decidedly aristocratic. His wife was taller than himself, with energy and character in her thin face; altogether, one might say, a pair to get on or know the reason why. They were the last of the company to arrive, just at the dinner hour.

Mrs. Loughman and daughter came a good half hour earlier, walking over bareheaded along the sea. As they stepped through the broad open door into the hall Danforth Crane was standing there talking to his stepmother and Mrs. Hilton. Peggy's mind was distressed, and if she had been Ted Pennell her manner would have showed it. But she was a woman, and if she had no other schooling her woman's instinct would have taught her to look pleasant in company, however she felt. At sight of Danforth her face lighted. She glided swiftly toward him, smiling and holding out both hands.

"Why haven't you been over to see me, Dan?" she laughed. "That isn't nice of you!" The clear lilt of her voice rang in his ears. She slipped both hands into his, raised herself on tiptoe, and kissed him.

She loved Danforth Crane tremendously, and had ever since she could remember. By some inscrutable process of selection she had given him a preference at the age of 3 or 4, when one has no compunctions about showing one's preference. Often she had cuddled her small joys and sorrows in his lap. Later on, when she could understand it, it seemed strange to her that the Loughmans and the Cranes, living next door to each other and always running back and forth, were not relatives but only friends. That discovery made no difference in her feelings toward them. All her life Danforth had been a sort of uncle or big brother; she had been kissing him as naturally as she drew breath.

"I did walk over that way, Peggy," said Danforth with a smile; "but I saw you were entertaining other company—down by the shore—and I had some letters to write."

"But you're going to stay a while?" she asked, keeping a hand in his.

"I think I shall stay over next week," he replied.

"Fine!" she replied, shining up at him. "Will you go bathing with me tomorrow? I'm going to start the shiver season then—tomorrow morning. Will you?"

"Be glad to," he said.

"Remember, then!" she warned. "Eleven o'clock tomorrow. We'll come for you in the water wagon, Ted and I. No backing out!"

He and Peggy talked a moment longer; then he noticed that Edith Hilton was looking at them, and he thought there was a look of understanding—perhaps rather a mocking glance—in her dark, intelligent eyes. He turned to Mrs. Loughman.

Soon Dr. and Mrs. McKeon arrived, and the company went in to dinner. Danforth thought Peggy had been furtively looking for some one, and when they sat down to the table—every place taken and no vacant chair—he thought there was a faint surprise and troubled questioning in her eyes. Danforth himself had noted an absence. In a moment Mrs. Loughman noticed it, and as usual spoke her thought without hesitation, addressing the hostess:

"But where's Ted tonight?"

"Gone to New York," Mrs. Crane replied, smiling. "Teddy is getting very important in a business way now, it seems. His father telephoned him from New York just after luncheon; told him to come down at once. He left in a hurry."

"Here's a wire that may interest you, Dan. It came half an hour ago." He took the yellow envelope from the pocket of his dinner coat, where he had thrust it, and handed it to Peggy, who passed it on to Danforth. Danforth drew out the message, of considerable length—glanced over it, replaced it in the envelope, and handed it back. For the barest instant the two men looked at each other—a knowing look as though some secret communication passed silently between them. There seemed to be a satirical grin in Lester Hilton's eyes. Peggy's eyes fell to her plate; she felt forlorn; it seemed to her, from the men's air, that the telegram contained some reflection on Ted.

The dinner party in general proceeded in a subdued tone, for they were all aware of a cause for anxiety much more substantial than any gossamer stuff in a girl's mind about her sweetheart. Dr. McKeon sat beside the hostess, and any one might have noticed that she looked slightly ill—noticeable shadows under her eyes and a slightly grayish hue in her face. They knew, in fact, that she hadn't been very well for several days; that baffling wrongness in her breast had given some ominous signs. They made the due effort to be gay, but Judge Crane's eyes were often traveling across the table to his wife. Dr. McKeon was spending more time than usual at the house.

The little informal party broke up early. Dr. and Mrs. McKeon went home. Mrs. Loughman had had enough walking and accepted for herself and daughter Mrs. McKeon's offer of a lift home in the doctor's car. Judge Crane and his wife went upstairs. A little private conversation—continuing a talk before dinner—occurred between Mr. and Mrs. Hilton. The husband frowned and remarked irritably:

"It's all nonsense. I tell you, I know. And he wouldn't tell you the truth, anyway."

His irritation and impatience struck his wife sadly, as though he had obstinately made up his mind to go his own way in any event. She thought that obstinacy was a mark of weakness.

"O no, Lester," she protested. "Dan will tell me the truth if he tells me anything." And—whether he found an offensive implication in it or not—she could hardly help adding: "Lying isn't his method."

Hilton shrugged his shoulders and retorted: "Do as you please; but for God's sake be careful." Of course, it humiliated and vexed him that she should seek another man's opinion when he had already said "I know!" He turned away, ill-naturedly, and went back to the dining room, where he helped himself to another cordial before going upstairs, angry with her and blaming her for setting up her judgment in opposition to his own. That left his wife alone in the great living room—some shadows in her velvet eyes; a small and charming figure in a dainty dinner gown, with all the weight of the parlous family fortunes on her smooth white shoulders She knew perfectly well that Danforth Crane was out on the terrace, strolling alone and smoking in the night air. But when she went to the open hall door and saw him there she affected a tone of mild surprise:

He came up to the doorway smiling, glad to have her company. He was fond of Edith Hilton and he had long since discovered that a capable mind and steady will lay behind that smooth forehead, beneath the mass of almost black hair. "Shall I get you a wrap?" he asked, coming up to the doorway.

"I'll get one," she said, and in a moment rejoined him with a coat thrown over her shoulders. "Too bad about Anne," she remarked, pityingly, as they started pacing along the broad terrace—aware of the moon splendidly silvering the sea down below them.

"To bad," he repeated, sincerely. "Mamma's fine—so bright and gracious. She oughtn't to have that bad heart."

They paced a moment. She knew he did not use finesse himself, and no one else need use it in dealing with him. So, glancing up into his swarthy face with a little laugh, she said: "I've a bad heart myself lately, Dan. Will you tell me something?"

"No doubt," he replied, smiling.

"I have a little money of my own that Lester doesn't know about," she explained; "only a little, but quite a lot to me. I had a tip not long ago and I put my money into Hidalgo Petroleum. It's gone down ever since. Ought I to hold it?"

"Sell it, Edith; sell it," he replied, promptly. "What did you pay for it?"

She hadn't asked her husband what he paid for his Hidalgo Petroleum, because, a good while before this, she had made the melancholy discovery that when he was cornered there was little use in asking him questions. He would answer the questions, but whether or not he answered them truthfully just depended on the circumstances; so she had formed the habit of not pressing him for answers. Nevertheless, on her own account and using her own good sense, she had been looking up Hidalgo Petroleum on the financial pages of the newspapers; so she answered Danforth's question without hesitation:

"I paid a hundred and fifty-three for it. It's only a hundred and twenty-six now."

"Too bad," said Danforth candidly. "But sell it Monday morning. It will go lower."

"I suppose so," she commented with a little laugh. "Things generally do when I buy them. They said some Englishmen were buying it and you were buying it and it was bound to go up."

"Well, that was true enough once," he replied casually. "Coombes was buying it and so were we. But it was silly to go on with a fight for control and send the stock over the moon. Coombes and I will fix it up between us. That's the trouble with tips, Edith. You hear that somebody did something last week, but you don't know what he's doing today. Better sell it." He was speaking in a casual manner, as of a small incident in a great movement. After a moment he added: "Sorry you made a loss. I don't give tips myself, you know. But if I were you I would sell my Hidalgo Monday and put the money into Alpha Oil. I think you will make up your loss." Glancing down at her he warned soberly. "That's confidential, you know— even as to Lester."

"Thank you, Dan," she murmured; and felt a breath of shame for the mean rôle she was playing.

They paced silently a moment; then he said: "Tell me something. A maid here named Katey disappeared Thursday. What do you know about it?"

The question surprised her, for her husband had been asking it. "Katey?" she replied. "Why, all I know is what I heard Anne say—that the girl telephoned to Benjamin saying she wasn't coming back. Anne has been rather worried about it. But, of course, the girl is of age. If she decided to leave there's nothing anybody can do. Benjamin says she telephoned about 3 o'clock." She had questioned the butler herself since her husband had asked her to.

The surprise which his question set up still moved her. "Why do you ask? Why does it interest you?" she said abruptly.

"It seems there is something odd about it," he replied coolly. "Why did her leaving worry mamma?"

"Why Anne was afraid. . . . You remember the maid?'"

"Yes, I remember her well," Danforth answered. "A pretty rogue."

"Exactly," said Edith. "A pretty rogue—much too pretty for her own good, perhaps. I'm afraid she was given to flirting with any presentable man that came along. Because she is so pretty—her leaving abruptly that way, you know—not even coming back for her clothes—made Anne afraid she was doing something foolish. I never thought there was any harm in Katey, but she had very little sense. It would be a shame if she had fallen into anybody's hands who would mistreat her. But she said she was going; in fact, she was gone before Anne know anything about it. So there seemed nothing to be done. I should like to know that she was all right, and so would Anne. But why do you say there seems to be something odd about it?"

The Teenie Weenies.

THE COOK AND THE LADY OF FASHION HAVE AN AUTOMOBILE ACCIDENT.

BY WM. DONAHEY.

"IT was the day after Christmas, and all through the house not a Teenie Weenie was stirring, not even a mouse," said the Dunce as he stretched out his tiny arms and legs and rolled over on the caterpillar fur rug before the fire place.

"Keep quiet, Dunce," grumbled the Old Soldier, who was nodding before the warm fire. "I want to take a nap."

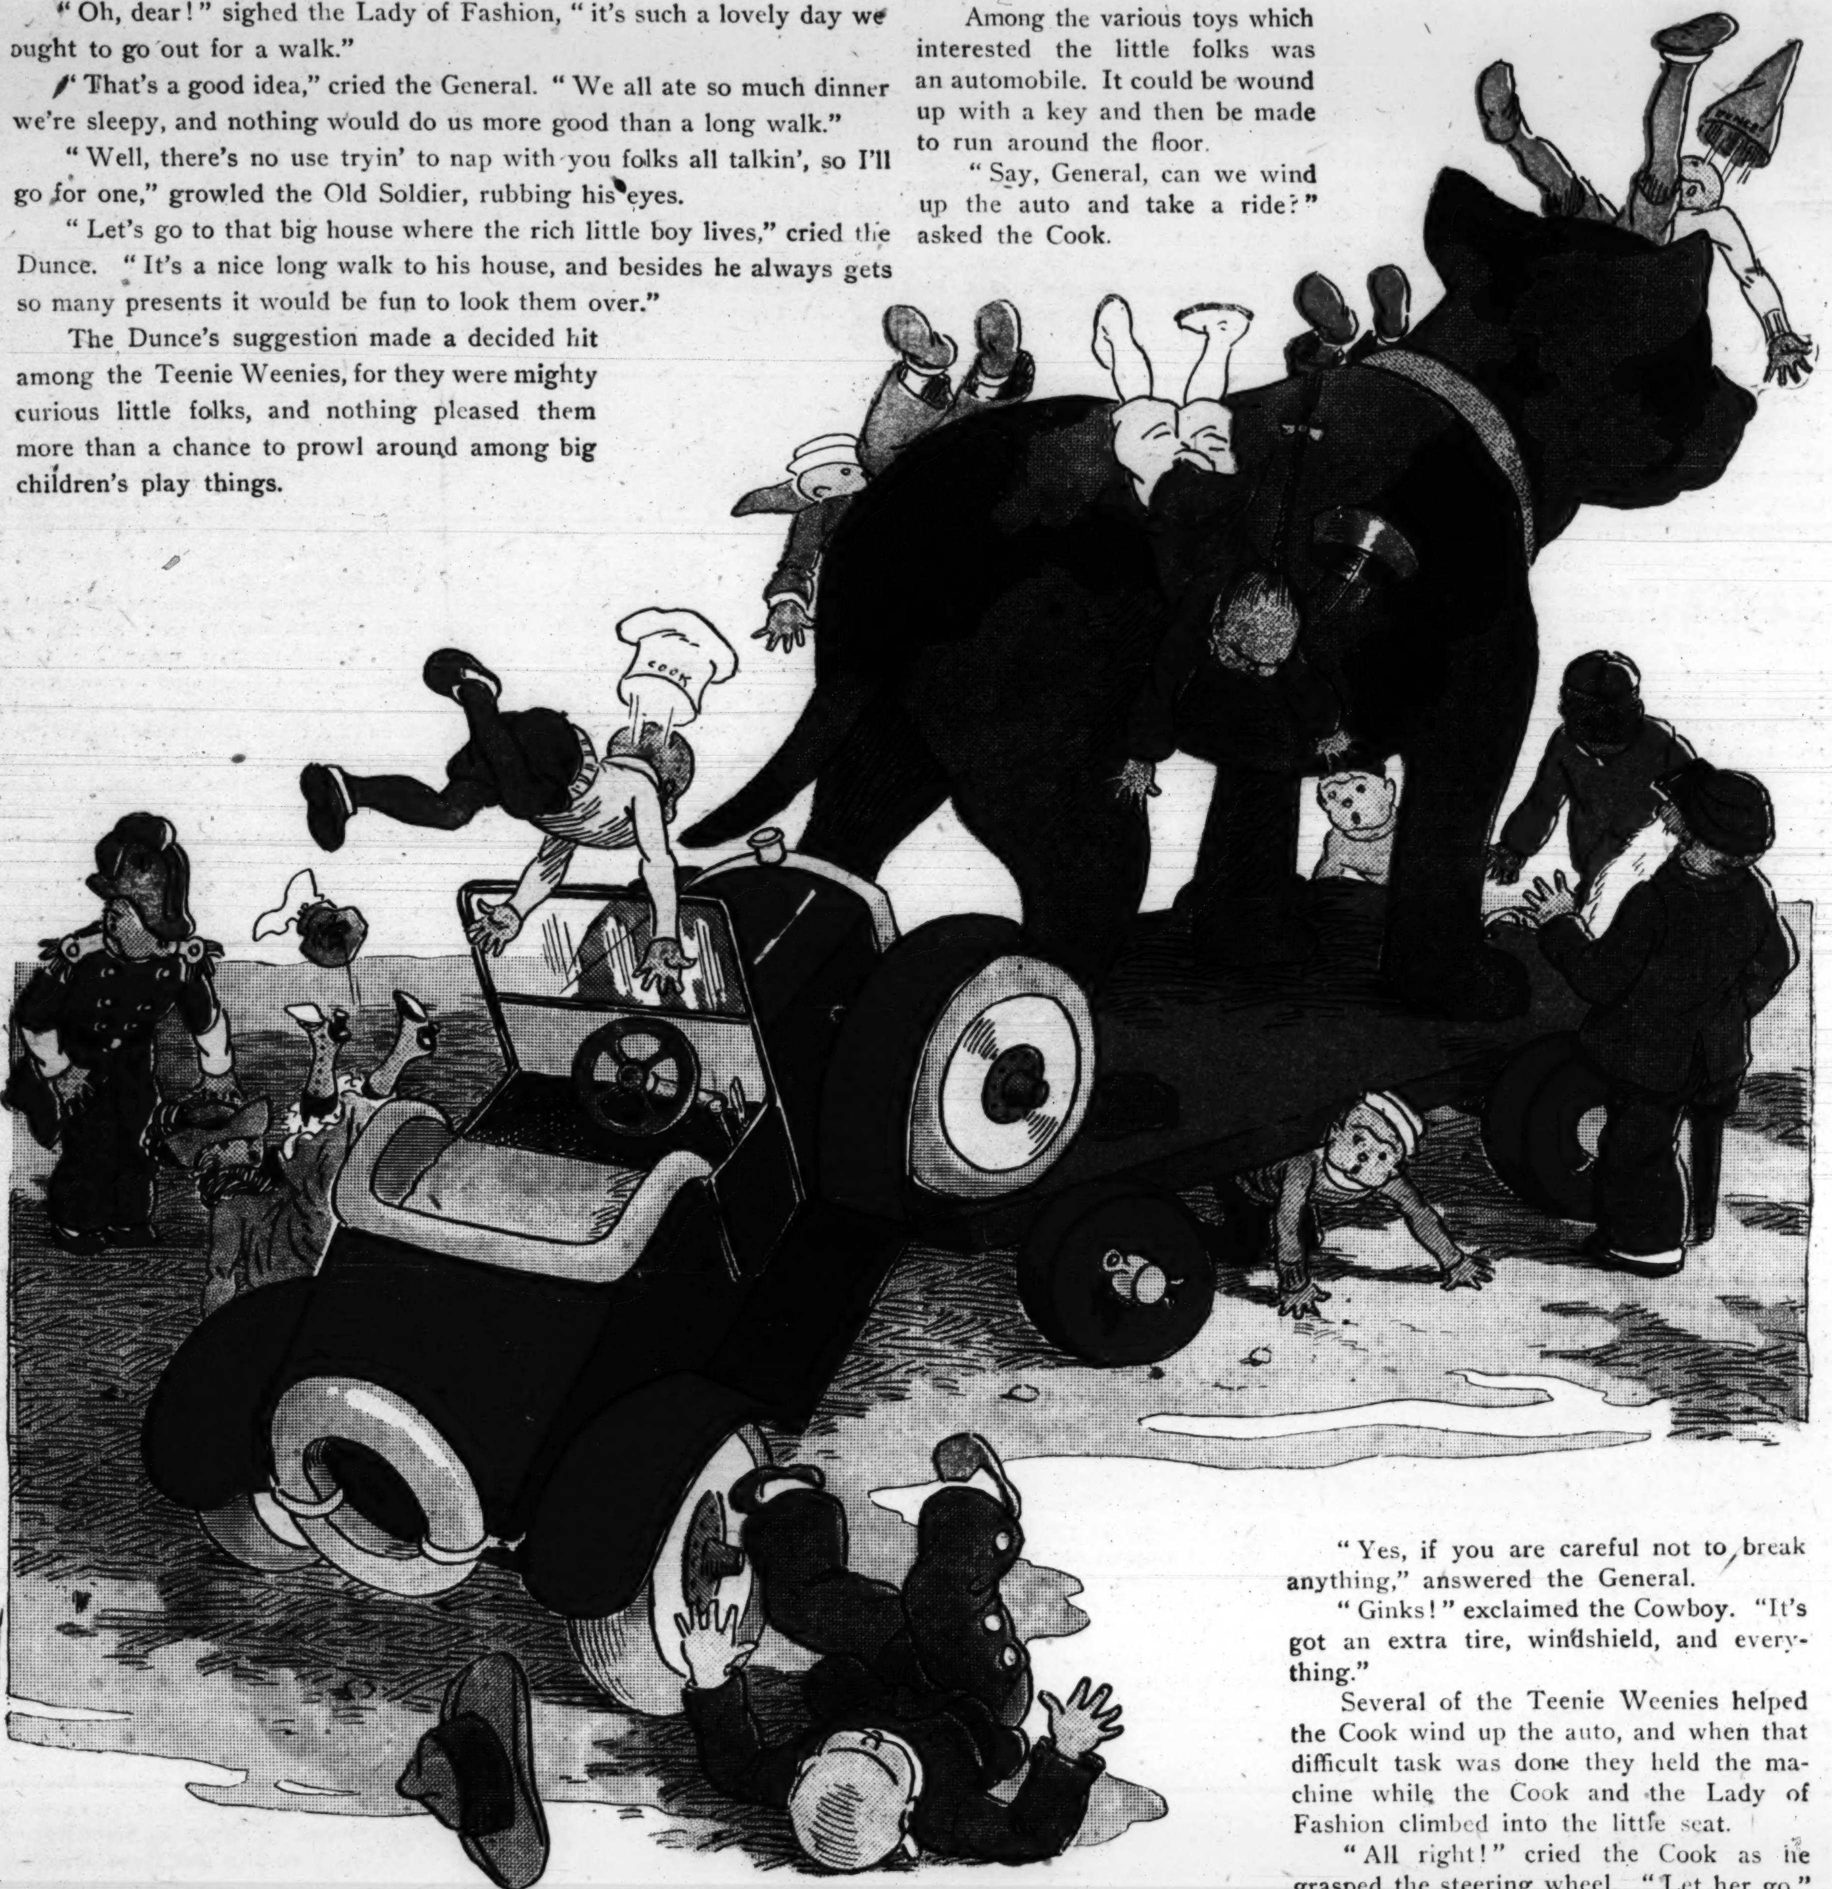
"Oh, dear!" sighed the Lady of Fashion, "it's such a lovely day we ought to go out for a walk."

"That's a good idea," cried the General. "We all ate so much dinner we're sleepy, and nothing would do us more good than a long walk."

"Well, there's no use tryin' to nap with you folks all talkin', so I'll go for one," growled the Old Soldier, rubbing his eyes.

"Let's go to that big house where the rich little boy lives," cried the Dunce. "It's a nice long walk to his house, and besides he always gets so many presents it would be fun to look them over."

The Dunce's suggestion made a decided hit among the Teenie Weenies, for they were mighty curious little folks, and nothing pleased them more than a chance to prowl around among big children's play things.



The weather was quite cold outside, and the little people skipped merrily along over the frozen snow.

They spent quite a while along the way, for every now and then they stopped to peer in the windows at the pretty Christmas trees along the way.

When they arrived at the home of the rich little boy they were quite delighted to find the house deserted.

"They've probably gone visiting," cried the Lady of Fashion. "So we can look around as much as we like."

The little folks found a great Christmas tree in the house and many beautiful presents were scattered about, so the little people had a wonderful time examining the various toys.

"Now, I don't want any of you boys to bother that box of candy," said the General, pointing to a huge box of chocolates around which the Dunce and several other Teenie Weenies were standing.

In spite of the General's warning the Dunce managed to roll one of the chocolates out of the box, and the little chap was about to break it open with a screw from a mechano set, when he was discovered.

"Dunce!" cried the General. "Stop that immediately. If I catch you trying that trick again you'll go home and go to bed."

The Dunce reluctantly put the candy back in the box, and it's hard to tell what he would have done if the Policeman hadn't kept an eye on him the rest of the afternoon.

Among the various toys which interested the little folks was an automobile. It could be wound up with a key and then be made to run around the floor.

"Say, General, can we wind up the auto and take a ride?" asked the Cook.

"Yes, if you are careful not to break anything," answered the General.

Several of the Teenie Weenies helped the Cook wind up the auto, and when that difficult task was done they held the machine while the Cook and the Lady of Fashion climbed into the little seat.

"All right!" cried the Cook as he grasped the steering wheel. "Let her go."

The Cook skillfully steered it under a chair and circled around the room, but unfortunately one of the wheels struck a pencil, which lay on the floor, and threw the machine out of control.

Before the Cook could get the auto under control it smashed into a toy puppy, and spilled the Cook and the Lady of Fashion out on to the floor.

Several of the Teenie Weenies had climbed on to the puppy's back, and when the auto hit it these little folks were dumped off with great waving of arms.

Fortunately none of the Teenie Weenies was seriously hurt, although several were painfully bruised.

The Cook lost a tooth, the Chinaman sprained a finger, the Lady of Fashion ripped her coat, the Dunce swallowed his chewing gum and the Sailor bumped his head.

The little folks laughed a great deal when they found no one was badly hurt, but all of them agreed that a key winder auto is most unsafe.

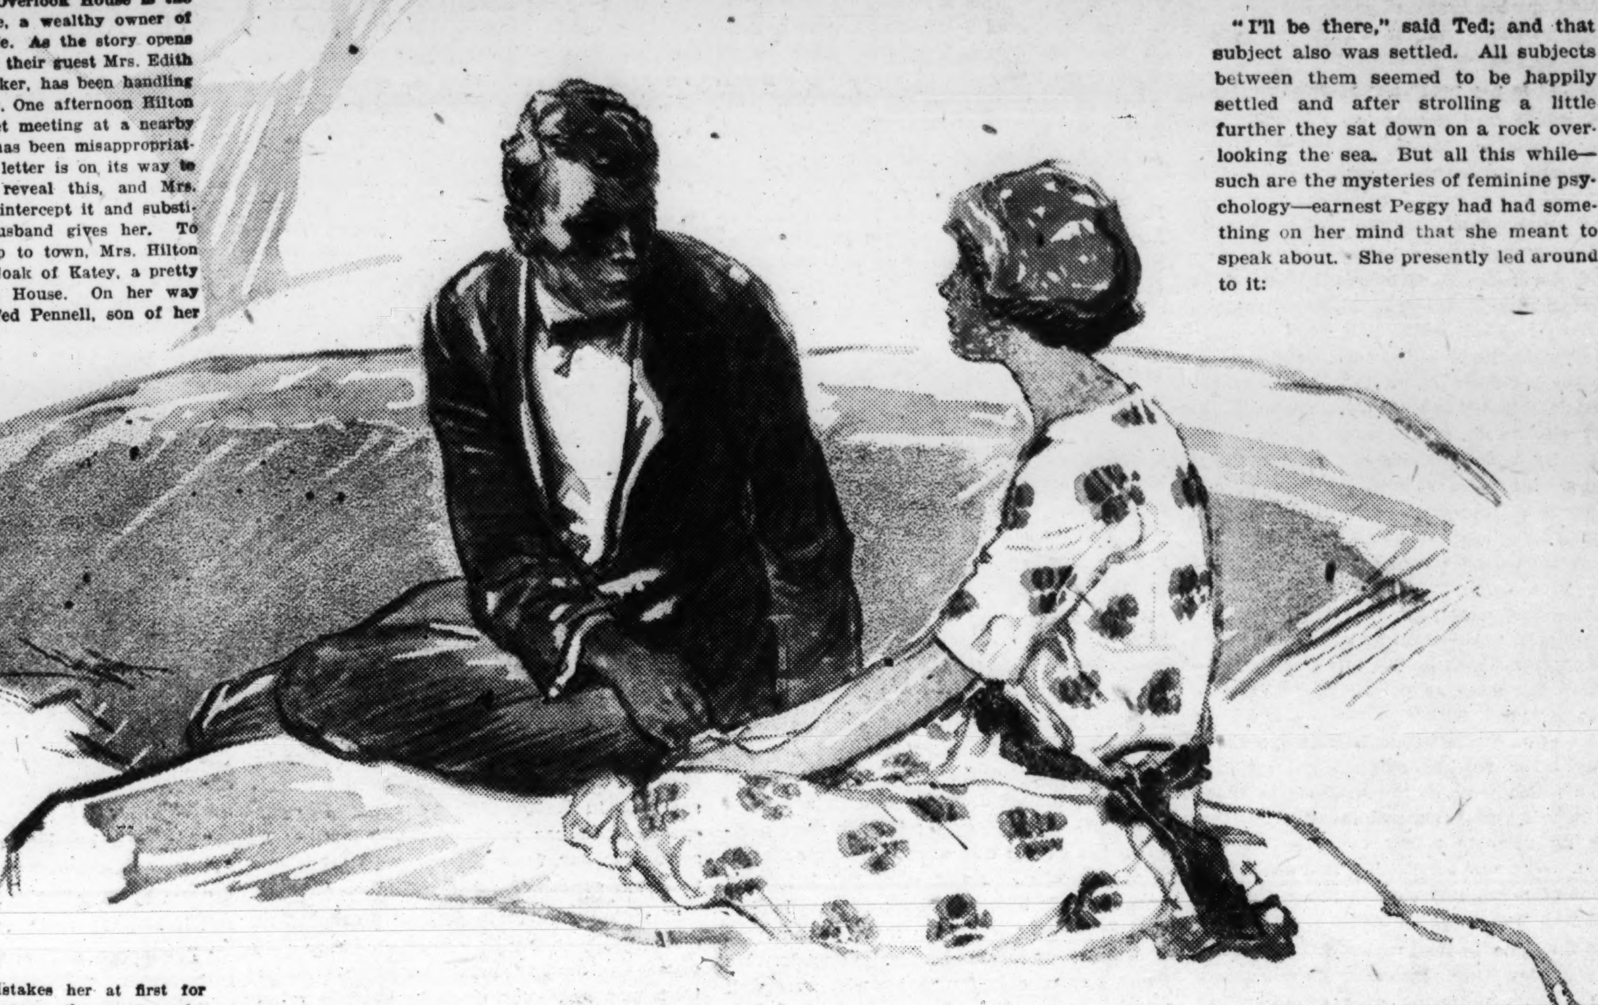
OVERLOOK HOUSE by Will Payne

THE STORY THUS FAR—Overlook House is the home of Judge Tillman Crane, a wealthy owner of oil lands, and his invalid wife. As the story opens the Cranes are entertaining as their guest Mrs. Edith Hilton, whose husband, a broker, has been handling the judge's financial interests. One afternoon Hilton summons his wife to a secret meeting at a nearby town and confesses that he has been misappropriating the Crane securities. A letter is on its way to Judge Crane which would reveal this, and Mrs. Hilton reluctantly agrees to intercept it and substitute another, which her husband gives her. To avoid recognition on her trip to town, Mrs. Hilton has borrowed the hat and cloak of Katey, a pretty maid employed at Overlook House. On her way back she is overtaken by Ted Pennell, son of her husband's partner, who mistakes her at first for the maid and then, discovering the masquerade, gives her a lift in his car. Ted promises secrecy and treats the little adventure as a joke, but several persons have seen the supposed maid in his car—among them Peggy Loughman, Ted's fiancée, who has been angered before by young Pennell's open philandering with the girl. Meanwhile there is some perplexity at Overlook House over the fact that Katey has disappeared. The first to admit any knowledge of her whereabouts is Samuel Thorp, a town loafer, who has seen the girl lying on a pile of clothes in the laundry, covered with a coat which he recognizes as one belonging to Ted Pennell. Thorp confides his secret to Louis, the gardener, an admirer of Katey's, and Louis, in turn, tells the disturbing story to Danforth Crane, the judge's son. The facts are not generally known, however, and young Pennell, only vaguely aware that something is wrong, devotes himself to Peggy Loughman and the scolding which he knows he deserves.



"O, Ted!" Peggy moaned, with a deep hurt. "Why do you tell me that?"

FIFTH INSTALLMENT.

The Girl in Ted's Car.

TED PENNELL was entertaining some strangers. They were relatives. Their name was Trouble. Of course, he had been acquainted with Trouble before—many times—but only a casual sort of acquaintance, undergone with a certain lightness because of a feeling that the visitor would soon depart. But this time the visitors had snuggled up close, as though they meant to stay indefinitely—biting at his heart and filling him with a woeful depression.

That showed more or less in his face and manner when he strolled along the seashore that Saturday talking with Peggy Loughman—as Danforth Crane had observed from the high ground at the edge of the woods to the north of Mrs. Loughman's house.

"Why, there's nothing at all in that Katey business, Peggy," he was saying, with a troubled earnestness. "It's just as I told you before. Billy Harlow and Chet Beals and I happened to be driving by that evening. We saw that dance pavilion on the beach—up toward Stony Cove. We went in just for greens. I saw Katey there and danced with her a few times. I've run across her half a dozen other places—down on the beach a couple of times, maybe, and so on. . . . I didn't think you'd be the girl, Peg, to raise a row because a man was just decent to a servant."

The girl's flowery cheeks flushed slightly and a tiny light glinted in her dark gray eyes. She might have answered that insinuation with a counter thrust; but she had resolved otherwise today, and replied reasonably, "Being decent to a servant has nothing to do with it, Ted. . . . I don't like Chester Beals."

"Well, I don't know's I'm infatuated with him myself," he answered, unhappily. He was aware that various people shared the prejudice she had mentioned; well aware, also, that there was considerable ground for it. But in a general way, and by mere reason of sex, he felt bound to defend the accused. "He's a good fellow, and good company."

"He's older than you and Billy Harlow—29 or 30," Peggy went on.

So there was the insinuation, intolerable to any self-respecting male, of being led astray by an older person. He could only smile and reply, "I've been taking solid food for quite a while, Peggy."

But she was not to be put off with a jest, for she had her own trouble. Her gray eyes looked at him gravely; a little droop came at the corners of her lips. "I saw him myself one evening with Katey in his car," she said, in a slightly lower tone. "I hated him for it. Say what you please—that it's only a little amusement and there's no harm in it, and all that. She is a maid. It isn't fine—it isn't nice—it isn't even decent. . . . I couldn't bear it from you."

She looked so grave and sweet that he could only blurt, "Why, Peggy, you know there's nobody in the world I care a whoop for except you!" As her loveliness filled his eyes and another figure contrasted itself with her in his mind, he blurted again:

"That maid! Why, Lord, Peg, you must think I'm crazy! You've know me half my life. You ought to know me!"

She then felt that she did know him—a warm hearted, good minded, loyal, blunderhead of a boy who had never really grown up.

"I do know you," she said. "I know you're careless, Ted. But you mustn't be—ever!—in a case like this."

She was tremendously earnest about that—a kind of breathless, life or death earnestness. He loved Peggy completely, without a reservation in his mind as to the fact that she was the only girl in the world, of whom he was not in the least worthy. But—well, these fits of hers of being so tremendously in earnest and taking things with such deadly seriousness—he realized, with humility, that they proceeded from the fineness of her character—but he found them rather baffling at times, this being one of the times.

It was baffling just now, in part, because he was really troubled a good deal in respect of Katey and he couldn't frankly tell her that trouble. She wouldn't understand it properly.

"I don't want to be careless, Peggy," he said, walking on and looking down. "For your sake, I don't want to be."

At best that was a blunderheaded, helpless sort of penitence, and not especially promising He felt that himself, and saw a round stone like a baseball and picked it up and hurled it into the sea; and was immediately ashamed of himself for that foolish action.

"I know I've been lazy," he went on. "I've never done a real honest lick of work in my life. I know that's not right. I'll be 24 years old this fall. I'm not a bit satisfied with myself, Peg. I know I ought to find a real job and go at it like a grown up person. And I'm going to do it, too."

He claimed no merit for the resolution—sa though he did not ask her to believe it until she had the proof—and verbally she gave him no merit, for she had made up her mind to plain speaking. But she spoke so gently that it was like the touch of a hand:

"It's true you ought to, Ted. I think your father is more to blame than you are, for anybody can get more fun out of playing than working. But playing around all the time isn't good. I don't think you're lazy, but I think you will be if you don't go at something in earnest."

"I'm going to," he replied, with conviction. "I've been thinking about it. I'm going to stay here over the Fourth of July and then I'm going back to the office and really go to work."

That sounded final. She slipped her hand into his, and after a moment confessed, "I'd hate to see you go; but I know you ought to."

Quite reconciled and in harmony, it seemed, they turned aside to round the heap of tumbled stone that screened the coffee pot and slipped down through the crevice in the granite to the pot's brim. It was still raging mightily and the spell of its tumultuous energy caught their healthy nerves at once. Ted stepped to the very brim, looking down on the seething water with the old, foolish fascination of wanting to pit his skill and muscle against it. He watched the currents a moment, grinned, and raised his voice so that Peggy could hear it above the roar:

"Never will be satisfied till I see whether I can swim across!"

She put her hand under his arm and drew him away; but the subtle excitement was in her blood, too.

"I'm going bathing tomorrow," she said, when they had got around the rock screen, which dulled the roar.

He laughed and replied, "Bet you put it off!"

The sea water up there was icy cold all summer. She dreaded the first plunge—and had been putting it off, to his amusement.

"No," she replied, "tomorrow—if it's fair. You call for me with the water wagon at 11 o'clock."

They found it more convenient to put on their bathing suits at home and ride down to the beach, returning wrapped in waterproofs. But in spite of the wrappings the return journey was sure to be somewhat sloppy, so an old close car in Judge Crane's garage was set aside for that purpose. They called it the water wagon.

"I'll be there," said Ted; and that subject also was settled. All subjects between them seemed to be happily settled and after strolling a little further they sat down on a rock overlooking the sea. But all this while—such are the mysteries of feminine psychology—earnest Peggy had had something on her mind that she meant to speak about. She presently led around to it:

"At any rate, I'd like to know where Katey is."

"O, she's all right," Ted replied, looking away, and in the tone of a person who wishes to drop a subject—for he also had something on his mind, which, unlike Peggy, he didn't mean to mention.

"Why do you think so?" Peggy asked, her eyes upon his face.

But his eyes avoided her and his tone was not satisfactory as he replied: "Why wouldn't she be?"

"You haven't heard anything about her?"

"Not a word," Ted replied, and stooped to pick up a pebble and shy it off into the water. Sometimes he acted that way when his mind was disturbed.

A little pause; then, "Where was she Thursday morning?"

Ted looked around then, saying, "Thursday morning? I've no idea. I didn't see her all day Thursday—that I remember."

Peggy was looking straight at him, and said, "Thursday morning, Ted—about noon."

"Why, no!" he affirmed. "I've no idea where she was. I didn't see her."

The gray eyes that held his seemed to grow darker and Peggy said, "Thursday about noon—in your car."

"Why, no!" he repeated. "I didn't see her at all Thursday. She wasn't in my car."

"O, Ted!" Peggy moaned, with a deep hurt. "Why do you tell me that?"

She burst forth passionately, "It isn't true! I saw her myself in your car with you! Mother saw you, too. We were hardly two rods behind you at one time. We both saw you!"

And then unlucky Ted recalled the events of Thursday morning when a woman in Katey's coat and hat sat beside him in his car. But he was in honor bound not to tell who the woman was—and much confused to boot—so he muttered foolishly, "Well—say she was with me"

"But why did you tell me she wasn't?" Peggy accused, hurt through and through.

"I forgot," the unlucky young man muttered again.

But that was almost worse than before. "You couldn't have forgotten!" she cried. Indeed, her wound rankled. "You didn't tell me the truth! You didn't tell me the truth!" she exclaimed, in pain.

And in Ted's confusion and humiliation he was thinking that a man with anything on his shoulders except a pumpkin would have remembered that Edith Hilton was in his car, wearing Katey's cloak, and so have avoided blundering into such a mess.

THE NEW QUEEN—Miss Norma Talmadge, an' it please your majesties! This young woman, who in private life is Mrs. Joseph Schenck, just ran away with the honors in the recent contest conducted by The Tribune to ascertain the most popular actress in moviedom.

Miss Talmadge was born in Niagara Falls, N. Y., in 1897 and educated in the Brooklyn schools. At the age of fourteen she entered motion pictures, being first associated with Vitagraph. She has played with various companies, numbering among these Fine Arts, Triangle, Selznick, and Select. She now heads her own company. The last picture, I believe, you saw her in was "The Branded Woman."

The new queen of moviedom is five feet, two inches tall, weighs 110 pounds and has dark hair and brown eyes. Isn't this a lovely picture of her?

Skin Eruptions Fade Away

With War's Wonder Healing Agent

Ends itching, eczema, dandruff, boils, carbuncles—soothes inflamed skin as nothing else can. Free trial proves it. Test its many uses.

Most skin diseases are due to tiny germs that enter the skin through the pores. So the one and only scientific way to end the trouble is to destroy the germs.

Never before was there an antiseptic so healing, so effective in destroying germs, and with so many users, as ploria. The way it wipes out eczema, barber's itch, and other skin diseases, almost challenges belief. The way it soothes irritation, soreness, itching scalp and itching anywhere is truly amazing. For dandruff, simply wet the scalp with Kloria and notice this troublesome affection disappear with a few of these easy treatments, yet it is harmless as water to the hair. One trial for almost any skin disease shows results you never thought possible.

This is the same wonderful antiseptic agent, discovered in the war, which healed wounds often in one-fourth the usual time, and conquered infection where all old-standard antiseptics had failed.

Kloria doesn't irritate, is soothing, pleasant and absolutely safe because not poisonous. Yet, by scientific test, it is over 40 times more germ-destroying than carbolic acid.

Test Kloria on a boil, carbuncle or open sore. Notice how it destroys the pus infection, ends the soreness and heals with magic quickness. For cuts and burns, it insures quicker, cleaner healing than iodine, peroxide or any old-time antiseptic or salve. Use it for mouth wash or gargle—see how quickly it relieves sore throat and canker sores—how clean the mouth feels. Apply it to sore, bleeding gums (pyorrea) and see if the soreness and bleeding do not disappear within a week. Harmless, yet far more effective than poisonous antiseptics for personal hygiene.

Dissolve a few Kloria Tablets in water and instantly you have, at a cost of a few cents, a large bottle of liquid antiseptic, which is clean, colorless, stainless and virtually odorless.

All druggists, 50c. Money refunded if not satisfied.

Peace on Earth, Good Will to Men

AND it came to pass in those days, that there went out a decree from Çæ′-sär Âu-gŭs′-tŭs, that all the world should be taxed.

2 (And this taxing was first made when Çȳ-rē′-nĭ-ŭs was governor of Sy̆r′-ĭ-ă.)

3 And all went to be taxed, every one into his own city.

4 And Jō′-sĕph also went up from Găl′-ĭ-lêe, out of the city of Năz′-ă-rĕth, into Jû-dæ′-ă, unto the city of Dā′-vĭd, which is called Bĕth′-lĕ-hĕm; (because he was of the house and lineage of Dā′-vĭd:)

6 And so it was, that, while they were there, the days were accomplished that she should be delivered.

7 And she brought forth her firstborn son, and wrapped him in swaddling clothes, and laid him in a manger; because there was no room for them in the inn.

8 And there were in the same country shepherds abiding in the field, keeping watch over their flock by night.

9 And, lo, the angel of the Lord came upon them, and the glory of the Lord shone round about them: and they were sore afraid.

10 And the angel said unto them, Fear not: for, behold, I bring you good tidings of great joy, which shall be to all people.

11 For unto you is born this day in the city of Dā′-vĭd a Saviour, which is Christ the Lord.

12 And this shall be a sign unto you; Ye shall find the babe wrapped in swaddling clothes, lying in a manger.

13 And suddenly there was with the angel a multitude of the heavenly host praising God, and saying,

14 Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, good will toward men.

WILSON'S NEW HOME?—It was made known recently in Washington that negotiations have been under way to purchase for the president the residence of Congressman Alvin T. Fuller of Massachusetts. The property is on Wyoming avenue, N. W., in the best residential section of the capital. No intimation was given as to whether the house was to be bought as an investment, or to be occupied by the president and his family.

Beautify Your Hair with "DANDERINE"

35c a bottle! Freshen your scalp! Stop falling hair! Remove dandruff! Have lots of wavy, glossy, beautiful hair! You can!

IF YOU care for heavy hair, that glistens with beauty and is radiant with life; has an incomparable softness and is fluffy and lustrous, try Danderine.

Just one application doubles the beauty of your hair; besides, it eradicates every particle of dandruff; you cannot have nice, heavy, healthy hair if you have dandruff. This destructive scurf robs the hair of its luster, its strength and its very life, and if not overcome it produces a feverishness and itching of the scalp, the hair roots famish, loosen and die; then the hair falls out fast.

If your hair has been neglected and is thin, faded, dry, scraggy, or too oily, get a bottle of Knowlton's Danderine, apply a little as directed, and ten minutes after you will say this was the best investment you ever made.

We sincerely believe, regardless of everything else advertised, that if you desire soft, lustrous, beautiful hair and lots of it—no dandruff—no itching scalp and no more falling hair—you must use Knowlton's Danderine. If eventually, why not now?

Fashions Beauty Contests

SOME SUGGESTIONS FOR THE FANCY DRESS BALL

by CORINNE LOWE

NEW YORK.—(Special Correspondence.)—Are you Juliet bored and Carmen sated? Have you gone to fancy dress parties so often as Columbine that you feel as if your everyday clothes were the real disguise? Have you committed Velasquez infantacide and Roman peasant costumes every year of your life? If so, we address to you this page.

Last winter was a season of fancy dress parties. This winter bids to outshine last in the multitude and variety of its masquerade festivities. New York started the fancy dress rolling with a Venetian fete where you went as everything except the Grand canal. Now the holiday calendar is filled with such events. January in particular is going to be brimming over with them.

Of course, the fashionable spend hundreds and even thousands of dollars on a costume built for a single evening. The most of us, however, have to look around for a fancy dress with a plain price. Not for us average mortals the Doge's Mother Hubbard crusted with jewels or the Arabian Nights costume that would keep even Aladdin's genie hustling for the price.

With the idea of both individuality and economy in view, the costumes found above were designed. The one at the left shows, as is quite obvious, the trotteur of the daisy. Infinitely charming is the petaled skirt constructed of white tarletan attached to a tight fitting bodice of yellow satin trimmed about neck and armholes with more of the tarletan petals.

The cap of yellow satin is similarly completed, while slippers and silk stockings are green. This dress is delightful for the slim girl, but, as for the plump—ah, her pet alias should not be the daisy.

Upon the botanical kingdom one may draw unendingly for inspiration. Go as a flower and you won't stay as a wallflower—this seems to be a good, reliable motto for the masquerade dance. There is the sunflower dress, for example, to be made with yellow tarletan petals and a brown velvet bodice and cap treated as the one in the daisy illustration.

Then, too, one may consider the lilies. In this connection I want to speak of one of the most unusual masquerades I have ever seen.

It was made to imitate a calla lily, and with this motivation the white satin skirt tapering to a point at the ankles—made safe for dancing by the insertion of elastic—widened into wired folds that came up almost under the arms. The bodice, made to echo the stamen of the flower, was of yellow velvet scattered all over with loops of white silk floss, and it continued its authority to a tight fitting cap of the same material treated in the same way. This cap banded the forehead and then dropped down squarely over the ears after the manner of the boudoir cap of Rameses.

The man of the family usually has a hard time getting ready for a fancy dress party. He is attired with what skill and spare time is left over from his wife's Dutch peasant dress or his daughter's gypsy costume. And if he doesn't rent a "revolutionary" or a "Romeo" they generally sew him into a blue denim smock and smash a Tam o' Shanter down over a free eyebrow to let the world know that here's a gay artist straight from the Latin quarter.

The second illustration from the left indicates how these methods may be varied in a way that does not exact too much time and money for mere John. This is a Russian costume and consists of black velveteen trousers, black leather boots, a red flannel shirt that is no strain even on the amateur dressmaker, a black leather belt, and a black astrakhan cap.

Of course, no Russian disguise goes without its headdress, and here the becoming structure of white satin studded with imitation stones and hung with a white veil takes to itself a proper amount responsibility for the picturesqneness of the dress. The boots are plum colored leather.

The last is an old friend in a new guise—or disguise. This costume is worked out in white satin and black velvet, and really puts quite a little punch in Punchinello. But, though there are folks—both men and women—who seem to have what you might call Pierrot temperaments and who have adopted this as the uniform of their fancy dress parties, the most of us try to get away from this attire, just as we do from the other conservatives of these occasions—the cow puncher, the baby costume, the Dutch girl, the Red Man, et cetera.

There are really so many sources of inspiration for the occasion such as this that it is not obligatory to be hackneyed about it. A look over the costume books in the libraries will reveal many historical modes, a number of which will be found quite easy to copy.

Some of the Greek and Egyptian dresses for men and women take us, for example, far from the familiar presentations of these modes. And for those who are at all skillful with cardboard what delightful characters we may choose for ourselves from "Alice in Wonderland." The Red Queen! The White Knight! The Mad Hatter! With ingenuity we may become any one of them.

Speaking now a word regarding the modes which stage us, not as Rosalind or Viola or the Russian peasant, but as ourselves, we note few changes during the last month. Go into any smart restaurant today and you will find there exactly the same things of which we wrote in September and October. It is rather mean of the fashionable to provide so little variety for the fashion writer, already wan and hollow eyed from having had to talk so much of long waist lines, choker collars, panels, etc., but we really can't do anything else than accuse. The sad fact remains that fashion seems static.

Are they still wearing short sleeves? Indeed, yes. In spite of the determined efforts of the designers, both here and abroad, it is remarkable how many fashionable American arms are still at large. Even when the smart high collar has prevailed the sleeve often remains short.

Arms won't be committed to their modish penitentiaries, and she who has invested in long gloves is holding on to them. Of course, later on the American arm will probably prove more tractable. But for some months more we may wear the short sleeve and the long glove and not be nervous about our appearance.

The frock which combines black and blue is one of the outstanding features of present modes. It seems to go with tea as frequently as toast. But, then, so do the various sands and browns. These latter, by the way, are so often trimmed with otter that it looks as if everybody had been organizing an attack on father's old skating cap. This pelt is really one of the most fashionable things you can do.

Broadcloth has come into its own again. It is used even now and then for an evening dress—this with the authority of Callot. For afternoon dresses it appears quite frequently, and we have reverted to our former habit of trimming this fabic with lace—usually the dyed variety so much seen this year. The fact of it is that we're awfully careless about lace nowadays. We allow it to go with anything, and as a result you see it on various kinds of cloth models.

Pipings are an ornamentation frequently encountered nowadays, and although as a rule these occur in silk on a cloth frock, I saw a fashionable woman the other day just reversing this custom. For her blue silk frock was trimmed with pipings of black broadcloth. But then, apparently, the more you reverse the more modish you are.

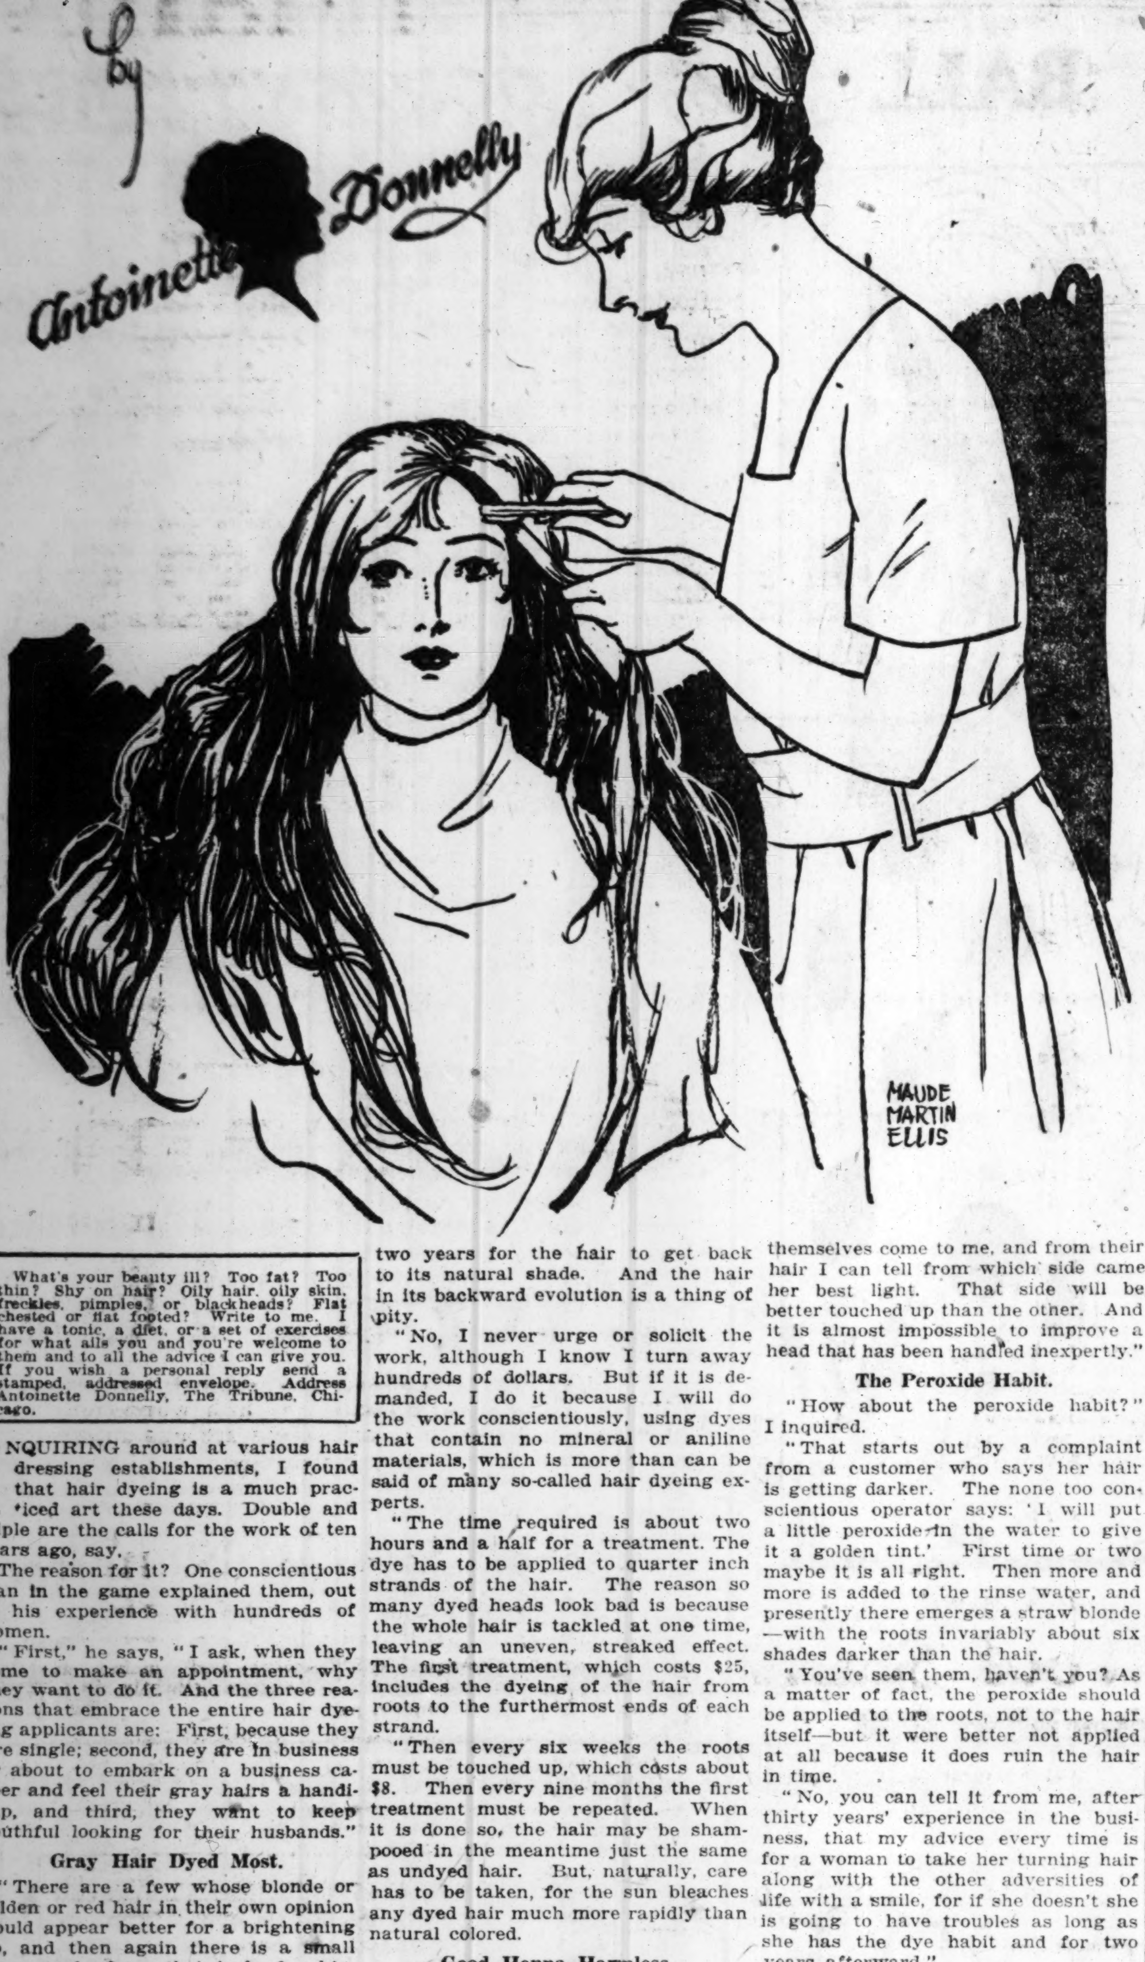
HAIR DYEING

By Antoinette Donnelly



What's your beauty ill? Too fat? Too thin? Shy on hair? Oily hair, oily skin, freckles, pimples, or blackheads? Flat chested or flat footed? Write to me. I have a tonic, a diet, or a set of exercises for what ails you and you're welcome to them and to all the advice I can give you. If you wish a personal reply send a stamped, addressed envelope. Address Antoinette Donnelly, The Tribune, Chicago.

INQUIRING around at various hair dressing establishments, I found that hair dyeing is a much practiced art these days. Double and triple are the calls for the work of ten years ago, say.

The reason for it? One conscientious man in the game explained them, out of his experience with hundreds of women.

"First," he says, "I ask, when they come to make an appointment, why they want to do it. And the three reasons that embrace the entire hair dyeing applicants are: First, because they are single; second, they are in business or about to embark on a business career and feel their gray hairs a handicap, and third, they want to keep youthful looking for their husbands."

Gray Hair Dyed Most.

"There are a few whose blonde or golden or red hair in their own opinion would appear better for a brightening up, and then again there is a small element who fancy their lack of a shining red crown stands between them and happiness. On the whole, however, it is the graying hairs that send women scuttling to the dye parlors.'

"The other day a young woman with prematurely gray hair came to me. Her hair was beautiful, and I tried to argue her out of dyeing it. She had a tall, willowy figure, a lovely complexion, and her gray hair, to me, just added that note of extreme distinction which set her apart from other women. I sent her away convinced, I thought. But alas for the frailties of man's judgment. In a week she was back, saying:

"'Don't argue with me, but go right ahead and dye my hair. Last night I was coming home in the street car and standing at the crowded end near the door. A young man seated spied my gray hair and beckoned me as he rose. Nearer to him were two women older than I, but my gray hairs touched his pity and he picked me out. I came back to you to do the work because I figure if you were conscientious enough to argue me out of the deed you'd do it more conscientiously than any other.'

An Expensive Process.

"Why do you argue women out of such a splendid source of income?" I asked, genuinely curious to know.

"Because," he told me, "it is an expensive item for women both in time and money. Once the dyeing habit is begun it is a life's job. If she gets weary of the trip to the dyers and the expense thereof, it takes exactly two years for the hair to get back to its natural shade. And the hair in its backward evolution is a thing of pity.

"No, I never urge or solicit the work, although I know I turn away hundreds of dollars. But if it is demanded, I do it because I will do the work conscientiously, using dyes that contain no mineral or aniline materials, which is more than can be said of many so-called hair dyeing experts.

"The time required is about two hours and a half for a treatment. The dye has to be applied to quarter inch strands of the hair. The reason so many dyed heads look bad is because the whole hair is tackled at one time, leaving an uneven, streaked effect. The first treatment, which costs $25, includes the dyeing of the hair from roots to the furthermost ends of each strand.

"Then every six weeks the roots must be touched up, which costs about $8. Then every nine months the first treatment must be repeated. When it is done so, the hair may be shampooed in the meantime just the same as undyed hair. But, naturally, care has to be taken, for the sun bleaches any dyed hair much more rapidly than natural colored.

Good Henna Harmless.

"A mistake some women make is wanting to have their hair dyed a color other than its original natural shade, which is responsible for the foreign (foreign-from-the-face, I mean) appearance. Or, you may call it hardened effect on the features. The best henna dyes can be mixed to supply the demand of any shade from ash blonde to jet back. And these good henna dyes are not injurious to the hair. But, like everything else, there are poor hennas and imitation hennas on the market."

"How are you going to tell the good dye from the bad?" I inquired.

"By the price," he answered. "The cheaper dyes are generally mixed with some mineral or aniline dye, which makes the hair not only an ugly color but brittle and broken and dead looking.

"With the genuine henna there is no such trouble. It is made from the leaves of a henna shrub growing in the orient. Used alone it will produce only a red shade. Mixed with other herbs the other colors are arrived at. And the public knows enough about dye mixing troubles to appreciate it takes a man who knows his business to make a successful outcome of this mixing.

"That's why a woman should never attempt to dye her own hair. And again, she cannot see properly even with the aid of her mirror how to apply it evenly. I have had any number of women who have experimented themselves come to me, and from their hair I can tell from which side came her best light. That side will be better touched up than the other. And it is almost impossible to improve a head that has been handled inexpertly."

The Peroxide Habit.

"How about the peroxide habit?" I inquired.

"That starts out by a complaint from a customer who says her hair is getting darker. The none too conscientious operator says: 'I will put a little peroxide in the water to give it a golden tint.' First time or two maybe it is all right. Then more and more is added to the rinse water, and presently there emerges a straw blonde—with the roots invariably about six shades darker than the hair.

"You've seen them, haven't you? As a matter of fact, the peroxide should be applied to the roots, not to the hair itself—but it were better not applied at all because it does ruin the hair in time.

"No, you can tell it from me, after thirty years' experience in the business, that my advice every time is for a woman to take her turning hair along with the other adversities of life with a smile, for if she doesn't she is going to have troubles as long as she has the dye habit and for two years afterward."

Pretty good advice, don't you think, from a man at the head of his profession and who gives it in the face of the growing demand and his own monetary loss?

Beauty Answers.

M. J.: THE ROLLING EXERCISES for reducing may have worked out all right with your friend, but I think there are many other exercises which leave you less sore and which call for less space per performance and for more active muscle work. I have these in illustrated form for you. But I think if you are really seriously anxious to reduce you better make up your mind to a short spell of fasting. After all, exercising will make small improvement in your figure if you undo the good work by eating heartily before or after. It's the food that fattens, and reducing the amount of daily intake is what slims the figure.

MRS. JONES: I don't think much of massage and baths to get rid of superfluous flesh. They are all right along with other things. The other things—and the only safe and sane ones—are diet and exercise. It is not a simple task to reduce. You have to work and go without fattening foods. If you feel equal to it, send stamped, addressed envelope, and I'll furnish you with seven diets from which to choose and a few exercises you must do to prevent the return of what the diet sluices off.

Is Present Day Dress Immodest?

What do you think about the present day dress? Dr. Charles W. Eliot, president emeritus of Harvard, says it is indecent. Do you think so or not? Do you approve of the modern maid's rouged cheeks and abbreviated skirts, or no? Do you think her morals different than those of the maid of a decade or so ago as the result of her dress vagaries? The Tribune will pay $1 for every letter published on this much discussed topic. Send along your opinion. Write on one side of page only. Address Miss Atnoinette Donnelly, The Tribune, Chicago.

Why Do They Do It?

I am of middle age, have lived in New York, Philadelphia, Boston, and Chicago, and have traveled considerably in central Europe. As a matter of course, therefore, I have had the opportunity to see all sorts of people. Always excepting the women whose profession it is to attract the attention of men, I have never seen the like of the present day costumes and general getup of the alas-no-longer gentler sex. The girls who do not paint, torture their hair into the resemblance of a Hottentot, waddle along on hideous stiltlike heels, and fairly push their faces into those of the man they are with at the moment, absolutely radiate charm in comparison with such "see me, look at me" girls. The loose georgette waists hide nothing, especially if the wearer leans over, as she so invariably contrives to do. Why does a girl wear them, and the tight one pant leg skirt an inch below her knee, perhaps, and thin open work stockings, if not to show her body? If that is not immodest, then nothing is!

J. E.

Always With Us.

The dress question again! As to settling it, it can't be done. Since the first fig leaf was donned, it has been with us, and always will be. The girl of today is no more indecent in her dress than the girls of two or three centuries ago. What if the dresses are scantier than those of her grandmother's days? Her frank dressless state is less artful than the style which concealed.

As to dressing for men—bosh. A few weeks spent in a girl's school would change the minds of all who hold this view. Though they seldom see a man of any description, they are always as carefully groomed as any woman of the world. No, indeed. Girls dress for their own satisfaction. And perhaps there is just a little thought of arousing envy in the hearts of schoolmates.

Nor does the present day girl overdo makeup. It is perfectly all right for hes to aid nature to any extent she may see fit. When a man's shoulders are not as broad or as square as public opinion decrees, his tailor simply pads his coat. Why should the men object to our makeup?

G. M.

Grandma Doesn't Mind.

When considering the modes and manners of the girl of today, let us consider some of the styles of the past generation. Paint, powder, and false hair were worn in those days. The old time bustle, often of enormous size, was ridiculous. When the wind struck the hoop skirts, there was as frank a display of legs as the present day dress affords.

When I was about 15 I was compelled to dress plainly, and paint, powder, and bustles were denied me. I rebelled, and securing a leaf from a red rose on mother's hat, I painted my cheeks. I made mother's large gingham apron into a bustle, and went to school feeling extremely stylish. When I came home I heard mother exclaim: "What is the matter with you? Come here to me." Too late I realized that I had forgotten to remove the style. I received a severe lecture, being assured that girls were undoubtedly on the road to perdition.

Let us remember the days of our youth, and perhaps we will find that the girl of the present day is as sweet and modest as the girl of the past.

EASE IN WEARING CLOTHES.

By Mary Brush Williams.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

PARIS.—[Special Correspondence.]—Don't you remember—or was it before your day—how frightfully complex everything looked at one time? It didn't seem quite modest for you to be on the street unless you looked as if you had taken a long time to dress. Nowadays you must look exactly the opposite.

I know a girl—that is to say a woman I know has a window that looks into hers and she tells me about a girl. She gets up at about 10 o'clock and begins dressing for dejeuner, which achievement she accomplishes along around noon. At about half past 2 she gets through and comes up to prepare for tea. Right after tea she begins on her toilette for dinner. A fresh makeup goes on for each of those rites, and every separate hair seems to get adjusted.

This girl is one of the successes of the year. She is English, and everybody says how simple and fresh and unaffected and how altogether not fussed up she is. She always looks as if the last thing in the world she ever thought of was how she looked. It is an art and at the same time an industry to look like that.

There was an American girl over here recently whose name I used to be forever seeing in the New York and Newport society news. I was surprised at her absence of ease in wearing clothes.

She had a dress of white velvet with a black train, and instead of letting that train take its course, she would get up from the Ritz dining table on Sunday night and carefully arrange it before starting across the room. Out in the hall she spread it round her after sitting down at the coffee table. Whenever she made a gesture she looked down to see what effect it had on her train.

That is precisely not the way to conduct yourself with regard to your clothes. Spend all of your time and money on them, but for goodness' sake look as if you had put your time at least, if not your capital, into charity—as if the last subject that ever came into your head was clothes. All of the clothes of the day look as if they were easy to get out of. The bath robe influence is strong.

A friend of mine is having Poiret do this coat for her in bottle green velvet, fitted in at the waistline and trimmed at the belt in front in two Persian ornaments of antique silver. You could have it for spring in taffeta. The collar and the deep cuffs and the bottom of the coat are run round with deep bands of sable. I didn't know there was that much sable in the world today, nor enough money to buy it. Embroidery would be pretty for spring.

The small hat is of old leaf brown, to blend into the sable, and it is draped over the front with a tiny tulle veil of bottle green.

Aprons are still fashionable. Some say they make you look slim and others that they make you look young. I suppose you will not turn them down on either of these grounds. The frock in the sketch is worn by Mlle. Maille in "La Traversée," and is awfully chic. It is of reddish brown velvet, trimmed with skunk, and it has lots of embroidery on the apron in gray, reddish brown, and something that is beginning to be called "fire color." There is a hat to match, with a gray lace veil not much larger than a tea napkin covering it.

The next gown also is worn on the stage—all of the best looking ones are. No better recommendation can be given for a gown than to say it appears on the French stage.

This one is worn in "Le Retour." It is of London smoke colored duvetyn with a trimming of skunk fur that starts immediately under the ears at the summit of the high collar and runs down the side of the extremely straight robe to the bottom in a double line.

Three buttons fasten the collar, and one on the hip holds the coat together at the waist. Another double line of fur descends from that point to the bottom.

A muff goes with the costume of the material and is banded in fur. The actress wears a small hat with it of brownish gray trimmed with a satin ribbon round the crown which falls in a bow on one side. Fur edges the tight sleeves.

Mlle. Marthe Regnier wears the next gown in the same production. She has golden hair cut short, and this dress of soft pink satin looks awfully pretty on her. It is so draped that on one side, falling as it does in carefully studied folds, we can see a lining of a deeper shade of rose pink. The combination with the girl's hair is lovely. Over the gown she wears a very transparent sort of silver coat in sheer lace. The gown is from Martial & Armand.

Got There After All.

It happened at a large and elaborate wedding not long ago. I had been invited but decided I would not go, as crowds always make me nervous. However, the bride asked me to slip up the back stairs to see her in her wedding gown. I did so, and after exclaiming how lovely she looked I followed her to the head of the stairs as the wedding march was played and the wedding party descended. Growing bolder, I ventured a peep at the crowd below, having to lean far over to see them, when suddenly I lost my balance and tumbled head first down into the midst of the crowd in my bungalow apron. There was a roar of laughter as I picked myself up and made for the front door.

An Informal Stroll.

I am in the habit of throwing my overcoat over my arm when only going a short distance. That at least was my custom during the fall days. One afternoon I left the store in which I work and went to a barber shop, two blocks distant. As it was a rather warm day I did not take my overcoat on leaving the store. On getting out of the barber chair I put on my vest and threw my coat over my arm. I paid the check, put on the old hat, and headed for the store. Feeling the coat in the customary position, I felt O. K., but noticed several people looking at me. I didn't realize what I had done until I entered the store and the boys gave me the once over. I always take my overcoat along now.

Burst In Crying.

A few days after we had moved into our new apartment, and had hardly become acquainted with the neighbors, I noticed quite a smoke coming from the windows just beneath ours. Thinking something was on fire, I hurried down the stairs and rather unceremoniously burst into the kitchen of our downstairs neighbor, crying, "Something's burning, something's on fire." I was met with an indignant stare and the icy remark: "I beg your pardon, I'm just frying chops." It was some time before I had the courage to talk to my neighbor, but we have since come to an understanding.

L. S.

Two of a Kind.

I was going with a girl, and her friend gave a Hallowe'en party, and we both received an invitation to come and I wouldn't take her and said I wasn't going, so I took another girl and when we went in there she was with another fellow.

Looking for Something.

While in a car the other day three young fellows tried to get my attention. Of course, I tried to act unconcerned, and for something to do was rummaging through my handbag, pretending to be looking for something, when my rouge box fell out and rolled down the aisle of the car, the rouge broken in little bits, strewn everywhere.

All About Napoleon.

In history class I was reciting. The teacher asked me to what island Napoleon had been banished.

"Corsica," I answered.

The teacher did not seem to notice my error. She simply asked: "Where is it?"

"In the southern part of Africa," said I.

How the class howled.

N.

Bought and Paid For.

The other night as I was getting off a street car I noticed a newspaper between the iron rods in the rear of the car. I picked it up, put it under my arm, and the first thing I knew the conductor said to me: "Pardon me, my dear woman, but I paid for that paper."

A Bath for Bossy.

I was always fond of pets, and whenever I was sent to spend the summer with my aunt who lived in a small town I had to leave my best friend Paddy, my dog.

Everything about auntie's house was spic and span. She had one cow, and I decided it would make a fine pet. I often wondered why the cow was not kept clean, like everything else, so on a warm afternoon when Aunt Margaret went shopping, I tied the cow to a small tree on the front lawn, got a pail of water, laundry soap, a broom, a bath towel, and a stool to stand on, and started to clean bossy.

It wasn't long before the neighbors were out in their yards gazing at me. My chest was beginning to expand I was so proud of my work, when my aunt returned. She said not a word, but took me by the ear into the house. After ten long minutes of advice I was convinced that even cows of the most distinguished families are not bathed in front yards.

E. W.

Never Thought of That.

When I was a child I was always in some kind of mischief. One day my older brother went fishing, and coming home he left the fish pole and hook in the yard. Of course, I had to play with it, getting the hook in my lip. My cries brought my mother to the rescue and upon seeing me she became so excited that she ran to the doctor with me, forgetting to cut the line and hook from the pole. My sister carried the pole and we all three ran through Main street. The sight of every one laughing soon brought them to their senses.

Arnold bought a small gift for mother. When an elder brother saw it he laughed and said: "Guess you must have paid about a quarter for that."

"Well," answered Arnold, "mother won't care how much it cost. She knows it isn't the much, it's the feeling that counts."

Eleanor, accompanied by a pet kitten, was playing on the sidewalk. A stray dog came up to them with which Eleanor immediately became friendly. Meanwhile the kitten proceeded to swell up and spit, showing usual cat dislike for a dog. Eleanor, noticing the cat's apparent displeasure, said, "Look at that, will you? She always acts like that when I speak to a dog."

John and his sister, Sara, had, the last two or three years, dressed up in some funny costumes, wore masks, carried lighted pumpkins, and went to their great grandmother's home to scare her and their great aunties as well. But this year John informed his mother that he was not going to dress up and go out with Sara. He was going out with the boys and "do damage."

Ethel was fond of her next door neighbor and called him grandpa. One day grandpa's family were all away but himself and he invited Ethel to eat dinner with him. After dinner Ethel went to him and said: "Grandpa, that was a very good dinner and I enjoyed it very much."

Grandpa replied: "I think you are very nice to say that and I think, Alice, the cook would like to hear you say it. Suppose you go to the kitchen and tell it to her."

Ethel ran to the kitchen and shouted: "Say, Alice, that was some good feed you gave us!"

Ethel had brothers.

Katherine was trying to say her evening prayers, but the hum of conversation in the room seemed to distract her.

Finally she said, "You folks talk so much I can't say my prayers."

"Huh," said Harold, her brother, "I know mine so well now I don't need to say them any more."

Billy went over to play at Arthur's house but returned so soon that his mother was surprised. "Why did you come home so soon?" she inquired.

"What was it he said," questioned mother.

"He said, 'Tell that noisy kid to go home.'"

MAE MARTIN ELLIS

NEW YEAR'S LORE

by DORIS BLAKE

NEW YEAR'S night quiet and clear indicates a prosperous year.

On New Year's eve while the clock is striking 12 repeat three times, "Good St. Anne, good St. Anne, send me a man as fast as you can," and you will become engaged within a year.

Spend on New Year, spend all the year.

The Chinese say that if a man sits up for ten years in succession and sees the new year come in he will have a long life.

It is unlucky to refuse a beggar anything on New Year's day, or to refuse a request of any kind.

It is lucky to rise early on New Year's morning.

If the first carol singer who comes to the door on New Year's morning is brought in at the front door, taken all through the house, and let out at the back door it will bring luck to the house for a year.

When the wind blows on New Year's night, it is a sign of pestilence.

If your first caller on New Year's day is a male, you will have good luck and many friends; if a female, bad luck and few friends.

"If you wash clothes on New Year's day,

Turn your pillow at midnight of the 31st of December and you will dream of the one you are to marry.

It brings good luck to place a piece of money on the window on New Year's eve.

If the first man you speak to on New Year's morning has his hands in his pockets, you will have a hard time getting what money you want during the year.

It is an old Dutch superstition that if you want to marry the girl you love, your voice must be the first one she hears and your face the first she sees on New Year's morning.

Superstitious folk consider it important to notice whom you meet the first thing on New Year's day. If it is a man, you will have good luck, if a woman, bad luck; if a priest, you will die within a year; if a policeman, you will have litigation.

The first person of the opposite sex you meet on New Year's day will bear the Christian name of your future partner.

If ice melts on Jan. 1 it will freeze on April 1.

Feed the birds well on New Year's morning by placing a sheaf of wheat or barley or some bread outside your house, then good luck will attend you, and good crops and prosperity come to you during the whole year.

On New Year's eve take your hymnbook to your bedroom, blow out the lamp, open your book, and mark a hymn (in the dark), put it under your pillow, and sleep on it. Next morning read the hymn, and it will indicate the events of the year.

It is unlucky to have clothes hanging on the line when the New Year is born.

Cook cabbage on New Year's day and you will have good luck all the year.

Burn all the visiting cards that have been received throughout the year on Jan. 1. If you keep them from year to year you will have bad luck.

If you have not provided yourself with a calendar before the New Year comes in you will be behind hand in all your undertakings during the year.

In Japan oranges are hung up on New Year's day as a charm to insure the long life of the family.

The Chinese believe it bad luck to pay all of outstanding accounts on the last of the year and begin fresh and straight on New Year's day.

Just before midnight on New Year's eve the Chinese put on new or clean garments, so as to enter the new year purely, and thus gain good fortune to themselves.

On New Year's night it was an old Welsh custom with the wise and courageous old men of the parish to sit up all night in the church porch. On that night, it was said, a voice, emanating from beneath the altar table, pronounced the names of those who should die within the coming year.

SHIELDS FOR TELEPHONES.

IN many homes one sees the telephone covered by a pretty shield. They are something any one can make easily.

There are several ways to make them; one kind having as a foundation a wire frame similar in shape to a shade for a light for a side wall, only much larger; the other when finished representing a much dressed up "lady" of the '50s. A wire frame tall enough to allow the phone to stand inside comes for the last mentioned one, and to the top of it is fastened a doll's head, exceedingly pretty and just suited to the way she is to be dressed.

Changeable taffeta is as pretty as anything you can choose for the dress, and it should be made quite full, so it does not look drawn over the wire frame. It can be elaborately trimmed with many tiny ruffles, lace, or some metallic braid trimming. It is pretty to have plenty of trimming about the waist.

One rather elaborate dress was made of changeable rose taffeta, and about the bottom of the full skirt was a deep ruffle of lace. This had a heading of pink roses—quite large ones—set on at intervals and connected with leaves and smaller buds. The skirt was quite elaborately draped above the ruffle, and hanging from the shoulders of the figure was a large scarf of point d'esprit.

It was "Frenchy," dainty looking, and something most women would like. There is a chance for much ingenuity in covering these shields, and women with original ideas can doubtless make something effective and pretty.

The other shield is made to stand in front of the telephone, and is high enough to entirely hide it, although it does not envelope it as the dress does.

The wire frame is wound with binding ribbon, the same as though you were intending making a shade; and then comes the lining and outside. Pin the lining on so it is straight up and down through the middle of the middle section, and pin it at intervals all across the top, bottom, and sides. The pins can be easily stuck through the ribbon.

This lining is pinned to the outside of the shield, and after it is pinned in place so it is absolutely smooth, cut it off all around, leaving a margin of one-half inch. Then turn this edge over toward the right side, and overhand it to the ribbon all the way around, clipping the edge where necessary. Don't let these stitches show on the wrong side of the frame.

Now for the outside. You may make it plain, and finish the edges with a metallic braid, or you may buy a stamped panel for the center panel that is quite decorative, or you may work some striking design, covering your middle panel pretty well, using gay, contrasting colors, and choosing some design that will show clearly.

Cross stitch is a good one to use for this. You will have to stamp your design in exactly the right place on a width of silk, and do the embroidering; then pin it in place to the frame. After it has been fitted, cut it all around the same as the lining, and turn all edges in towards the wrong side, and overhand to the ribbon covered wire edge. Then a narrow finishing braid can be sewed down each side of the middle panel, and the braid is sewed all around the edge.

There is a beautiful shade of blue often seen among the silks sold in the fancy goods section of the stores, that would be ideal for the outside of the shield, and the lining could in that case be of old gold. The winding ribbon would be of the gold also.

Stiff Soles—
and Her Feet Froze

She was skiing at Lake Placid. She did not know that devotees of winter sports take their cue from the custom of Canadian trappers and wear flexible soled footwear in order to leave their muscles free to exercise and keep warm. She wore the stiff-soled shoes to which she had always been accustomed. And her feet froze.

You may not go skiing at Lake Placid, but even in Chicago there is a cold winter ahead.

The Cantilever Shoe for men and women allows the muscles free activity—the only way to keep feet warm and comfortable.

When the foot is held against a stiff sole as if strapped to a board, the muscles are practically paralyzed. Circulation grows sluggish and the foot becomes numb.

The Cantilever Shoe has a FLEXIBLE shank that BENDS WITH THE FOOT. It corrects and prevents fallen arches.

Meet the next cold day with a pair of Cantilevers. Well-made, fine leathers, trim cut. Widths from AAAAA to EE. Write for booklet.

FOR AND BY BUSINESS GIRLS

By Loretta King.

Miss King will be glad to help business girls solve their problems. If you want a personal answer send a stamped, addressed envelope. Address Miss Loretta King, The Tribune, Chicago.

THE RESTLESS ONES.

MARION brought Miss Smith over to have lunch with us the other day [Miss Smith is the girl Marion persuaded to keep a job she was on the point of giving up not long ago], and I never saw so great a change in anyone before. The last time she was with us she was miserably discontented in her work and impatient with Marion because she made her promise—rather against her will—that she would postpone her decision to leave. Now she is all enthusiasm about the job and she has, apparently, the greatest respect and affection for Marion.

She must have been aware that we noticed this change in her, for she turned to Dorothy, who sat next to her, and said in a somewhat explanatory way:

"I seem to have lost all that terrible restlessness that kept me from staying in a position more than a few weeks at a time. I'm more than contented with the one I've got now. I'd hate to give it up. It's queer, isn't it, the way I've changed? I don't understand it myself."

"Perhaps you've never had as nice a job as this before," suggested Dorothy.

"Maybe not," Miss Smith answered, "but I've had other jobs I liked as well starting out, and I got just as tired of this one after the first two weeks as I did of others. I suppose if it weren't for Marion I'd still be on the jump from one job to another."

"I can tell you what's made the change," said Marion, and the smile she gave Miss Smith somewhat softened her tone of brusque assurance. "You're given yourself, at last, a chance to earn promotion. You never had the patience to wait for it before and so you never experienced until now the satisfaction that comes with it. That's what has lessened your discontent—the satisfaction of having earned a raise."

"You must be right, Marion," Miss Smith said, "because it wasn't until after I was given the new work and got a raise in salary that I really felt I wanted to stay. Now, since I'm fairly started on the new work I keep promising myself that I'll earn another promotion before long."

"That's fine," Ann applauded. "You're not only losing your discontent; you're even growing ambitious. That is, sensibly ambitious. You're beginning to realize that you've got to work for success. You don't just fall into it with certain jobs."

As Ann dropped her superior tone and began to entertain Miss Smith and Dorothy with some experience which the girls found amusing, Marion turned to me and said:

"I've been keeping my eye on Grace because aside from a personal desire for her success I wanted to prove to you girls that this restlessness can be subdued. If we can encourage the impatient ones to wait until they get a taste of success, they'll do the rest themselves."

I am delighted over Marion's success with Miss Smith, for, after all, as Marion says, these restless people are not all hopeless. A bit of sensible, encouraging advice is all that may be needed to curb and perhaps eliminate the roving spirit which prevents so many bright girls from keeping a job more than a few weeks at a time and which is destroying the chances that training and natural ability might have given them. Any one of us can do as much—or as little—as Marion did.

From the present outlook jobs will not be so plentiful and easy to get this winter as they have been during the last several years. While this condition will have the effect of forcing a curb on the restless, roving spirit of the girl workers who take economic conditions into account, it is likely to bring hardship and even privation on the thoughtless one to whom the temporary satisfaction of a restless spirit is paramount. To every girl who has a fairly good job now, with no absolute assurance of a better one in sight I'd say, "Keep it."

9593—Child's rompers. Sizes 1, 2, 4, and 6 years. Size 4 requires 1¼ yards of 36 inch material with ⅝ yard of 36 inch contrasting.

9835—Woman's and miss' apron or house dress. Sizes 16 years and 36, 40, and 44 inches bust measure. Size 36 requires 3¼ yards of 36 inch material with ¼ yard of 36 inch contrasting.

How to Use the Patterns

A SMART design for a dress for any informal wear is No. 9571. It will make up equally well in any of the new or standard woolen materials, or if satin or taffeta is preferred either one will look well. Whatever material you choose, be sure to decide on some sort of embroidery. It is seen in some form on nearly every gown, and while, of course, it means additional hours of work, it is so fascinating to do and the result is usually so satisfying, one feels well repaid.

The cut of this dress is a little unusual, and cannot fail to be becoming. I refer to the side front section, into which the sash end is fastened on each side of the front.

The dress is made to open on the shoulders, and the pattern gives square neck with the collar sewed to the dress across the back, and the front edges are faced and fastened to the dress with snaps.

The shoulder seams are sewed together at the sleeve end for a short distance, and then the rest of the way the seams are left open, and finished with faced and extension hems.

Don't hurry with this part of the work, or the closing will not be perfect as it should be.

The small rompers shown in pattern No. 9593 will be just the thing many mothers will like to have. The fronts are cut in one piece, and in the back the trousers are set into a band and button to the waist part. The buttons should be sewed through strong tape, which should be basted to the under side of the band.

The pockets will, no doubt, please any small child, but they had better not stand out too much, or else they will always be catching and tearing. Sewing small stays of tape on the wrong side of the rompers, just under the upper edges of the pockets, will help some.

On rompers for very small children one sometimes sees some embroidery done in gay colors; and it makes the best sort of trimming. Always shrink and set the colors in all children's wash clothes, and don't get too close fitting a pattern for anything. Children grow so fast and keep one so busy changing and making over clothes that it is wise to make them rather loose in the beginning.

No. 9835 is a pattern that may be used as a one piece apron or house dress. It is cut in one piece, and deviates rather interestingly from the usual pattern, by being cut in on the sides, back and front, a little below the waist line, and the skirt parts in that way are extended out beyond the waist part, and are brought in to fit into the waist by being gathered there.

Where this gathered part is sewed to the waist, the band that covers the seam can be embroidered. The pockets, cuffs, and collar should have some matching design, and for this kind of a dress or apron there is probably no stitch more appropriate than the cross-stitch.

The main part of the work in the cross stitch is in the basting on of the canvas, and later on, pulling these canvas threads out. The canvas must be basted in place straight to a thread or else the entire design will be crooked. Then the upper stitches must all go in one direction and the under stitches in the opposite. When you are ready to pull the threads, take the shorter ones first.

This dress is meant to be slipped on over the head, and a narrow leather belt is worn with it. There are narrow strips sewed to the under arm seams at each side for the belt to slip through.

Cut long enough to allow for a deep hem at the bottom of the skirt, for sometimes, even with shrinking before cutting into the material, it will shrink a little for several launderings.

THE COSTLY JOKE.

I WAS the only girl employé with the brokerage concern and my "pet male" at the office was our little office boy, a redheaded youngster with the bluest eyes and the most prankish of ways, yet lovable for all that. There wasn't another man in the place who interested me, though Louis, the bond clerk, tried hard to draw my attention.

Full of mischief, the office boy played many a joke on the big fellows, and quite forgetting their reasoning powers the big fellows got together and planned a crude joke on little Bobby. To me it was anything but a joke when I heard of it.

Christmas being almost at hand, they spread the gossip around the office that each employé would receive a turkey, besides the bonus. One of the young men—Louis himself—secured the claws of a turkey and also the head, and with the use of old rags, paper, and the like, they fixed up a package, leaving the head and legs out.

On the morning before Christmas when Bobby came down they showed him the package and Bobby, all joyous, called up home and told his mother not to buy any fowl for the Christmas dinner, for he was truly getting a turkey besides his little bonus. I heard nothing of this part of the joke, knew not that the men were carrying it out to the extreme of letting little Bobby carry home a twenty-two pound package and believe it to be a turkey. All I knew was that all through the month of December they had been teasing him about getting a turkey for Christmas, and as he was hard to convince, I thought the joke dropped.

The peals of laughter following Bobby's departure with the bundle aroused my curiosity. I stepped into the outer office and saw all the fellows doubling up with laughter, asked to be let in on the fun, and was told the "joke." When I heard the tale I didn't laugh; there was nothing funny in it to me—to think they would let a little youngster go home carrying such a heavy bundle, believing he was bringing his mother a gift—fooling the mother as well as the boy—seemed the smallest trick one could think of, and I wasn't one bit afraid to tell them so. In fact, I was so riled up, so angry, I cried as I exploded my thoughts; made every one of those boys feel as small as one could.

Louis, knowing he was at the bottom of the whole trick, having played the biggest part in it, sheepishly admitted he hadn't looked at it from my angle, apologized, and like a gentleman wanted to square himself. He asked me if I wouldn't go out with him and buy a real turkey and have it sent out to Bobby's house immediately; insisted that he'd pay the whole cost, though the boys all offered to help

A twenty pound turkey was bought, and Louis suggested that we go out and deliver it ourselves. We got over to Bobby's house just as his mother was angrily voicing her opinion of the office force, and, with many apologies, Louis offered the gift, and admitted he was quite the whole cause of the joke.

Somehow after that Louis appeared different in my eyes. Having committed an error which cost him $12.34 of his bonus money—the price of the turkey—and the trimming down his pride, he was willing to be royal about it and apologize all around. He had little trouble to attract my attention after that. I studied him every chance I got, and finally married him quite happily.

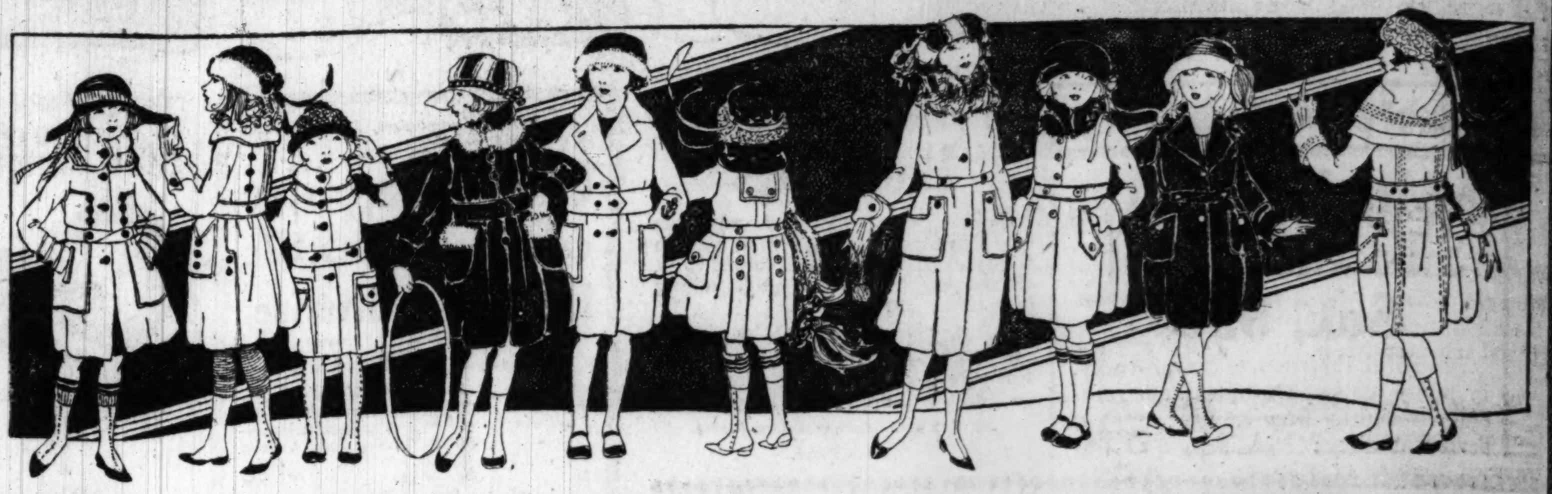
One thousand new, different and better coats for girls 7 to 14 years old in a sale



THESE garments are the products of two of America's prominent makers of coats for women, who, having a large number of short lengths of fine materials left, converted them into girls' wonderfully attractive coats. When they were offered to us at a price that barely covered the cost of material, on condition that we take the entire lot, we eagerly accepted the offer, because we realized that it would make one of the most remarkable value-giving occasions in all our long career of merchandising.
FROM the ten models pictured you may gain a fair idea of the beauty and high quality of the coats, but only a personal inspection can make you appreciate the values fully. It will pay you to attend.
MANY of the models have fur trimmed collars, while others are made with large cape collars of self material. The backs show novel trimmings. Interesting among them are the regulation styles with embroidered silk emblems on the sleeves.
EVERY coat shows perfection in workmanship, versatility in designing and careful attention to detail. The styles are splendid. Of course, the season's most wanted colors and shades are here.

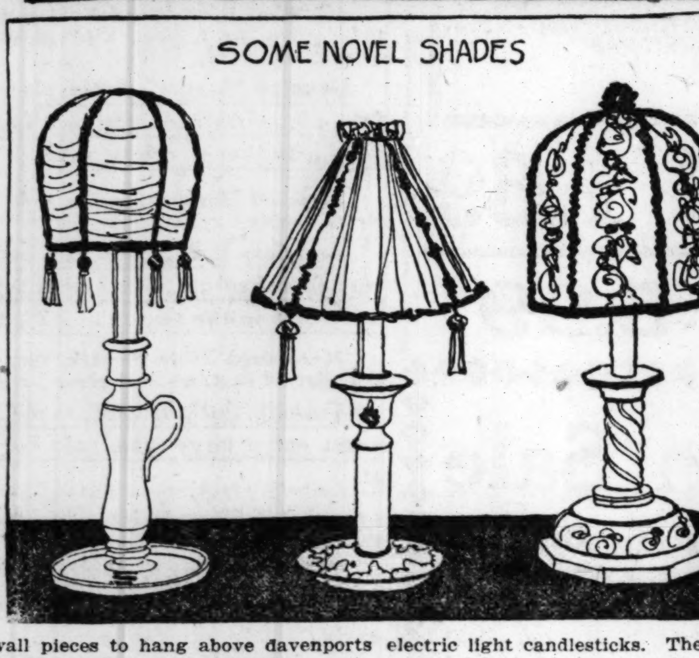
A TAPESTRY HANGING



SOME NOVEL SHADES

CHOOSING PICTURES.

ONE of the most baffling questions in home furnishing and decorating is that of wall adornments. Decorators who lean to the modern style throw what they call easel pictures completely into the discard. While the many execrable mistakes that are commonly made in picture selection seem to justify a distaste for picture hanging generally, exception must be made in favor of a few really good pictures.

The amateur's main fault in choosing pictures is that she chooses the picture because of itself and without due reference to the space it is to occupy and the relative part it will play on the wall in conjunction with the features thereon. The result is, where half a dozen pictures are used, there is no balance in point of size, no concordance in regard to subjects, no harmony in color, and the room in which they are hung, looks like a hit or miss, helter-skelter mess. Bare walls are better than those adorned with poor patterns, and bare walls are better than those adorned with a miscellaneous assortment even of good pictures.

Generally speaking, the picture should be of the same proportions as the wall space allowed it. A pair of pictures lends a sense of balance and is peaceful and pleasing. I am tempted to suggest buying well designed frames of simple picture moulding, measured in proportion to certain wall spaces, and then getting pictures to fit into these frames.

Little inquiry would reveal the fact that many good artists would do canvases to fit at reasonable terms—many, indeed, have "pot boilers" of all sizes that they would gladly dispose of.

It is high time that the artist and the layman should come to a better understanding. Too many impecunious artists are painting for exhibition purposes—exhibiting the work—and that's the end of it. Whereas, if they studied suitability to home environment their pictures would have an appeal that would make them purchasable.

Substitutes for framed pictures are many and varied. I have, pinned against my study wall, a length of Japanese fabric that gives more pleasure to my eyes than any painting could in that one place. It is a brocade with a delicate tracery of orange on a satin ground, the color of the inside of an orange peel. Then it is spotted with circular motifs in indigo and jade green. It is lovely, all hand woven in small pieces and put together after the Japanese inimitable fashion.

Batiks make splendid wall decorations. They look so simple that any one with a knack is tempted to experiment, only to find that the simplicity of the thing is an illusion and a snare. Good batiks are generally difficult to do. Few artists are successful in their attempts in this medium.

The works of Arthur Crisp and Peter Mijer are fairly priceless. Some of the artists have made beautiful things, too. At the batik ball, recently held, the works of Edgar Miller and Mrs. J. E. Marsh were viewed with astonished rapture.

Salcha Banc, a young Chicago girl, has made a reputation for herself with the most marvelous paintings on silk that have the effect of batik, but are really painted after a secret method of her own. The silk is mounted on stretchers and framed. Long, narrow, picctorial strips of her work are good wall pieces to hang above davenports or sideboards or over mantels.

Tapestries are decorative. It must be added (sad to relate) that some machine made tapestries are more artistic than some hand woven ones.

For a hall grouping or living room side wall notice the tapestry in the illustration. Placed between parchment shaded lights above an old carved chest, it has majestical dignity. On the chest is a soft velvet pad of pigeon blood ruby over which is thrown a pair of light tobacco brown peau de soie cushions embroidered in dull colored flowers. The little cylindrical shirred cushion between these two is of ruby taffeta with a tiny black edging.

The other sketch shows three new electric light candlesticks. The shade to the right is a pretty novelty. It is made of white linen painted and shellacked. The others are of silk and are trimmed with chenille.

MRS. H. E. O.: Open shelf bookcases of a built-in variety, such as you can engage any carpenter to make for you, are in good taste and are not expensive. Treat them as a part of the woodwork of the room, painting or staining them to match. A good extra chair is the hour glass. Substitute a wide spread parchment lampshade for your glass one and use shield shaped parchment shades at your side lights. Yes, by all means use a screen in front of your fireplace.

The TRIBUNE COOK BOOK

RECIPES FOR SWEETBREADS.

IN all cookery there is not one item of food about which more contradictory statements have been made than about sweetbreads, or about the thymus and pancreas glands of the young beef creature. Even the physiology of these glands is made out to have a weird evolution.

If you read some of the books, giving thirty or so recipes for preparing sweetbreads perhaps you will get the impression that veal sweetbreads are the only sort ever used. One chef, however, described lamb's sweetbreads, but a long experienced butcher looked at me with suspicion, when I asked him for these. Evidently doubting my sanity, he would not even discuss the subject with me, except to say that he had never heard of them.

Cost of Sweetbreads.

Of this same butcher you can get beef sweetbreads at any time, seemingly, but when you want veal sweetbreads you must know the time and season a particular butcher may have them, or ask that same butcher to order them for you since many will get them under no other conditions. Beef sweetbreads cost between 60 and 70 cents, and veal sweetbreads cost about a dollar.

As a basis for a number of "made dishes," in which the sweetbread is cut fine, the beef will do, and a small portion will go far, therefore, it is an economical meat for a small party or family.

One of the leading cooks of the world says: "Veal sweetbreads may be looked upon as one of the greatest delicacies in butchers' meats, and may be served at any dinner, however sumptuous." He was considering them as an entrée, although for luncheons, sweetbreads with elaborate seasonings, or in the rather simple white sauce, may well be served as the central dish of the meal—sweetbreads on toast.

Innumerable Sweetbread Recipes.

If we should canvass American homes it is doubtful whether we should find that sweetbreads were used in one in twenty. Yet recipes for cooking this tidbit abound to the extent that it would be no trick at all to collect 300 or 400, beginning back with Mrs. Glasse—first English cook book—and coming up to our later and best American cook books. Miss Parloa has none, but there is no reason why sweetbreads should not have been cooked in a region where "pluck" was a favorite, and a most successfully prepared thing.

The oldest New England cook book tells how to use calf's head, heart, lights and liver and the brain cooked separately, but there is not a recipe in the book for sweetbreads. In this book there is a strange and almost too realistic detail given in reference to preparing the head. Miss Beecher tells us how to clean and cook calf's head and how to make two kinds of soup from this, but she has no recipes for sweetbreads, the easily prepared, as against the difficult and almost hideously prepared calf's head.

Must Be Perfectly Fresh.

But Philadelphia was more sophisticated than New England, and more closely connected with old world ways, so when we turn to Miss Leslie's ancient books we find recipes for sweetbread omelets, sweetbread croquettes, and sweetbreads prepared with cauliflower, stewed with clams, stewed with oysters, with tomatoes.

Miss Leslie's general statements on the subject are sounder than many in later books. She says truly: "They spoil sooner than any other part of the calf." She, therefore, uses italics to say several times that they must be "fine, of delicate color, and perfectly fresh." In one paragraph of her repetitions of the fact that they must be perfectly fresh, she says: "As soon as they are brought from the market they should be split open and laid in cold water. Never attempt to keep sweetbreads till the next day except in cold weather."

Practically all cook books agree on this, but some say that after blanching they may be kept for a day in a cool place.

Veal Sweetbread Good.

An old cook book of our south says: "The sweetbread of veal is the most delicious part, and may be broiled, fried, or dressed in any way, and is always good." The only recipe given, however, is for a pie of sweetbreads and oysters.

Mrs. Glasse's recipes for sweetbreads prescribe terribly composite mixtures, in which one might hunt long for the name meat, so many other sorts being used besides. But old Dr Kitchiner, who did so much to simplify cookery by writing "The Cook's Oracle," has the following recipe, headed "Veal Sweetbread":

"Trim a fine sweetbread (it cannot be too fresh), parboil it for five minutes, and throw it into a basin of cold water. Roast it plain or beat up the yolk of an egg and prepare some fine bread crumbs. When the sweetbread is cold, dry it thoroughly in a cloth, run a lark spit or a skewer through it, and tie it on the ordinary spit. Egg it with a paste brush, powder it well with bread crumbs, and roast it.

For sauce: Fried bread crumbs around it with a little mushroom catsup and lemon juice, or serve them on buttered toast garnished with egg sauce or with gravy. Obs.—Instead of spitting them, you may put them into a tin Dutch oven or fry them."

This recipe, old as it is, is wonderfully sane.

Preparing Sweetbreads for the Cooking.

Many recipes lay down the law that sweetbreads should be soaked in cold water—some acidulate it—a long time to soak out the blood and make them white, but then some people soak chicken and other fowl in water. It may be that this soaking will accomplish a bleaching of a sort, but careful washing will do as much, so why waste the delicate flavor, as you are bound to do, by this method? A glance at sweetbreads as they come from the market will convince any one that they should be washed with exceptional care, pulling off dirty edges and cleansing any bloody spot.

Blanching Sweetbreads.

Follow Dr. Kitchiner's method of dropping the sweetbreads into boiling water for five minutes, then rinsing them by a bath of cold water—cold dip of the canning business. When they are cold, skin them, taking out also any cartilaginous parts. After this, if they are to be broiled or fried, rinse and drain well, then press between two plates with a light weight. If they are to be split for cooking, this is necessary, but if they are to be cut up in dice, it is not. The blanching is for hardening the surface so that they may be cut in any desirable shape. One of the great cooks puts them in cold water to cover completely, brings this to the boil gently, and lets them boil for ten minutes, after which the sweetbreads are plunged into cold water. Undoubtedly they can then be cut into fancy shapes, if desirable, when so prepared, and after pressing, but there is no other justification of the method and much to say against it.

Breaded Sweetbreads.

Beef sweetbreads in particular are so neutral of flavor, and calf's so almost insipid, if not rightly treated, that one way to prepare them for broiling or frying, for which method of cooking they are best if breaded, is to marinate them in a French dressing with some slices of onions. Let them drain from this liquid, dip them in slightly beaten egg, then in crumbs, and in the egg again. Of course, they should be blanched first, pressed, and in almost every case split before they are put into the dressing, which may contain also, and advantageously, the cut end of a clove of garlic. Fried gently in hot butter and garnished with green cress, these will be extremely dainty eating if of veal and good if of beef.

Sweetbread in Table Shells.

The little scallop shells which the sophisticated so much prefer to the ramekin, especially when using a dainty made preparation as the whole service, are sometimes called table shells. They cost about 30 cents a dozen, and I have seen them for 15—small ones. For the sweetbreads the larger size is the more desirable. Butter them before putting in them the following mixture: One-half cup of blanched sweetbreads cut in small dice and gently sautéed for a few minutes in butter with one-half onion cut fine, one-third of a green pepper, and four mushrooms cut in the same sized pieces as the sweetbreads. In sautéeing them the onion should not brown—the test of the right sort of a fire.

Prepare a sauce in which they should cook ten or fifteen minutes before putting them into the shells, as follows: Stir two level tablespoons of flour into one of melted butter, add one cup of top milk or a cup which is part milk and part cream, stir over the fire until it thickens, add a light grating of nutmeg, and then the sweetbreads, which mixture should be cooked long enough for the blend to be perfect, adding salt to taste.

Put into prepared shells, sprinkle with bread crumbs, then with a little melted butter, and put under the broiler or in hot oven and cook until they puff. Serve with a little lemon juice.

Creamed Sweetbreads on Toast.

The mixture as prepared for the shells may be served on toast but will seem a little less elegant since in the shells, when all care is taken, we have something extremely fine, yes, epicurean even though sherry seasoning be wanting. A bit of nutmeg helps to keep us from missing it and so do the mushrooms, green pepper, and onion. The onion, nutmeg, and salt will do for seasoning sweetbreads to be served on toast, but the mushrooms add distinction or character and the pepper, for which pimento may be substituted, adds brilliant color with character.

Scallops of Sweetbreads.

Cut the blanched and pressed sweetbreads into small slices—these should be about the size of the scallop of the sea—and spread over these a mixture of bread crumbs soaked in a little milk, and seasoned with minced onion, mushrooms and parsley. Let them stand so that this sets as will a croquette mixture, then egg and crumb, and fry gently. This is one of the ways of treating sweetbreads so that they cannot be called insipid. But perhaps you know the secret, which should, however, be an entirely open one, of preparing well cooked oatmeal cakes in a similar fashion. If the oatmeal is as well or correctly cooked as about one in twenty-five persons cooks it, the oatmeal cakes will seem at least first cousin to scallops of sweetbreads.

LOVE LETTERS

> How does a love letter contest appeal to you? Don't you love to read them? Don't you love to receive them? Can you write a good one yourself? The Tribune is going to pay $5 for every love letter published. So, if you can write a good one, or if you have one in your private or family possessions you would like to enter in the contest, send it to Doris Blake, The Tribune, Chicago. As no letters will be returned, send copies of the ones you wish to retain possession of.

LINES WITH A BOOK.

"This letter was an opening wedge in the courtship which finally joined my husband and myself. It was what first drew me to him. Is it any wonder?

TO Miss K. E. S.—Paris-New York: You did not expect a present from me, and perhaps I should not have sent one if the blue and gold daintiness of this little volume had not somehow made me think of you, so that after looking at it and coming away I went back and got it to send to you. It seemed to have been made for you, being an aristocratic, well bred little book, delightful in the perfect taste of its simplicity, straightforward and frank, sympathetic and friendly, not telling all it knows at once, but unexpected in its surprises; careful, but not fussy; refined, but not affected; well trained, but not pedantic; pleasantly cosmopolitan, scornful of what is unworthy, appreciative of what is best, good company for any mood—but here I am praising my own present! However, that is not my fault, but the book's and yours, since, as I said, it made me think of you.

Doris Blake's Answers to Love Problems

> Have you a perplexing love affair of which you need the counsel of a friend? Write to Doris Blake, care The Sunday Tribune. If you wish a personal reply please send a stamped addressed envelope.

To See Her Alone.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am really in love with a young girl. Her girl friends keep her away from me because they are jealous. I would like to see her alone and talk things over. What would you advise? H. G."

Do you mean the girl friends are jealous on account of you? Or what's the idea? One thing that I believe is that girls are never jealous on account of a young man who lacks backbone sufficient to win an audience with a girl alone.

Too Much Attention.

"Dear Miss Blake: We are two beautiful blondes, 17 years of age. We are molested by letters, telephone calls, flowers, candy, invitations, etc., from all the boys in the neighborhood. Now, Dear Miss Blake, what would you advise us to do? "FLO AND PEGGY."

Conduct yourself in the future so that you will not be so badly molested. I doubt that you are such beautiful blondes.

Asking Him to Call

"Dear Miss Blake: Will you kindly advise me whether it is a girl's place to invite a young man to call on her when they first meet, or whether it is up to the young man to ask her if he may call; also is it up to the girl to ask him to call again, or is it up to the young man to ask each time if he may call again. MURIEL."

If a young man shows you marked attention at a gathering, takes you home, and makes himself generally agreeable, you may extend the invitation to call. But just a casual meeting and a casual male attitude would not justify the note of encouragement an invitation to call would imply. However, at his first call it is polite to say something like: "I hope to have the pleasure of your company again sometime soon."

Nu-tro
The New Milk Product
Use Nu-tro when you bake
To make bread, biscuits and cakes that are light and smooth use Nu-tro just as you would milk or cream.
Nu-tro is a blend of pure, fresh cow's milk, with the animal fats extracted, evaporated to double strength and enriched with refined coconut fat, resulting in a produce of far greater food value than anything of a similar nature.
Nu-tro for all milk and cream uses
In coffee, in cooking and baking use Nu-tro just as you would milk or cream.
Nu-tro makes a good cup of coffee better. It makes everything you cook more tasty and adds to the food value of the dishes prepared. Wherever your recipes call for milk or cream use Nu-tro. Its price is moderate.
To make an appetizing Raisin Bread try the recipe above. Your grocer has Nu-tro and it costs very little to test its goodness and economy.
Try This Recipe:
1¼ cups sugar.
1 egg, beaten.
1¼ cups Nu-tro.
½ cup water.
½ cup butter.
4 teaspoons baking powder.
2 cups flour.
2 cups graham flour.
1 teaspoon salt.
1¼ cups seedless raisins.
Beat butter and sugar until smooth, add egg, Nu-tro and water, sift baking powder, salt and flour into mixture, and then add raisins. Mix well and place in bread pan well greased. Bake in moderate oven one hour and fifteen minutes.

The Theaters

By Percy Hammond.

MISS JANE COWL, having the artist's fear of an uncreative routine, plans some special performances at the Cort of a new play treating generally of Faith and its influences on human existence. It is not, one learns, propaganda for any of the mental or moral sciences, but just a comedy whose invisible heroine is that hovering angel, girt with golden wings, who ministers so subtly to many men and women. Mr. O. P. Heggie of "Happy-Go-Lucky" will join Miss Cowl in the performances when and if they occur. Miss Cowl finds an insistent Sunday evening public for "Smilin' Through," so she will appear tonight at the Cort in that delectable opiate, though she has not decided definitely to resume her recently abandoned practice of playing every night of the week.

* * *

In case you add the theater to the cakes and ale of your New Year's eve celebration, here is a table of how much it will set you back, not counting the excise:

"Aphrodite" at the Auditorium, $10; "The Follies," $10; "Smilin' Through," $7; "The Bat," $6; "The Storm," $5; "The Guest of Honor," $5; "The Hottentot," $5; "The Famous Mrs. Fair," $6; "The Girl in the Spotlight," $6; "Way Down East," $3; "Irene," $7; "His Honor, Abe Potash," $6; "Cinderella on Broadway," $6; "The Son-Daughter," $5, and "Happy-Go-Lucky," $7.

* * *

MR. ARNOLD, who acts the forthright woodsman in "The Storm," is not the sort of chap you would suspect of a flair for sarcasm. In the drama at the Olympic he is of the sincere type, as the saying is, armed, erect, sinewed, and manly, with no sly ironies hidden among the muscles of his leonine head, nor within his honest, massive chest, symbolic of a noble candor. He is the big fellow who in the play loves the fair French-Canadian waif, but only as a good woman should be loved by an outdoor man. His successful courtship of her is marred by little guile. But though an earnest person upon the stage he is gifted, maliciously, otherwise when off of it.

Finding me at Mrs. Byfield's tea party last Sunday, Mr. Arnold showed me some satire in his mocking eye. "Why," said he, "have we been bereaved for eighteen weeks, of notice from you. You who are the Ruth Miller of the prose drama; the Eleanor Jewett of the art of acting, and the Mae Tinée of the audible play? We hear that you are 'in front' every now and then, and, excepting Miss MacKellar, we act our hearts out to please you, in the expectation that in the morning we shall be approved by you, the Frank Ridgeway of the theater. Yet we get no puffs. We drop our buckets into empty wells, and grow old in drawing nothing up. Hope has almost ceased to enchant us, and her waving, golden hair grows gray. Distant prospects please the actors as they are said to please regular human beings, but you please us much too much."

It is no more than just to say that Mr. Arnold's subtle sneers have been transposed, above, into the naive lingo of this column. No actor talks like that except upon the stage. Mr. Arnold's remarks to me had all the sheer simplicity of rain turned to sleet; but he suffers, as do many geniuses in alien words, from too adequate a translation.

* * *

Every now and then I drift into "The Storm," even at moments when I feel that I should be studying "Cinderella on Broadway," or, as Mr. Collier calls it, "The Hopantrot." Something always is doing when I get to "The Storm," for the posture of its circumstance—two frontiersmen and a pungent ingénue, besieged by the elements in a shack in the Canadian wilderness—is fertile in entertainment. The rough lad with the heart of gold, the smooth English chap with the store clothes, and the lovely vestal with nothing to protect her except her night dress, her innocence, and her wise ways, are never-failing in possibilities.

For instance, you like the smooth-spoken Mr. James Rennie (who plays a sort of amorous remittance man) when he performs a Russian boat song upon the deep guitar, in opposition to the specious tinkle of Mr. Arnold's music box—both serenading their slim, blonde, and shapely guest. You like the upright Arnold, because you know that his noble deportment is exactly as yours would be, were you similarly isolated with a queen in a four room hut, more distant from Calgary than Milwaukee is from Chicago. You know that you would be as gentle with her and as tender. Yet you sympathize with Mr. Rennie's more sophisticated blood-beats, which cause him to feel the ancient and selfish male emotion that tonight is the night, though she will be sorry tomorrow. Still you do not say to yourself, as you watch him planning his seductions, "There am I, save for the grace of God." You do not believe with Mr. Huneker that virtue is the lack of opportunity. You simply cast yourself in the noble Mr. Arnold's rôle, and you find in that selection proof of the most golden of all the golden rules, that if you are good you may be happy.

* * *

Being at heart a newsman, I should not write thus at length of "The Storm" if I had not seen so many of its audiences. They have been large for eighteen weeks, and to me, a frequent theater-goer, unknown. They see in "The Storm" a melodramatic story more honest than they see in the customary plays and moving pictures; and certainly in Miss MacKellar they come in contact with an actress who makes of the Gishes and other noteworthy artistes, great as they are in the shadows, mere silhouettes. Miss MacKellar is young, good-looking, chill, ambitious, and youthfully intelligent. She should not be hooked, as probably she will be hereafter, to rôles which ask her to prattle, efficiently, in an alluring dialect; but she should have a chance to do something important, like "Smilin' Through" or "Dear Me," or "Adam and Eva," or any one of the many other great American dramas which improve the ethics while they excite the emotions of Broadway and the

A Great Achievement

Like beacon-lights in the history of the universe, are those supreme achievements of mankind which stand out as milestones in the progress of the world.

Down through the centuries they have come to us; the seven supreme wonders of the world that reveal to our enthralled eyes the triumphant march of civilization to those glorious days in which we of today now live.

The Hanging Gardens of ancient Babylon; the Pyramids of the Ptolemies of Egypt; the Pharos of Alexandria; the Temple of Diana; the Statue of Jupiter by Phydias; the Mausoleum of Artemesia; the Colossus of Rhodes.

All these are but memories; we read of their glories in the records of the human race; we conjure up the storied past to visualize as best we may those glorious accomplishments of days gone by.

But now there is a new wonder of the world; you may see it with your own eyes; you may behold before your own astonished vision the greatest achievement of this day and generation in the evolution of the modern theater. You may witness in person the most gorgeous and glittering and wonderful stage production ever known since time began.

These are not idle words; they are the embodiment of the critical thought of the best minds and most capable judges of our great country. They represent the mature and honest verdict of those men and women who know whereof they speak.

This NEW WONDER of the world is the brilliant and beautiful musical extravaganza of the Orient, "Mecca," now concluding a long and sensational engagement at the Century Theater in the city of New York, and which will be transported to Chicago by special trains to be presented at the Auditorium Theater on Tuesday night, January 25, 1921, immediately following the grand opera season.

Full details of this marvelous presentation will be announced in this newspaper next Sunday.

"THE LITTLE 'FRAID LADY."

Produced by Robertson-Cole.
Directed by John D. Adolph.
Presented at the Alcazar.

THE CAST.

Cecilia Carne	Mae Marsh
Giron	Tully Marshall
Mrs. Barrett	Kathleen Kirkham
Sexton Graves	Charles Meredith
Judge Carteret	Herbert Prior
Sirotta	Gretchen Hartman
Bobby Barrett	George Bartholom Jr.
Omar, the Dog	Himself

By Mae Tinée.

A LOT of you will want to sweep the plumed helmet on the ground when you hear Mae Marsh is back. The little lady of a thousand expressions has a world of friends who have missed her sorely. Well—the baby, that tie that has bound her for the last two years, is bigger now and Miss Marsh, who is Mrs. Lee Armes in private life, is scheduled to again devote some attention to the dear public.

Her present picture was suggested by Marjorie Benton Cooke's story, "The Girl Who Lived in the Woods." The story must have been better than the film, for the latter, while boasting a splendid cast, some fine scenery, sets, etc., doesn't make as strong an offering as Miss Marsh was entitled to. Like a mountain goat, the story leaps from point to point, keeping one a bit dazed. And it isn't a convincing story.

The star is first discovered as a girl living alone in the woods with her dog. She paints feverishly and endeavors to exchange her work at the store for food. Several times she is successful, then the storekeeper balks. And how hungry she would have been had not, at the opportune time, all those lovely people come into her life. She hadn't wanted to meet people, being, for reasons revealed later, off the world and everybody in it. "The Little 'Fraid Lady" a baby neighbor called her.

You are not surprised to learn finally that she is the daughter of a much wanted criminal. Now, you see the picture and find out about the rest of it for yourselves.

Many scenes are introduced—the courtroom scenes especially, to allow Miss Marsh the facial play for which she is famous. The countenance she brings back is the same little old face it was, all smiles and tears and wistfulness. One is always sure to like Miss Marsh, even if one doesn't like her pictures.

◆

Rudolph Valentino, the ardent young Italian in "Once to Every Woman," and who has the leading male role in Metro's "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse," has again signed a Metro contract ,and will play opposite Alice Lake in her new starring picture, "Uncharted Seas."

PHOTO- MISHKIN.

Mr. Forbes, author of "The Famous Mrs. Fair," "The Chorus Lady," and other successful comedies, was one of the most active of the American men of the theater in directing the entertainments of the A. E. F. in France.

Ask Me! Ask Me! Ask Me!

A. G. L.: You're all wrong. I don't hate 'em and I don't feel like Job, and I don't say "It must be done! It must be done!" and nobody says to me "Whereinhell is the copy?" and I don't worry about myself thirty years from now, and I'm not bored by letters—like yours—and I thank you for your good wishes. The same to you. Write again.

◆

MRS. E. H. B.: Thank you for the lovely card. It was so dear of you to think of me!

◆

C. D. P.: Yes, it is true that Robert Harron is dead. So am I sorry.

◆

ALWAYS AUDACIOUS: My dear, your stationery! It is stunning! Go right ahead and express your opinion. I'll be mighty glad to chat with you about anything you want to chat about. On paper. Will I "will" you all I know? Honey chile, don't get sarcastic!

◆

C. A. P.: If you will write to Elliott Dexter, care of Paramount, Los Angeles, he will probably receive your letter—if he has not gone abroad, which he was planning to do. I had not heard any such thing about Miss Purviance.

◆

◆

HARRIET: Keeping a diary, are you? Well, remember Ruth Randall and be careful how and where you keep it. Douglas Fairbanks has one son. Larry Semon is a comedian. (He'll say he is.) Zena Keefe played in "Red Foam." No. Your husband won't let you go into the movies? Well, husbands are like that.

Union Loop. At any rate, "The Storm" is rather a satisfactory answer to the after-dinner and inane proposition, "Let's go to some show," if, perchance, not too much accent is put upon the phrase "Some Show." You will find playgoers at the Olympic of whose existence you hitherto have had no nightmares, and you will find a smart fiction, and acting much better than enough. Believe me, "The Storm" is an intelligent adventure for you into melodrama, and the acting of it is as keen, as reticent, as picturesque, as honest and as effective as anything since "The Deep Purple," which I liked better, but which was not nearly so good.

Chicago.—[To the Editor.]—Sometimes a critical observation of the critic is practical. Every one in Chicago and in the middle west respects the opinion of Mr. Hammond as authority regarding the drama and the actor. I have invariably regarded Mr. Hammond as a lover of the real, the truthful, and the classical in art.

In last Sunday's criticism he has made a grave breach. He has failed to realize that the possible truth is the highest type of art. John Drinkwater is neither cheap nor expedient, Mr. Hammond, but an artist. In Croce's treatise on the "Theory of Esthetics" Crose says that "truth is democratic." Therefore the action of Gen. Grant [in drinking from the black bottle] in Drinkwater's play "Abraham Lincoln" is democratically, artistically, historically, and universally truthful. How, then, may I ask, is Drinkwater cheap and expedient?

Chicago, Dec. 22.—My dear Mr. Hammond: In last Sunday's TRIBUNE you quoted the owner of "Abraham Lincoln" as saying: "Any one who attempts to distort history and who raises his vandal hand on a work of art in order to enforce his own anæmic idea of morals is a coward, fool, and a pest."

What about the playwright who portrays Gen. Grant as a boor who puffs cigar smoke in the face of the President, who keeps his cigar in his mouth and his hands in his breeches pockets while he talks to his commander in chief?

Gen. Grant was a punctilious gentleman, a graduate of West Point, and therefore trained at least to an outward show of respect for his superior officers.

And why should the "vandal hand" of the author or stage manager further distort history by creating for theatrical purposes a crude, nervous, floor pacing parody?

Those who knew the great general deeply resent Mr. Drinkwater's slurring misrepresentation of him.

GEORGE H. HARRIES, Union League club.

◆

Miss Carroll McComas has the leading rôle in Zona Gale's "Miss Lulu Bett," which had its first performance last evening in the prison theater at Sing Sing, and which will open its New York engagement tomorrow night. Miss Louise Closser Hale is also in the cast.

◆

Boston theaters directed by the Messrs. Shubert have adopted a lower scale of prices, with $2.50 as the highest figure.

◆

Tomorrow night in Baltimore George M. Cohan will present "Love and Learn," by Edgar Selwyn and Vincent Lawrence, with Miss Ruth Shepley and Wallace Eddinger in the leading rôles. Others in the cast are Enid Markey, James Gleason, and Frazer Coulter.

◆

John Drew is preparing to present Barrie's short play, "The Will," in the vaudeville theaters.

◆

"As You Were," a revue in which Miss Irene Bordoni and Sam Bernard appeared in New York, will be played at the Studebaker, beginning Jan. 2, by Miss Bordoni and Al Shean. Mr. Bernard is remaining in New York. Mr. Shean succeeded Mr. Bernard when Mr. Bernard grew tired of playing here in "Friendly Enemies."

◆

"The Bat," a mystery play by Mary Roberts Rinehart and Avery Hopwood will be acted this evening at the Princess by Lizzie Hudson Collier, Eva Williams, Carl Anthony, John Stokes, Gilda Leary, Edward Colebrook, Robbert Barratt, Louis Morrell, and Ryder Keane. The mid-week matinée day at the Princess will be changed from Thursday to Wednesday.

◆

Miss Leonore Ulric will be seen tomorrow night at Powers' as Lien Wha in Mr. Belasco's "The Son Daughter," with the following players in her cast: Thomas Findley, Marshall Birmingham, Clark Silvernail, Albert Bruning, Lyle Clement, Marion Abbott, Jane Ferrell, Herbert Ashton, Earle Craddock, Nick Long, Edmond Norris, T. Jeff Lloyd, W. T. Clark, Charles Burrows, and others.

◆

At the Blackstone tomorrow evening Miss Blanche Bates and Henry Miller will play James Forbes' comedy, "The Famous Mrs. Fair," assisted by Margalo Gilmore, Jack Devereaux, Kathleen Comegys, Robert Strange, Virginia Hammond, Dallas Tyler, Marion Lord, Betty Hall, Alice Baxter, and Frank Kirk. The Mrs. Fair of the title is a returned war-worker whose experiences and reputation have gone to her head.

◆

In addition to three plays by John Drinkwater—"Mary, Queen of Scots," "Oliver Cromwell," and "Robert E. Lee"—William Harris Jr. has acquired for American production, "Irish Dew," by Abby Marchant, and "The Bronx Express," by Ossip Dynow.

◆

Mrs. Fiske's new play, "Wake Up, Jonathan," had its premiere during the last week in Atlantic City, where it was extravagantly hailed. The piece is the work of Elmer Rice, who, as Elmer Reizenstein, wrote "On Trial," and Hatcher Hughes, for some years a lecturer on the drama at Columbia university. It is described as "comedy woven of essential tragic strands into a design of charm and finish."

◆

It appears that Walter Hampden is not exclusively committed to Shakespeare after all, for in Boston last Monday night he and his Shakespearean company acted Charles Rann Kennedy's "The Servant in the House." Mr. Hampden, of course, was the Manson.

◆

During the week of Jan. 3 there will be at least four productions in the Broadway theaters—two new plays and two not so new. There will be Arthur Byron and Margaret Lawrence in "Transplanting Jean," a comedy from the French of Callaivet and De Flers, which vastly delighted Chicago early in the season. There will also be Grant Mitchell in a play called "The Champion," in which Mr. Mitchell, as a prize fighter returned to his native England, dispenses what the Boston Transcript refers to as "the humors of contrast." Thomas Louden, the actor, was the original author of this opus; the more experienced A. E. Thomas has since done it over.

◆

The long promised revival of "Erminie," with Francis Wilson in his old rôle and De Wolf Hopper as his accomplice, will come to the Park a week from Monday. On the following afternoon, at the Cort, Mr. and Mrs. Coburn will bring "The Yellow Jacket" back to life.

◆

John D. Williams will present Lionel Barrymore in Ibanez's "Blood and Sand," the script of which is now being finished by Edward Sheldon on his sickbed in the Presbyterian hospital, Chicago. Apparently Mr. Williams has abandoned the Fannie Hurst play, "Back Pay."

Music and the Musicians

Wagner and the Half Gods—Discussing Opera in English—Concerning Translations.

By Ruth Miller

"LOHENGRIN" with his faithful swan returned to us this Christmas eve. This particular Wagnerian lyric accomplishment, which is cast in the old time operatic mold was given in English. It was clean cut unostentatious syllabification that should have stilled forever that puny assertion that our native tongue is not lyrically pliable. It must be admitted that there was a violent difference of opinion concerning the exact language sung by the chorus, but that is a verbal detail. And here let us hasten to rub the wrong way the fur of any æsthetes who refuse to see the English handwriting on the operatic wall. Lyric unintelligibility among languages is not the unique gift of our own maligned tongue.

Consider the mixed French that was on exhibition in the recent performance of "Romeo and Juliet." It gave this department a smug feeling of erudite contentment. For, as a striking exhibition of linguistic fluency, it equaled certain famous performances of our own.

True, a Frenchman may have been somewhat at loss to understand this Italian version of his tongue, but us—nothing to it if one is clairvoyant.

Second, and to frenzied faddists an entirely piffling critical impression, was that made on us by the music of Lohengrin. How did it sound after the mad hatter efforts of Mr. Scott or Mr. Malipiero?

This music of Wagner—last of the great romantics who closed a period but did not begin one—of whom an astute veteran critic spoke as "an assumption of genius and a conscious composer who perfected his style with other men's ideas. He knew certain subjects would stand operatic treatment and that an orchestra must not be a big guitar."

Shall we start a political or philosophical argument over it? Shall we put out the whole brood of Schopenhaurian doctrines, Buddhistic dogmas, and pseudo-Christian articles of faith that lively imaginations aided and abetted by the wily old showman himself have read into his music?

Not anything like it. We shall only nod gently and remark more or less brilliantly: "How tuneful he is!"

The half gods among melodists crumble and are broken when the real deity appears. And after the original Wagner all the diluted stuff from the Italian and French kitchens, heavily sauced and seasoned with Wagnerian themes, colors, and formulas, seems thin and sour.

◆

We are inclined to wonder when we listen to its swaying lilts what all this mighty rumpus about this nice old gentleman and his delightful music making was about. We smile indulgently at the hot critical arguments of yesteryear.

Probably in a few years we shall celebrate certain of Wagner's various anniversaries with whole weeks devoted to his operas and entire symphonic programs to excerpts from them. He will then be listed as a classicist.

We will go, listen, nod, and finally doze, to wake up with a pleasant little start at the cessation of the music. Remark to our neighbor: "Sweet, wasn't it? Charmingly old fashioned like a fragile, fragrant lace fan. So naive and refreshing after these occult modern compositions."

And the music commentators will listen to one number, say among themselves: "We must remember that for all his tediousness he laid the foundation of our modern opera," and then, keeping his musical halo carefully before them, they will pour a half column of reverential critical sentimentalities into their trusty dictaphones.

Then, having paid due respect to the gray hairs of music, doubtless they will hasten out to attend a concert given over to the compositions of an enterprising new musicmaker, who has revived the cat organ (this instrument, common in the sixteenth, seventeenth, and even eighteenth centuries, had in the place of pipes twenty small boxes, each of which held a cat. The protruding tails were bound to the keys of the clavier by cords, so that it was only necessary to press one of these keys to produce an "infernal galimaufry o' din").

It is remarkable that its piquant possibilities have been overlooked by up to date symphonists so long. But at the time of which we write—say 1950—the cat organ will surely have been restored to its proper importance in the musical scheme of things. Enough of prophecies concerning the Wagnerian music.

◆

As for the language in which "Lohengrin" was sung last Friday night. Now we have stumbled upon an ancient and mighty argument.

About the same time that the project was born in this country, Addison advocated the English lyric drama, and went after Italian opera, translated or not, with a furious pen.

In 1910, when H. W. Parker received $10,000 for his "Mona," there was a vast agitation for it. Tito Ricordi, Italian publisher, chattered ostentatiously about the super-excellence of American singers, the fallacy of sending them abroad to learn to mispronounce alien tongues, and insisted feverishly that English opera should be housed in fifty odd cities in the United States at least.

There was a society for the promotion of opera in English organized, which, according to one critic (Krehbiel, if my notebook does not play me false), disappeared "because it talked itself to death at one meeting."

The principal objections raised by the bitter opponents of this entirely feasible but laggard project is the sapient one that English is not a singable language (consider the gutturals, the umlauts of the German, and the peculiar nasalities of the French), that the translation fails to express "the precise meaning of the music as applied to the original verbal idiom;" that a libretto often sounds "prosaic and absurd when translated," and that society and the standees who practically support opera want the alien and fashionable tongue.

The only place where the antis have us who are slinging mud from the other side of the fence is in the painful truth of their pertinent remarks concerning operatic translations and the librettos.

◆

The life of a music reviewer is an idle one during opera season. So with the sacrifice of a little beauty sleep we managed to compile the following collection of illuminating examples of our vernacular when found in opera.

Here we have an original quotation from "Romeo and Juliet":

If I profane with my unworthiest hand
This holy shrine, the gentle fine is this:
My lips, two blushing pilgrims ready stand
To smooth that rough touch with a kiss.

After an operatic sojourn in French this fragment comes back to us:

See my ready lips do stand.
Let kisses tender, rough touch caressing,
Smooth the rudeness of my hand.

Naturally if "Romeo and Juliet" was ever sung in English Mr. Shakespeare's words would be ignored and we'd be served the second version.

◆

Here we have another choice speciman of our native idiom à la opera. This is from the "official" or Corder translation of "Tristan and Isolde."

Why in hell must I bide
Without hope of heaven?

This from "Le Prophete" may amuse some:

Far from these shores, to my Harlem castle
Two captives, I was leading, two captives.

You who hold precious your memories of Muratore and the Flower Song from "Carmen" might be touched infinitely more by its pathos if he sang it in the vernacular version:

This flower you gave to me, degraded
'Mid prison walls, I've kept, tho' faded;
Tho' withered quite, the tender bloom
Doth yet retain its sweet perfume.
Night and day, in darkness abiding,
I the truth, Carmen, am confiding;
Its loved odor I did inhale,
And wildly called thee without avail.

Here is another speciman of operatic argot from "La Traviata":

There stood the gypsy hag, wither'd and swarthy!
Clad in habiliments her race disclosing!
Fix'd were those dark eyes, with fury gleaming,
On that child's features in peace reposing!
Horrors and fear seiz'd upon the child's attendant;
With her wild cries the mansion then resounded;
And, swiftly as words can describe rapid movement,
The servants all in wild alarm, there bounded
That horrid beldame they soon ejected,
Who her accursed arts had ventur'd there.

MISS LENORE ULRIC in "THE SON DAUGHTER" POWERS. PHOTO IRA HILL

Miss Ulric is said to be one of the several eminent graduates from the old La Salle Opera house chorus. She has been a "stock" actress, the star of "The Bird of Paradise," "The Heart of Wetona," and "Tiger Rose."

How do you prefer your Shakespeare? In English as follows:

She never told her love,
But let concealment, like a worm i' the bud,
Feed on her damask cheek; she pined in thought;
And, with a green and yellow melancholy,
She sat like patience on a monument,

or in the operatic vein:

Kept she conceal'd fore'er
Rapture resplendent,
Did she no single soul confide in
What most she felt.
O! 'twas deplorable,
Had she such endurance.

◆

But perhaps this frivolous tone on our part only means a failure to recognize a new poetry looming on the literary horizon. Come to think of it, it is reminiscent of something I read of Mr. Cyril Scott's, our distinguished visitor of the last week. Here we have it:

In that upon the horologue of life the destined number
Had reached that digit of Fate's crescent, which unbends
The cords of nescience and allows the lustre
Of spirit bliss to pierce its vesting rinds.

Now that we consider our English librettos closely, aided by Mr. Scott's illuminating verse, we can see plainly that we were mistaken in our rash estimation of the deficiencies in our operatic translations. Opera in English, in the vernacular or in American, whichever you prefer, glitters with jewels of language like this.

The music calendar for the week will be found on page 11 of this section.

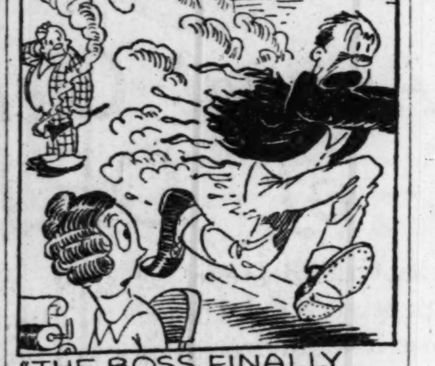
HOW IT LOOKS



"THE BOSS FINALLY FIRED HIM."

New York Music Letter

By James Whittaker.

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—A terrible thing happened at last week's concert of the Philadelphia orchestra, which—this must be said first, for fairness—usually plays good things well in its New York programs. The terrible thing is Emmanuel Moor's concerto for string quartet and orchestra. The Flonzaley quartet was the soloist. It is also the responsible party.

Leopold Stokowski, the orchestra conductor, was apparently dubious about the concerto, which had been recommended to him by the Flonzaleys. Diplomatically he shoved the blame off his handsome shoulders in the press announcements which heralded the concert. He invited Pochon, the Flonzaley first violinist, to write the notice. Pochon, also nervous, quoted Moor himself:

"I feel that the American public may welcome something melodic and simple as a change from the complicated modern fare of the present musical day. My concerto has few notes and those quite simple."

Simplicity! How many crimes are committed in thy name! Mother Hubbard gowns, funerals, phonetic spelling, canned soup, and delicatessen. Moor, hinting virtuously that he had prepared stuff from honorable and ancient recipes, served a warmed over hash of tasteless Schubertiana and bevoed Mozart.

In criticizing music one comes up against the difficulty of being explicit. The outrageous faults of Moor's concerto are plain and raw enough for the ear. But, short of inclosing that bruised organ as a commentary, there would seem to be no way to convince you that I have heard something you should not listen to. Unless——

There is always the time honored device of illustrating in the terms of a more defenseless art. Were Moor a writer, for instance, he could not write his sterile soul and escape the discovery that it is sterile. The public is quick enough in spotting the tedious imitations of editorial prose. But Moor, incorrectly quoting the least brilliant passages of the old masters of music, is like to go free of the charge of plagiarism, and will, by some indulgent professors, even be acquitted of the charge of being dull. His lack of shine will be called respectable sincerity. I fear his concerto will earn him some dusty laurels.

Now the charge against Moor is that, browsing among the musty laundry bags of the ancients, he has come across some unwashed cuffs and appropriated the markings for his own ends. In the four movements of the concerto there are a thousand steals from Beethoven and his brethren.

If Mr. Booth Tarkington, hard up for copy, should begin leafing the fiction shelves of his home town library he would eventually be discovered and denounced and finally lose a million readers. I can pick favorite words from all the writers of English and, when the job is done, have nothing salable. Let's try it:

One of Kipling's favorites is "loathe." Leonard Merrick loves "fevered." Oscar Wilde's dear is "bores." Mark Twain's "weather"—never does he neglect the elements—and Mr. Roosevelt invented "lily livered." But I may make those into "Lily livered bores loathe fevered weather" and be laughed at if I claim that I have made literature out of a reverent study of approved models.

And in so-called musical sounds Moor has done exactly the same thing. His first movement—a lento long wailing—is out of Beethoven by Handel. His scherzo is out of Dvorak by Weber—his middle movement, an adagio, is out of Schubert's opening recitative of the "Unfinished Symphony" by posthumous immaculate conception, and his finale—a messy allegro con brio—is out of tune by heck.

It is indecent, this putting the ghosts of the dead great to stud. There can be no punishment for Moor other than oblivion. That, of course, awaits him. But it should not wait. Oblivion is often overdue. If this unfriendly comment has any purpose it is to hurry oblivion. I should be pleased if Moor's oblivion should arrive in Chicago before the Flonzaleys, with their concerto, get the ear of Mr. Stock.

Moor is a professorial Berliner who fought Strauss and Reger and the rest of the good Germans before the war with the weapons of righteous faith which are now being used against the good fellows by the blue Sunday people. He would welcome blue Sunday music—i. e., Moor and the pipe organ.

And now a word for the Philadelphia Symphony and Stokowski, who abetted the Moor crime through trusting ignorance, no doubt. Dreariness is not their mark. The fascinating Stokowski is notoriously an amuser. To be censured for dullness will be a new experience for him.

Every week, as regularly as he conducts, the local critical fraternity sagely admonish him that he must mend his skittish ways. But the New York public loves him dearly for those same ways, and his concerts are always packed with crowds over half of which are young and pretty and well dressed women.

At this concert, he played the Strauss tone poem, "Death and Transfiguration," as a chaser for the Moor concerto. The chaser was the drink. The flippant Strauss comment on the procedure of dying and going to heaven—to listen, one would think that the one occurred in a ball room and the other by circus balloon—restored a waning faith in things Berlinish.

Berlin, in the last twenty-five years, thanks to Strauss, has been to music what skyscrapers are to architecture—material, flashy, unimmortal, but breath taking. The Strauss tone poem has all the bombast and busyness of the Woolworth building.

Mr. Stokowski, who loves the modern for its fleet and vanishing excitements, directed in the perfect Strauss mood. He thrilled and tickled the fancy until the last bar and then left it empty. It was like the building of a prodigious house of cards. The last elegant sweep of his slender directing baton hand brought it down and he packed the material back into his well tailored sleeve while the audience moved out wondering for a moment and then forgetting that there had been music. The only after taste of the concert was an evil skunky one. The Moor concerto has a lasting flavor.

Cold Without and Warmth Within Is Christmas Spirit

By Mme. X.

CAN you imagine Christmas without snow and ice and the other attributes of hoary winter? It is the contrast between the interior warmth and good cheer and the bleak, forbidding nature outside that gives the feast its especial piquancy.

It is a curious study in psychology to watch the Christmas spirit grow in the most callous mortal. It is a determined hater of his kind who, the day before Dec. 25, doesn't feel an irresistible impulse to go forth and purchase some form of Christmas gift, the more useless the more desirable usually, and then bestow it on some quite unexpected and unexpecting mortal.

This column, which is, metaphorically speaking, all wreathed with holly and not entirely innocent of mistletoe, hopes that all its readers had the merriest of Christmas and that the accompanying plum puddings were not harmed by the well meaning but hampering prohibitionists. We rather fear that future generations will live and die without knowing the unapproachable delights of the real old fashioned plum puddings and mince pies. But then, probably, they'll live longer and die less painfully.

* *

Chicago Opera Superlative.

It is a pleasure to record an increased attendance at the opera. Both boxes and parquet have a more replete look. They certainly ought to. Where else will you find such a collection of artists as ours? Galli-Curci, Mary Garden, Gall, Rosa Raisa, Titta Ruffo, Baklanoff, Galeffi, Dufranne, Johnson, Hislop, and Muratore coming. Can you match this list? In a few weeks they all leave us and go out into the world to show what Chicago can assemble in the way of a superlative opera company.

Is there among us one whose heart fails to beat faster at the announcement that more than 70 per cent of the seats for the Chicago Grand opera engagement in New York are already taken? This advance booking is a spontaneous appreciation on the part of the Gothamites which is especially gratifying in view of the fact that their critics are not wildly cordial in their comments on the achievements of our company.

If there is a thing that the New York critic hates it is praising anything that comes out of the west, especially this part of the west. Gall and wormwood are, by comparison, desirable as a daily diet. So such a sale is a double triumph.

In other less prejudiced cities of the central and western part of the country the advance sales are even more enthusiastic and satisfactory. Wherever our company travels, whether to Omaha, Los Angeles, or other far away cities, the people flock in from the surrounding country in great numbers. They spend their money in the shops and hotels as well as at the opera. The arrival of the Chicago opera is in the nature of a great festival. Knowing this, the local hotelkeepers and merchants make everything as attractive as they can, while the local chamber of commerce practically underwrites the opera company's engagement.

Do We Want Grand Opera?

In its journeyings the company spreads the fair fame of Chicago as nothing else in our well advertised town does. So, whether it be here or abroad, the Chicago opera is one of our most precious and valuable assets. This is apropos of the fact that the time is at hand for Chicago to decide whether or not it wants opera, this opera (which is in the front rank of its kind today) to remain a permanent institution.

For eight years, with a generosity it would be hard to match, Mr. and Mrs. Harold F. McCormick have built up and carried the present remarkable organization, not because they were music mad, but because they loved Chicago. They were aided in this by a loyal board of guarantors who made up the annual deficit to a certain figure, after which the McCormicks came in and filled a financial gap both wide and deep.

Feeling that eight years is ample time to demonstrate whether Chicago wants a grand opera, the McCormicks and the guarantors announce that after next year the people of this city will have to show their appreciation of the enterprise by a support so hearty that the guarantors will only have a comparatively small deficit to make up. There seems in some minds an incredible uncertainty as to Chicago's response to this challenge.

To lose the opera, especially our opera, would be a disaster not to be faced, a blow to our prestige from which it would take years to recover It's not unlike that much discussed league of nations; if we don't have and make permanent this opera we won't have any. Of this there is no question

* *

Boxholders Are Foundation.

It is not necessary to make appeal to the large mass of opera goers who nightly crowd the balconies and galleries, those vast mysterious spaces whence pour such floods of applause and vivas. For many preceding months whole families of this class of opera patrons economize and plan for the opera season. Sometimes they attend two or three performances a week. It is the great fact in life to them, the romance and poetry without which existence would be drab and tedious. Of course, this contingent is almost entirely of foreign birth.

It is, however, to the well to do, the educated, the supposedly public spirited Chicagoites that those who desire to keep opera must turn, to the so-called society people who have failed to follow the lead of their kind in other cities in the support of opera. There are names closely interwoven with the growth of the city which are not upon the list of opera boxholders, and in the last analysis it is the opera boxholders who are the foundation stones on which grand opera is built.

Even if every seat in the house were taken for every performance, our opera would not pay in the business sense of the word. To make it a complete financial and artistic success the boxes must also be taken and occupied. The singers, as a rule, sing with more fervor on Monday evenings because that is the opera goer's favorite night. The house is always well filled.

* *

Treat It as Civic Duty.

Such New Yorkers as have them regard their boxes at the Metropolitan as a valued asset. They are scheduled in the property lists of the socially great, and are bequeathed to descendants just as any other possession is. Not to have an opera box there is not to have achieved the final hall mark of social greatness.

The Gotham box holder does not feel it necessary to fill every seat in his box at every performance, nor to stay there to the bitter end of the evening. It is a great business asset to its owner when, for instance, a valuable, out of town customer comes to town whom the "Missus" doesn't feel inspired to entertain. That box may land a big fish.

The Chicagoan who is asked to take a box for the season is apt to regard the question entirely from his or her own personal point of view and to be governed solely by the consideration as to whether he or she enjoys opera. The idea of treating it as a civic duty doesn't seem to enter the calculations of the prospective purchaser.

If this latter idea could obtain a foothold it is safe to say that every box in the Auditorium would be sold each year, for there is no more generous, loyal citizen in the world than the true son of Chicago. Put up to him (or her) that that $900 was subscribed to the glory, honor, and profit of Chicago, and there would not be boxes enough to go round.

The Polite Town.

Mr. W., a former Chicagoan who, with his wife, has been visiting here lately, went to engage her accommodations on the train back to Milton Mass. To the Pullman company clerk he said: "Will you be so kind as to tell me if I can get a section on the Boston train?"

"Certainly, which one do you want, sir?"

"I'd like one as near as possible to the end where the ladies' dressing room is, if you please."

"Will this one suit you?"

"Perfectly, and thank you so much!"

"Don't mention it; I am delighted to please you."

"That's awf'lly good of you. You see I'm trying to qualify for THE TRIBUNE's $50."

"So am I," responded the clerk.

A World of Toddlers.

The Bachelors and Benedicts' ball last Thursday at the recently opened Drake hotel was the chief social event of the week as well as the initial dance held in that spacious ballroom. It is one of the gay balls of the season, especially so considered by the young marrieds and still more youthful maids and youths who attend it.

In days of old it was celebrated for the elaborate stunts which were devised to amuse its guests. Nowadays the real devotees of Terpsichore rather object to anything which in the slightest degree interferes with or interrupts dancing.

Never in its most ecstatic moments has the dancing contingent derived the same satisfaction it now gets from that inanely, but all too accurately named dance, the "toddle." The toddle instantly becomes the rage wherever it is introduced. In Europe it is as prevalent as it is here. Last summer at Biarritz, where a group of Chicagoites spent the season, they were required to toddle at all hours of the twenty-four. After the morning dip in the sea the world that amused itself adjourned to some salon or dance pavilion and toddled until lunch time, to resume the dance after luncheon.

In Paris and London it is the same thing. All the smart cafés are filled with toddlers toddling to the stirring strains of an American jazz band.

Of all the things that have come out of this country, including the doughboy and Herbert Hoover, the toddle is considered our best contribution to modern civilization. I suspect that it is the "shimmie" minus the shiver.

Harvard Glee Club Concert.

The arrival of a college glee club is always an event of importance to those of its alumni who are residents of the town visited, but the arrival and concert of the Harvard Glee club is of more than usual interest this season. This organization has in three years stepped forth from the ranks of the jolly singers of "Jingle bells, jingle bells" into the larger field of veritable choral singing where it challenges comparison with such well known musical organizations as the Paulist choir and its ilk. This has been achieved under the direction of the Harvard musical professor, Dr. Archibald Davison.

Hence the ambitious and attractive program for tomorrow night's concert at Orchestra hall. Palestrina, Bach, Handel, Rubinstein, Kreisler, Brahms, and Mendelssohn are all represented among the evening's offerings. The merits of the glee club are even recognized by the French government, which has invited it to come to France immediately after commencement in June, offering to pay part of the expenses. The Harvard singers and players are going, and on July 4 will give a concert at the Trocadero, while on Bastile day, July 14, they will also give a program at Strasbourg.

It looks as if the Harvard men would have to eat their way to Orchestra hall, so many entertainments are provided for them. Different detachments of them were dined on Christmas day by Mr. and Mrs. Barrett Wendell, Mr. and Mrs. Hathaway Watson, Mr. and Mrs. Laird Bell, Mr. and Mrs. Francis A. Beidler, Mr. and Mrs. Murry Nelson, and Mr. and Mrs. John L. Shortall, while yesterday Mr. and Mrs. Kellogg Fairbank entertained them all at luncheon.

Holidays for Younger Set.

It is preëminently the moment of the year when the social stage is largely occupied by the younger girls and boys, what the Germans term the "backfischen," though just why etymologists don't explain. This coming week's calendar is simply packed with parties for this contingent.

On Tuesday evening Mrs. Norman Williams gives a dance at the Casino for her daughter, Joan. The same evening Mrs. Beidler entertains at the Blackstone for her two children, Francis Jr. and Elizabeth. Also at the Casino and on the same night Mrs. S. E. Barrett gives a supper dance for her grandchildren, Barrett and Thomas Scudder. Mrs. James W. Morrisson that same evening gives a masquerade dance for the still younger set, friends of her daughter Rosemary, at her home, 917 Rush street.

On Thursday Mr. and Mrs. Solomon Smith entertain the friends of their son and daughter, Marie and Solomon Jr. at a dinner dance at the ever useful Casino.

The preceding evening Mrs. W. L. Baum will give a dinner-dance at her home on North State street for her daughter, Janet Lawrence. The residence is the old F. S. Winston home, Mrs. Baum's father. It has one of the largest and most attractive ballrooms in the city. It is so little the custom nowadays to build a house with an available ballroom that it is worthy of comment. Many an old house, or, rather, we should say, a house of olden times, had a ballroom.

In the top of the Rumsey home, on the corner of Cass and Huron streets, there is or used to be such a dance room. In the fine old brown stone mansion of Mme. Cyrus McCormick, on Rush street, there is on the top floor a spacious ballroom with a platform for musicians or amateur players. The once famous Perry Smith house, now torn down, a white marble palace on the corner of North Michigan avenue and Huron street, had a delightful little theater and ballroom.

In the old days there were no clubs like the Casino, the Saddle and Cycle, and the South Shore, and people as a rule did all their entertaining under their own roofs and usually with little outside help.

Sculpture Exhibit at Institute.

A really interesting exhibit of sculpture is going on now at the Art institute. It is Jo Davidson's collection of portrait busts, as vigorous an outfit of likenesses in rugged bronze as you'll find this side of those shelves full of old Roman emperors and philosophers, is it in the Capitoline museum or the Vatican gallery? You may see them, the great men who have been making history so fast this last decade.

Arthur Balfour (whose resemblance to Shakespeare is more than usually strong); Clemenceau (with his rather simian cast of cranium); Masaryk, intellectual and keen; Barney Baruch, who is almost more correct than his tailor makes him; Venezelos, unexpectedly dapper and modish; Lord Robert Cecil, looking half monk, half statesman; Wellington Koo, to whom the sculptor, with subtle understanding, has given an especially smooth finish; President Wilson, and his former fidus Achates, Col. House, side by side, giving much food for thought to the careful observer; Lansing, Polk, Pershing, Foch, Joffre, Diaz (he of Italy, not of Mexico); Henry Davison, and others are there halted for all time in imperishable bronze.

Go to see them; they are well worth a visit, and Jo Davidson is a rattling good sculptor. It is to be wished that something of his might adorn the streets of Chicago, fruit of that mysterious Fergusson fund which has as yet hardly begun to fulfill its donor's intentions.

NEWS OF THE CHICAGO WOMEN'S CLUBS

Club Women Join Movement to Save Wild Flowers

THE first and second districts of the Illinois Federation of Women's Clubs, together with twenty-two other clubs, are coöperating with the Wild Flower Preservation society to conserve the natural beauty and protect the flora of this section.

Members from these various clubs are acting as hostesses on the various days of the month's exhibit of the society in the east galleries of the Art institute. From a collection of blue prints made three years ago, the exhibition has grown until it comprises hundreds of specimens interesting to professional as well as amateur botanists.

A bill has been drafted by the society to protect seven varieties of wild flowers which are fast disappearing. Mrs. Charles L. Hutchinson, president of the local chapter, will present the bill to the legislative congress on Wednesday and discus the need for its passage. The indorsement of every club in the state will be asked. The varieties specified are: Spring beauty, columbine, blood root, lady slipper, trillium, lotus, and gentian.

The education of school children in nature study and the enlisting of their interest in the protection of birds and butterflies, as well as the wild flowers, has a prominent place in the program of the organization. During the vacation period an especial hostess has been assigned to the east galleries to answer the queries of junior visitors. Mrs. C. B. Cory will be assisted by a corps of guides.

Hosts and hostesses for the next week of the exhibit include: Sunday, Jan. 1—Forestry class of the Chicago Woman's club, Mrs. Henry L. Frank and Harry P. Pearson of the Geographic society will be in charge. Tuesday, the Audubon soicety will be represented by Orpheus M. Schantz. Wednesday, Miss Marie Hesse of the Englewood Woman's club and Mrs. Paul R. Wright of the Illinois Microscopic society. Thursday, Mrs. A. F. Allen of the Oak Park and River Forest Garden club. Friday, Mrs. Seymour Morris of the Lake Geneva Garden club and Everett Millard of the Municipal. Saturday, Mrs. V. K. Spicer. Members of the exhibits committee and of the conservation council will be in charge on New Year's day.

Visiting botanists, who will be in Chicago this week attending the biological and botanical sections of the convention of the American Association for the Advancement of Science, will be the guests at a reception on Tuesday in the exhibit galleries.

MRS. NOBLE B JUDAH PHOTO—EUGENE HUTCHINSON

Mrs. Noble B. Judah of 60 Scott street is a member of the committee in charge of an exhibition being held at the Art institute by the Wildflower Preservation society, of which Mrs. Charles L. Hutchinson is the local president. A reception for visiting botanists will be given on Tuesday afternoon at the Art institute.

THE FAIR

Established 1875 by E. J. Lehmann
State, Adams and Dearborn Streets

Another Great Dress Sale Values To $65 at $15.75

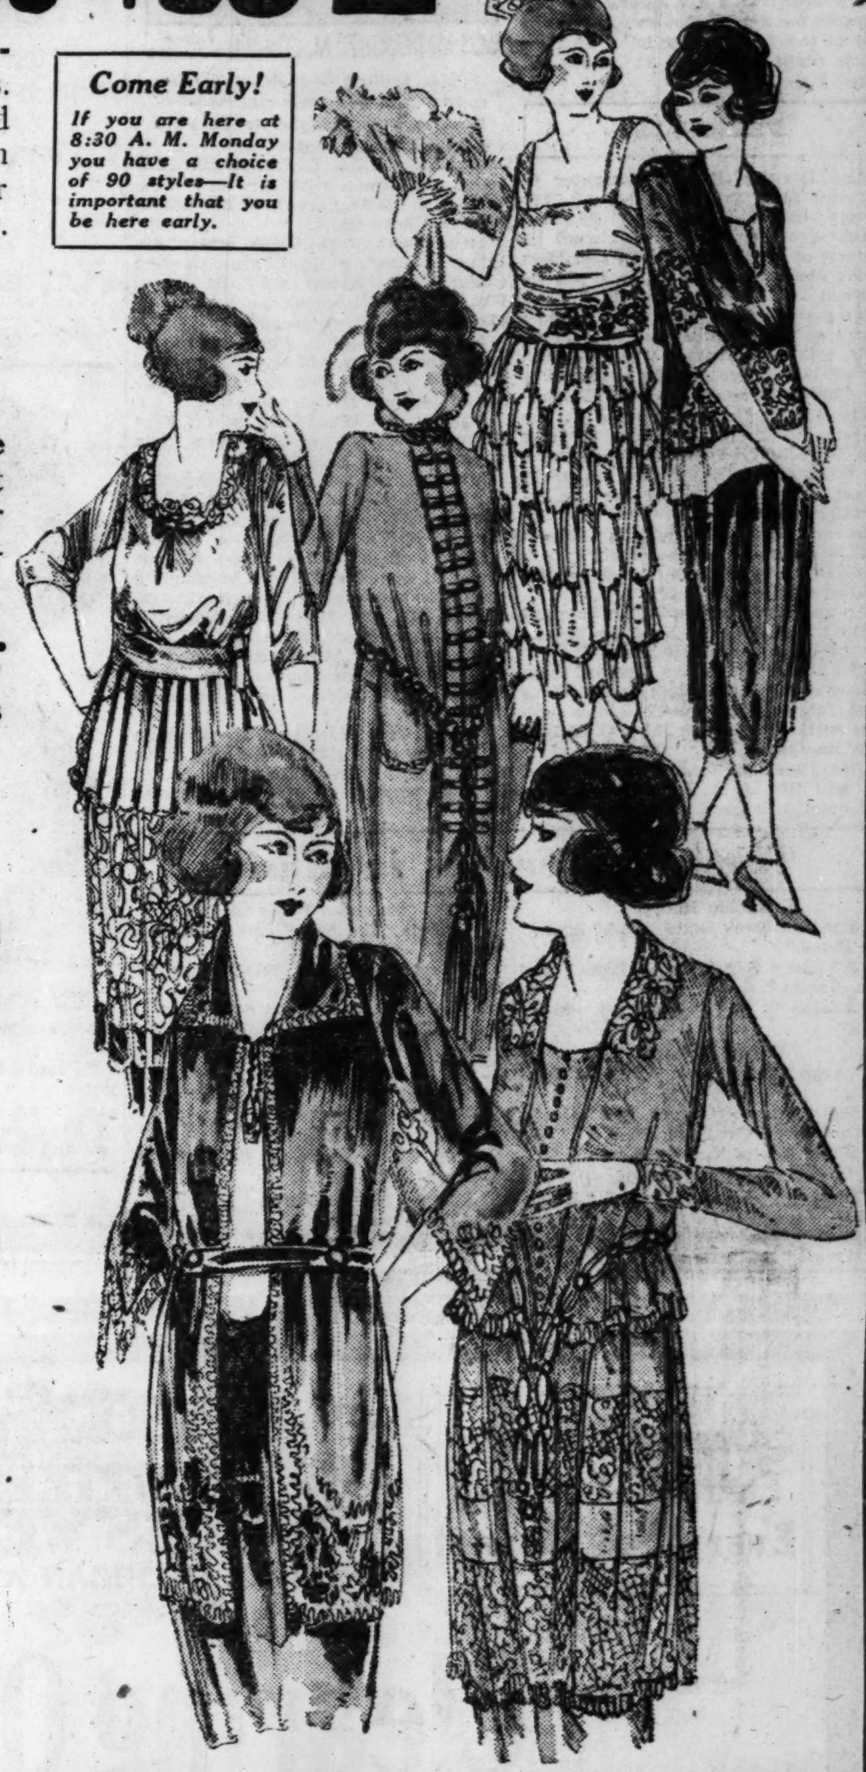
The recent unfavorable business conditions left many prom- inent makers of fine dresses with big stocks on their hands. Rather than keep them longer and take a larger loss, they sold them to us at an enormous sacrifice. You will be the gainer in this transaction, for you will be able to buy dresses at a lower price than you paid for dresses of equal quality before the war.

However, this condition cannot last long. In less than thirty days the surplus stocks of dresses will have been sold and prices like this will be impossible for similar goods.

We urge you to come to this sale early—to get your choice of the 90 styles—all smart—all developed in materials of the best quality—all silk lined—all carefully made. There are dresses for the street, for informal afternoon functions and for holiday dinners and dances. Again we say—come early.

Come Early!

If you are here at 8:30 A. M. Monday you have a choice of 90 styles—It is important that you be here early.



2,000 Dresses—the Following Materials:

Tricotine
Poiret Twill
Chiffon Velvet
Men's Wear Serge

INCREDIBLE!

By Guy F. Lee.

I'm off the magazines; as a rule
Their yarns are dull and their pictures awful;
Their poetry's of the futurist school,
Most of their stuff should be unlawful.
But I picked up one, believe it or not,
That gave me a thrill: It was a corker:
It had a story in which the plot
Was about New York and a New Yorker!

Yes, sir. It told us of Times square;
It mentioned Fifth avenue and Broad*way*;
It showered us with the White Night glare,
And let us in on Society gay,
Wall and Broad streets, and the Stock Exchange
Where Bulls and Bears on the Poor Fish fatten—
My, 'twas peculiar and odd and strange,
This unusual story about Manhattan.

Cuss the magazines, if you care;
I should worry; they're pretty cheesy;
But give the devil his level share,
Here was a single exception breezy;
Here was one with a Grand Idea,
Here was one with unique delights—
For seldom, if ever, indeed, you see a Story of Gotham and Gothamites.

Tell it in Gath and Askelon—hail
News of it widely with horn and hawker:
A magazine featured a fiction tale
Concerning New Yawk and a New Yawker!

The Case of Lucy Gray—

Lucy was explaining her experience to a group of girls.

"When I was 18 years old," she said, seriously, "my father died.

"I had to go to work, but I didn't know what to do. I had just graduated from high school, and I had to have something quick. I simply couldn't afford to spend six months or a year learning shorthand or bookkeeping and I didn't know a thing about business.

"One night mother looked up from her newspaper: 'Lucy, dear,' she said, suddenly, 'why don't you take up filing? It seems to me the work should be interesting and I hear the salaries are good.'

"Well, to cut a long story short, I took a course at the Illinois School of Filing. I graduated in 30 days and immediately secured a position paying $20 a week. I shall never forget how proud I was to get that first week's salary—the first money I had ever earned.

"That was a little over a year ago. Since then I have received two raises and today I am in charge of the Filing Department.

"The work is awfully pleasant. Best of all, it is extremely interesting. I meet nice people—I come in contact with the big men in the business.

"And I am just starting. Some day soon I am going to be getting a good bit more than I do now.

"There is a great future for most girls who take up filing. I certainly advise any girl who wants to better her postion to see Miss Gladys C Bridges, the principal of the Illinois School of Filing. She will be glad to talk to you. Write today for the free book."

The seats for Madame Pavlowa's performance tonight at the Auditorium were all sold, it is said, through orders received in the first day of the mail sale, Dec. 10.

They Laugh at this in Vaudeville

MAJESTIC.

Hall and Colburne:

"Yesterday I saw an officer arrest a man for swimmin'."

"A man can't be arrested for swimmin'. That's not against the law. Why didn't he bring suit?"

"That's what the judge told him, to bring a suit the next time."

"Why do you wanna get married right away for? Think there's ganno be another war?"

"I'm a steno in a livery stable."

"What on earth are the duties of a steno in a livery stable?"

"Taking down hay for horses."

"My father died dancing, that's why I'm so fond of it."

"How'd he die dancing?"

"At the end of a rope."

"What's the difference between this and that?"

"Then."

"Hilda, I hope you didn't let him kiss you."

"Well, I hope you lose your hope."

"Did you know there was a murder in this hotel today?"

"No, was there?"

"Yep, a paper hanger hung a border."

"Maybe it was only a roomer."

PALACE.

Clayton Kennedy and Mattie Rooney:

"Are you trying to make a fool of me?"

"No. I'd rather let nature take its own course."

Billy McDermott: After I studied for thirty-five years to be a hard drinker the darn place went dry. On my first day here I went autoing, with five policemen. The minute I saw the patrol I was completely carried with it. My physician prescribed these pills I have to take three after every meal. Do I take 'em? All I want is a small cake of soap. A small cake of soap will save my pal's life. He's had the hiccoughs for nine days and I want to scare him.

Elsie Williams: We have been married twenty-four hours and not a cross word has passed between us. Have you heard of the newest way of eating soup? Without music.

Miller and Mack: He's a great musician. Why, when only 3 months old he played on the floor. "How d'ye like codfish balls?" I asked sister [illegible]. "I don't know," she said. "I've never been to any."

NEWS OF THE RELIGIOUS WORLD

Catholic Mission Work Reorganized Under One Board

By the Rev. Gardner MacWhorter

WITHIN the last month the distinctly missionary work of the Roman Catholic church has been reorganized and brought under the direction of the hierarchy, represented by a governing board, of which the archbishop of Cincinnati is president, the archbishop of Chicago vice president, the archbishop of New York treasurer, and the bishop of Pittsburgh secretary.

The Rt. Rev. Mgr. Francis C. Kelley is director and chairman of the executives of the various missionary activities represented on the new American board of Roman Catholic missions and Chicago will be the meeting place for all the committees and the general publication office of the board.

To the executives has been given the work of actually carrying out the plans of the bishops in propaganda and management. The bishops as the governors have the distributing power, through budgets for each department, providing for preparatory colleges, theological seminaries, publications, etc.

The great change is in the method of securing assistance from the somewhat haphazard policy of appealing through societies of a semi-private character to a definite organized program for reaching every member of the church through a director of missions in each diocese who will have under him subdirectors in every parish. The work of preparing the ground among the children is to be promoted and developed, and missionary publications are to be brought together as soon as possible in one general publication office.

Foreign missionaries are to be brought to America to tell their story but not to collect money, and one Sunday in the year will be set apart as "Mission Sunday," when the slogan will be "Every Catholic a Missionary."

Offerings for foreign missions, aside from those to be used for educational and training purposes, are to be placed at the disposal of the holy see, which has already projected the establishment of an international board on which America will be represented as well as Italy, Spain, Holland, Great Britain, Ireland, Germany and the smaller nations.

France having developed to a greater degree along these lines than any other country will probably continue to manage her own missions until later on, but ultimately the whole Catholic world will work through the international board.

A noteworthy event in the relations of the Presbyterian church of Chicago with the Congregational church occurred last week in the installation of the Rev. Carl S. Crusius as pastor of the Seminary Avenue Federated church. A year ago Lake View Congregational church federated with the Belden Avenue Presbyterian church and the new organization is now known as the Seminary Avenue Federated church.

Dr. Zenos of the McCormick Theological seminary presided at the service; the Rev. Frank Fitt of the Highland Park Presbyterian church pronounced the invocation. Prof. Paul Crusius of Elmhurst, a brother of the pastor, read thre scripture lesson, and the Rev. James A. Richards, pastor of the Winnetka Congregational church preached. Prof. F. G. Ward of the Chicago Theological seminary offered the installation prayer; Dr. Henry S. Brown, superintendent of the Presbyterial church extension board, gave the charge to the pastor, and the Rev. C. S. Laidman, acting superintendent of the Congregational Missionary and Extension society, gave the charge to the people. This is said to be the first time that a Presbyterian and a Congregational association have united in a formal way for such a service.

Next Sunday has been set apart by action of the house of bishops of the Episcopal church as a day for visitation and exchange of pulpits between Episcopal and eastern orthodox churches. In every city and town where there are Russian, Greek, Roumanian, Serbian, Armenian, or other eastern Catholic churches, priests of the Episcopal church are asked to make every effort to see that there is a great service for the day.

Archbishop Mundelein will soon celebrate his fifth anniversary as the spiritual head of the archdiocese of Chicago, with the care of over 1,000,000 souls. He was recently elected vice president of the newly organized American board of missions of the Roman Catholic church.

Christmas music will be at feature of the Sunday Evening club program this evening in Orchestra hall, both at the early meeting, when the entire program will consist of Christmas carols by the choir instead of the usual talk by Clifford W. Barnes, and at the later service, when the choir, under direction of Edgar Nelson, will sing numbers partaking of the spirit of the season.

Mrs. Rose Lutiger Gannon will sing "The Virgin's Lullaby" and Stanley Martin will give an organ recital of Christmas offertories.

The Rt. Rev. Charles Palmerston Anderson, D. D., bishop of Chicago, who has delivered the Christmas sermon at the Sunday Evening club for many years past, will talk on the successes and failures of the year just closing, taking as his subject "Progress and Setbacks During 1920."

Gifts for benevolent purposes for 1920 by the members of the Methodist Episcopal church are practically $20,000,000 in cash, according to an announcement by Dr. C. B. Spencer of the Central Christian Advocate. This does not include gifts to colleges, hospitals, or homes for the aged, which are computed at several additional millions, and gifts to local congregations amounting to over $20,000,000. Members of the church have paid as much for others as they paid for themselves in the maintenance of their own congregations. In ten years Methodists have increased their yearly gifts by $15,780,810—from $4,024,444 in 1910 to $19,805,250 in 1920.

MONDAY ONLY

Because of our unfailing policy of limiting the number of dresses of any one style which we sell it is not possible to have every size in each of the dozens of models in this sale. There are all sizes here, but not in every style. The dresses displayed in our window are numbered, also the quantity in stock. These window dresses will be sold to all comers, but cannot be taken from the window until 5:30 P. M. Monday night.

This is the third of our record-breaking dress sales. The wonderful values which we were able to give at our last two Choice of the House Sales demonstrated that Chicago women appreciate getting dresses of the Komiss character at such sensationally low prices. For this third big event we are prepared to offer qualities and styles fully as noteworthy. While many of these dresses are actually worth two and three times our sale prices, we are determined to acquaint hundred of new customers with our standards of merchandise and our never-failing policy of giving better style and better quality at lower prices than you will find elsewhere.

Visit this sale tomorrow and experience the pleasure of owning one of these bewitching new dresses

St. John Ervine Play Triumph of Theatrical Byway

By Burns Mantle.

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—Down in Twenty-seventh street there is one of those parlor, bedroom and kitchenette theaters, made by tearing down the intervening walls of an old mansion, called the Bramhall. You may have read of it four of five years ago when it was first opened by its designer and builder, one Butler Davenport, an earnest if somewhat impractical student of the drama, who has sufficient income to indulge his fancy in writing and staging his own plays.

When the Bramhall was new, and while the Davenport plays gave even slight promise of amounting to something, the local reviewers were in the habit of stopping in at the Bramhall occasionally to see what was going on. Of late seasons, however, they have given up hope of ever finding anything there worth writing about, with the result that Mr. Davenport and his miniature playhouse have dropped more or less completely out of sight.

Comes now a new company, however, composed of professional players inspired by a desire to do "fine things" in the theater, which threatens to put the Bramhall back upon the map. With the production of a St. John Ervine drama called "Mixed Marriage" last week they scored a definite artistic success, and as there is a theatergoing public hereabouts interested in these triumphs of the theatrical byways their immediate future looms promisingly.

The Ervine play is not new, except to this public. It was in the repertoire of the Irish players who toured the east and middle west eight or nine years ago. Probably it never would have been revived had it not been for the success here the last two seasons of two other Ervine plays, "John Ferguson" and "Jane Clegg." It is like these in its absolute adherence to the rules of the realistic school: that nothing shall be done for the sake of its possible theatrical effect that is not logically and inevitably a development of the play's action.

It is not as gripping a melodrama as was "Ferguson," nor as direct in its appeal as the domestic tragedy in which Jane and Henry Clegg figured, but it is as true and as human, as bravely uncompromising in argument and as fine in characterization as either of them, and in this season of superficial and artificial comedies it is a restful and heartening experience to sit it through.

The story, too, has a certain timeliness, for all it was written ten years ago. Its subject is the intermarrying of Protestants and Catholics in Ireland, and with little alteration it could as easily be told as representing conditions in the unhappy island today as those of a decade ago.

Its protagonist is John Rainey, an honest Orangeman of Belfast, who undertakes to act as peacemaker during a strike of Belfast workmen. Certain agents, presumably in the employ of the masters, are seeking to divide the strikers by injecting the religious question into the struggle, to set Protestant against Catholic, and thus break the strike. Rainey, made to realize the necessity of preventing this outcome, becomes an ardent worker for harmony in the ranks and is so successful in keeping the Protestants in line that the strike is practically won when he learns, by accident, that his son is engaged to marry a Catholic girl.

Both the young people are true to their respective faiths and are content to wait until the strike trouble is settled before marrying, but Rainey, scenting a papish plot to humiliate him and his followers, demands that they renounce their engagement for the good of the cause. Upon their refusal to do so he stubbornly refuses to continue with his work as a harmonizer, deliberately undoes all the good he has accomplished, and is directly instrumental in turning the strike into a series of bloody riots.

His house is stoned by the mob; the son's fiancée, feeling that she is the cause of the trouble, exposes herself to the bullets of the soldiers and is killed, and the Rainey family is crushed and broken at the play's end. So carefully is the detail of the production worked out and so well chosen is the cast that the play becomes a masterpiece in miniature. The leading roles, those of the elder Raineys, are perfectly played by Margaret Wycherly and Augustin Duncan and are as fine individual characterizations as the local stage has revealed this season.

There is a report that those managers who try to live on the profits they make from their touring attractions will next season simplify their productions in order to meet the prohibitive cost of transporting scenery and properties.

This will be comparatively easy for the economists of the Henry W. Savage company when they come to outfitting the Mitzi show. All this young woman really needs is a pair of boy's pants and a selection of bobbed wigs.

In "Lady Billy," which is a typical Mitzi entertainment fashioned for her by Zelda Sears, actress turned playwright, the little Hungarian is provided with the usual excuses for doing all the things she does best. In the first act she masquerades as the son of the gardener on her own impoverished estate in Roumania. In the second act she emigrates to America as a boy soprano, changing the gardener's breeches for silk knickers, and in the last act she slips into a pantaletted frock and lets her hair down to prove that she is really a lady prepared to marry the juvenile who has loyally refused to guess her sex.

She is an entertaining mite, and we admire her because she has studiously avoided adding an imitation of George Cohan to her other specialties. She trills her treble songs prettily, imitates the soubrettes of other nationalities, and dances as naturally and as gracefully as any of her contemporaries.

In her current venture she is assisted by Sydney Greenstreet, the best of musical comedy butlers; Boyd Marshall, and Josephine Adair.

◆

For the first time in our playgoing experience the week before Christmas, usually the dullest of the year, is this year chosen by producing managers for three of the most important of the season's openings.

On Tuesday preceding Christmas Florenz Ziegfeld is to bring "Sally," an elaborate musical comedy featuring Marillyn Miller and Leon Errol, to the New Amsterdam.

On Wednesday night the Charles Frohman company is to present the newest Sir James Barrie play, "Mary Rose," at the Empire, with Ruth Chatterton in the part Maude Adams was obliged to abandon because of her continued ill health, and on Thursday night David Belasco will offer the Paris success, "Duburau," at the Belasco theater, with Lionel Atwill elevated to stardom to play the titular role.

Evidently the Christmas shoppers have managed some way not to let their holiday preparations interfere with their favorite sport, as all three openings are sold out, and there is lively bidding at the libraries for those seats the speculators have kindly agreed to handle as a favor to late buyers.

THE MUSIC CALENDAR

Sunday at 3—"La Boheme," with Galli-Curci, Alessandro Bonci, Dorothy Francis, Rimini, Defrere, Lazzari, and Trevisan. Cimini will conduct.

Sunday at 3:30—The Apollo Musical club will give its one performance of the "Messiah" this season. The soloists will be Else Harthan Arendt, soprano; Ethel Jones, contralto; Frederick Gunster, tenor; Fred Patton, bass.

Monday at 8—Last performance of the season of Marinuzzi's "Jacquerie," with the same cast that appeared in its American premiere—Gall, Carrara, Johnson, and Galeffi. Marinuzzi will conduct.

Monday at 8:30—Harvard Glee club, Dr. Archibald T. Davison, conductor, at Orchestra hall. According to all reports this Harvard Glee club is notable among college glee clubs, an organization which sings with such tonal beauty and technical finish as has won the most enthusiastic praise from the eastern critics, not as a college glee club, but as a remarkable body of singers.

Tuesday at 11—Albert Spalding, violinist, and Arthur Hackett, tenor, will be the artists at the Kinsolving Musical Morning in the crystal ballroom of the Blackstone. Mr. Spalding will play Corelli's "La Folia" and two groups of shorter pieces, including two compositions of his own. Mr. Hackett will be heard in songs by Faure, Duparc, Paladilhe, Griffes, Cyril Scott, and Lenormand.

Tuesday at 3—Blanche Good, directress of music at Smith college, will be heard in recital at Kimball hall. She will play among other things the Chopin B minor sonata and the Prelude and Fugue E minor of Mendelssohn.

Tuesday at 8—"Lakme," with Galli-Curci, Margery Maxwell, Diemer, Pascova, Schipa, Baklanoff, and Defrere. Incidental dances by Oukrainsky, Dagmara, and the corps de ballet. Henri Morin will conduct.

Tuesday at 8:15—Gounod's "Redemption" will be presented by the Swedish Choral club, Edgar A. Nelson, director, at Orchestra hall. The soloists will be Ethel Geistweit Benedict, soprano; Edna Swanson Ver Haar, contralto; Arthur Kraft, tenor; Theodore Harrison, basso; and Harry T. Carlson, organist.

Wednesday at 10—The Music Teachers' National association will open its forty-second annual meeting at the Hotel La Salle. The speakers listed on its comprehensive program include Charles L. Hutchinson, Peter C. Lutkin, Philo A. Otis, William F. Bentley, J. Lawrence Erb, Frank L. Reed, Raymond H. Stetson, Ernest R. Kroeger, Carl E. Seashore, Alfred Pennington, William L. Tomlins, Herbert M. Hyde, Leon R. Maxwell, J. Victor Bergquist, George C. Gow, Max Schoen, Charles N. Boyd, George Enzinger, Osbourne MaConathy, and Dr. Rust Rhees.

Wednesday at 8—The Chicago Opera company will give its first production of "Otello." Charles Marshall, an American tenor who has aroused considerable anticipation among the operatic wise ones, will make his debut as Otello. Raisa will sing the rôle of Desdemona. Ruffo will be heard as Iago. Cimini will conduct.

Wednesday at 8:15—"The Messiah" will be given by the Marshall Field Choral society, Thomas A. Pape, conductor, at Orchestra hall. The soloists will be Ethel Benedict, soprano; Rose Lutiger Gannon, contralto; John B. Miller, tenor, and Herbert Gould, bass.

Thursday at 8—"Lucia di Lammermoor," which will mark Galli-Curci's last Chicago appearance this season. The remainder of the cast includes Falco, Schipa, Rimini, Lazzari, and Trevisan. Cimini will conduct.

Thursday at 8:15—Popular concert by the Chicago Symphony orchestra. Miss Josephine Rosensweet, pianist, will be the soloist, playing Saint-Saëns C minor concerto.

Friday at 2:15—The Chicago Symphony orchestra, Frederick Stock, conductor, in its regular concert at Orchestra hall. Mrs. Fanny Bloomfield Zeisler will be the soloist, playing the Rubinstein Pianoforte concerto No. in D minor. The program also includes the overture to Beethoven's "Leonore" op. 72 No. 3, and Holst's "The Planets," which will be given its first American performance.

Friday at 8, New Year's eve—Mary Garden in the only performance of "Aphrodite" of the season. Others in the cast are Van Gordon, Claessens, Johnson, and Cotreuil. Pavely and Oukrainsky will appear with the corps de ballet. Morin will conduct.

Saturday at 2—"Madame Butterfly" with Rosina Storchio (debut) who created the title rôle. The others in the cast are Pascova, Hislop, and Baklanoff. Marinuzzi will conduct.

Saturday at 8—Last performance of the season of "Jewels of the Madonna," Raisa, Lamont, and Rimini, will be included in the cast. Cimini will conduct.

Saturday at 8:15—The Chicago Symphony orchestra in its regular concert at Orchestra hall.

THE POTTERS

'TWAS THE DAY AFTER CHRISTMAS

ILLUSTRATED by J. H. STRIEBEL

by J. P. McEVOY

SCENE—The Living Room in the Potter Flat. The Potters are taking inventory of the Christmas loot, wondering why the so-called Merry Yuletide is called a Christian festival.

PROLOGUE.

Christmas comes but once a year
And that's sufficient, very—
But may we arise to query here:
Where do they get the "Merry"?

MA (sighing):
Of all the trouble I've been through
I never had so much to do.
I'm glad it's over, aren't you?

PA:
Glad it's over? Well, I'll tell
The whole wide world and the stars as well.
Merry Christmas? Merry Blazes!

BILL (sorting):
White socks, green socks, black socks, red—
Do my relatives think I'm a centiped?
And here's an unusual jolly surprise,
A couple of hand knit lavender ties.

MA:
You ought to wear them for her sake, she's coming here tonight.

BILL:
The hints I made for a new dress suit were audible for blocks
And all I get is socks and socks and socks and socks and socks.

PA:
Well, Bill, you ain't got all of them, you see I drew a few,
And nice initialed handkerchiefs.

MA:
Now, Pa, you need 'em, too.

MAMIE:
Madge must have got these at a sale, or else they aren't new,
And here is all I got from Ruth—she cost me plenty, ooh!

MA:
It can't amount to very much, she's rubbed the price mark out.

MAMIE:
We sent the Bells a silver set for their confounded brat,
And they send our child a rubber ball, waddye think of that?

MA:
I always said the Bells were queer.

BILL:
You should have said "the Bells are cracked."

PA:
I think they're pretty smart; in fact,
To give a rubber ball and get
A brand new solid silver set,
If that's a crazy thing to do
I'd like to see you crazy too.

MAMIE:
Bill got his girl a toilet set for twenty and a half,

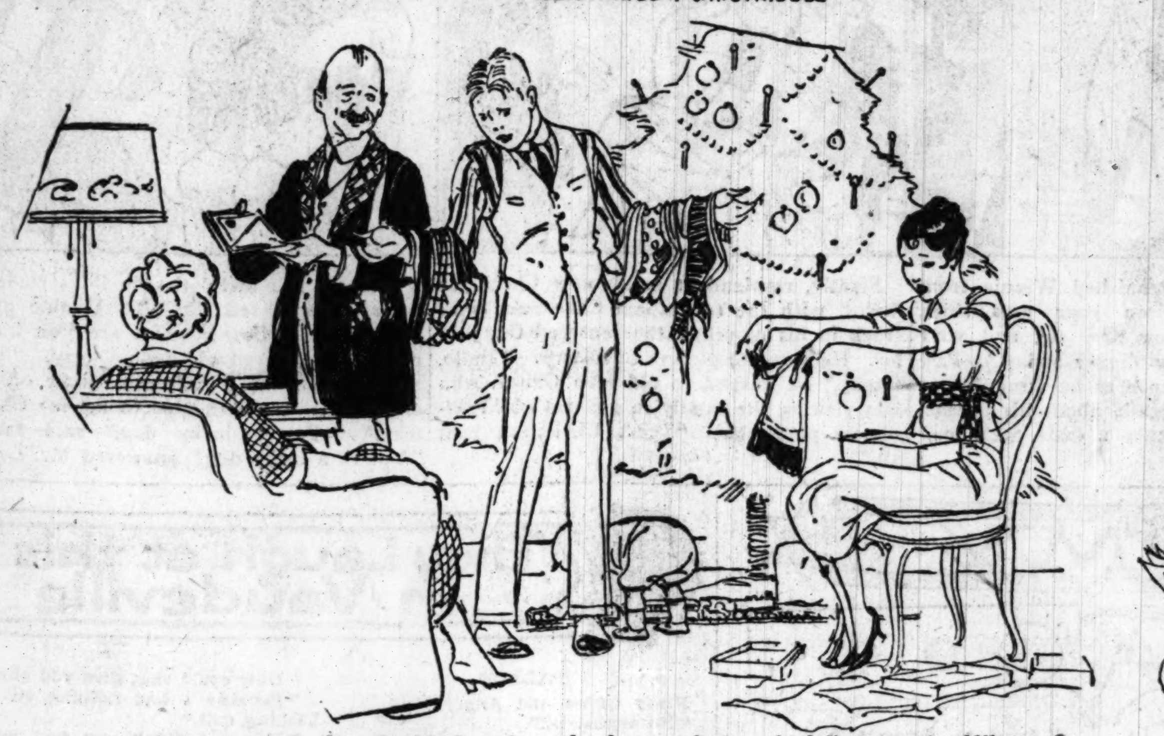
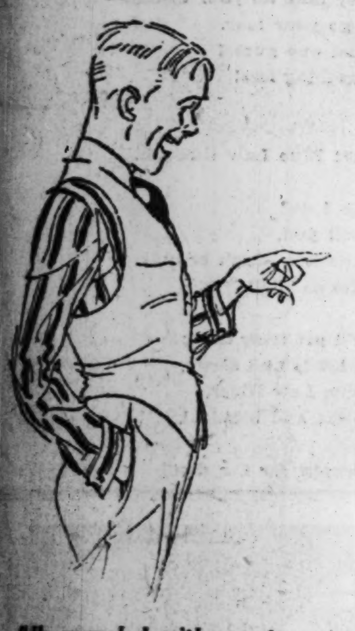
BILL:
And all you got from your gazink was just a merry laugh.



"White socks, green socks, black socks, red—do my relatives think I'm a centiped?"



"He quarreled with you to save his dough."

MAMIE:

BILL:
He always fights at Christmas time—it's cheaper than to pay

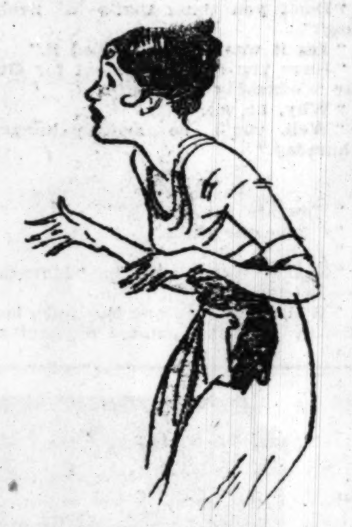
MAMIE:
Oh, is that so!



"Oh, is that so!"

BILL:
You ought to know.
He quarreled with you to save his dough.

MAMIE:
Oh, is that so!

BILL:
That's what I said.

MAMIE:
Your noise annoys me, shut your head.

PA:
The lovely Christmas spirit is with us yet, I see;
"Peace on earth, good will to men"—means peace for all but me.

MA:
At least we got some darling cards.
Here's one that's sweet and new:
A Christmas wish sincere and true
From all of us to all of you.

PA:
Here's an original thought, I'll say:
Right Merrie be your Christmas day
And may you have good luck and cheer
To last through all the Glad New Year.

BILL:
Well, here is one that ain't so worse,
Bright, original, nifty, terse:

MERRY, IN A MANNER OF SPEAKING, CHRISTMAS.
For yars and yars the wild eyed bards
Have hammered out with vim and verve
Their snappy, happy Xmas cards,
What touch your pneumogastric nerve.
But all that I can sing or tell
Of Merry Christmas plain and flat
Of who the—, what the—, why the,—well!
Suppose we let it go at that?

MA:
I'm going down early tomorrow morning—I've got to exchange some stuff.

PA:
There'll be some more there with the same idear—
You'd better start early enough.

MA:
Of all the trouble I've been through!
I never had so much to do—
I'm glad it's over—aren't you?

PA:
Ooooooooooooooooooh!

(And that's that!)

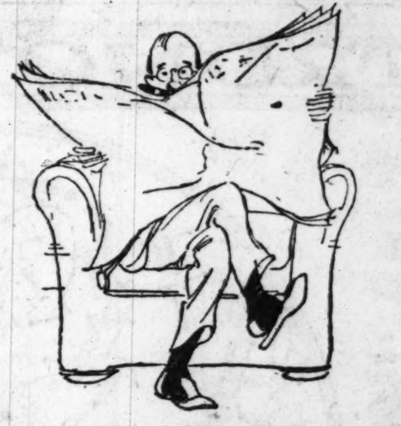
"I'm glad it's over."



"Merry blazes!"

FARM AND GARDEN

New Machine Plows, Harrows, and Sows in One Operation

By Frank Ridgway.

LEO FEBRE'S dream will probably save farmers hours of hard work and contribute much toward revolutionizing grain farming in America. As a result of his dream Mr. Febre has invented a rotary-stationery harrow which will break up the soil, prepare the seed bed, and sow the grain all in one operation.

It has been taken for granted by farmers that wheat sowing is a hard job, and that it is necessary for them to go over the field several times with implements of various kinds in order to plow and plant the ground. Not all of the grain farmers are as fortunate as the Kansas growers, who had hundreds of acres of volunteer wheat to come up last year.

Ordinarily farmers find it necessary to plow and order the ground before seeding it, which necessitates driving over the ground with horses or a tractor at least three or four times. The newly invented harrow does away with the extra operations, doing the work in one sweep across the field.

Principle of the Harrow.

The principle of the harrow is simple. It is swung from an iron frame supported by wheels, with teeth similar to those in an ordinary spike tooth harrow extending from a shaft. The teeth are about ten inches long and as the harrow moves forward the shafts rotate, the teeth cutting the soil transversely in the direction of travel.

The teeth cut the soil to a depth of six inches, breaking the surface into a fine mellow seed bed. The shafts with teeth on all four sides are turned by means of a chain coming from a sprocket wheel on the axil of the drill. After the soil is cut up it is leveled by two rows of stationary teeth that follow immediately behind the teeth that are mounted on the revolving shaft.

With this combination harrow the ground is left ready for the drill which is attached to the rear end of the harrow. The harrow can be made any size, and Mr. Febre says that it can be made so that any of the grain drills now on the market can be attached.

For Any Land Except Sod.

He claims that the harrow may be used on most any land except sod, and that a plow is not needed in breaking up the soil where small grains, such as wheat, oats, barley, and similar crops are to be sown. Dead furrows are eliminated, and corn ridges can be leveled with this implement.

It will work in ordinary fields where crops have been grown the previous season. The teeth in rotating pass in such a fashion that weeds and corn stalks do not interfere with the operation of the machine where it is used on corn stalk or stubble land. It uproots and destroys quack grass.

The inventor believes that the harrow can be made in so many different sizes, so simple in construction, and consequently cheap, that it will prove valuable to gardeners and truck growers as well as grain farmers. The model he has built for demonstration purposes is six feet wide and requires four horses to pull it. A twelve horse power tractor handles it nicely.

Not Yet Manufactured.

The harrow has been patented, but it is not yet being manufactured. However, Mr. Febre expects to have many of them working in the grain fields of the middle west within a year.

Mr. Febre is a native of France, but came to this country when he was 14 years old. He was born on a farm in the southwest of France and when a mere boy he was left an orphan.

Today, in his fiftieth year, he has ten inventions to his credit, including a road grader and ditch diggers, a coal and water loader for locomotives, a corn and insilage cutter, and he has recently invented a boltless rim for an automobile wheel. A feature of all of his inventions is to make such combinations that labor will be saved.

Believes in Dreams.

"Ouija boards, palmistry, spiritualism, and the signs of the moon and the stars have never held any charm for me, but I do believe in dreams," said the inventor as he explained the principles of the model of the combination harrow which is being demonstrated on John W. Esch's farm near Maywood, Ill. "The idea of this contraption came to me in a dream a few years ago when I was living in Norfolk, Va., working as a carpenter at the naval training station near there.

"As my fellow workmen and I rode to and from the camp in a trolley car they used to wonder why I insisted on sitting next to the window and why I was so interested in what the farmers were doing in the fields we passed. One day I would see the farmers plowing, later they would be harrowing, disking, or dragging, and after a few days had passed I would see them sowing the seed.

"I wondered why some of that hard work could not be eliminated — why some implement could not be invented that would do all of that work in one operation. I could not think of anything that would improve the implements now being used until one night the rotary harrow idea came to me in my dream."

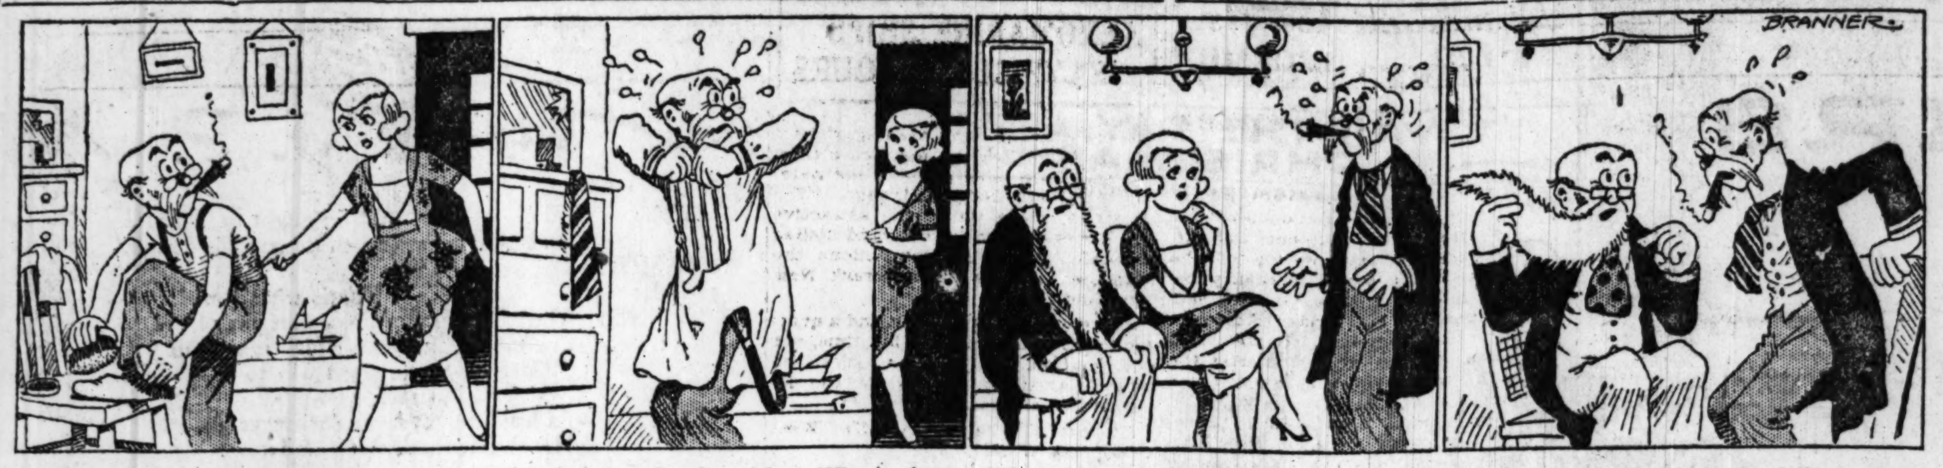
WINNIE WINKLE, THE BREADWINNER. Christmas Has Its Disadvantages



Another Christmas had come and gone. Father, bewildered and nonplussed with his many new presents, was busily engaged shining his shoes when Winnie entered his room and screeched: "Stop, fathaw! Don't you know better than to shine your shoes with military hair brushes? Those are for your hair!" Paw felt his bald head, bewildered.

"And fathaw," admonished Winnie from the doorway, "put on your new shirt, your new collar, your new tie, and your new suit for Sunday dinner today." Paw choked his acquiescence as he struggled to assemble the new regalia about his person. "They're tryin' to make a dude out'a me," he complained.

Finally, resplendent in his new Christmas finery, with the traditional Christmas cigar stuck in his mouth, father entered the parlor. He was the picture of misery. "Hullo, Ganzy," he gasped to old man Ganzy, who was visiting the family in general and Winnie in particular. "Don't Christmas beat all?"

"Look'a this awful tie the folks made me wear," complained Rip Van Winkle as he sat down. "Gosh, what are you kickin' about?" answered old man Ganzy. "With my pesky beard I can't even show off this elegant tie that was give to me fer Christmas." "Yer a lucky dog," said father. "You're a lucky dog," answered Mr. Ganzy.

ASTRONOMY

SIRIUS AND COMPANION.

LET us go out through the southern sky, dropping far beneath the plane in which the planets run, and on into the illimitable vastnesses of space, to travel on and on for years until the shape of Sirius grows huge out of the darkness, and we come to rest in a new realm, a system dominated not by the sun, but by a star, an orb three and a quarter times the mass of our own sun, twice as large, and fully fifty times as bright.

Sirius is a younger sun than ours, his face is hazier, and his bulk is circled by a blazing aura of scarlet light, which contrasts vividly with the intense blue glare from the stellar core itself. Sirius' shrine is identical with the harsh blue radiance that comes from deep down in the sun's interior. Strip off the protecting screen of colored gases which temper the raw light at its surface, and the sun would instantly lapse back into the Sirian stage.

Sirius is a double star. It has a dark companion for a planet, nd the two wheel around once every fifty years. Astronomers observed that Sirius did not follow a smooth path through the sky, but made a wavy, irregular track, slowly swinging forward and then back as it plunged along. There was a dark star near, they knew, that profoundly played upon its motion, but the acolyte was invisible. It was one of those numerous dark suns which move unseen across the universe.

Old Alvan Clark had just finished making a fine eighteen inch lens, the largest then in existence, and he and his sons were trying its paces on the stars. They turned the glass on Sirius. Suddenly one of the boys exclaimed, "Why, father, the star is double!" And so it was. There, almost hidden in the blue blaze of light about the brilliant point was the phantom purple shape of a dim companion sun.

The smaller star does not give one twelve-thousandth part of the light that Sirius does, and yet it is a globe a quarter of the mass of Sirius. Its surface is pale and wan, but it is still far from the stage of a planet.

Sirius and its companion are fair representatives of the type of sun known as a double star. About one star in three in the whole sky is binary. The sun, in fact, is rather an exceptional star, because it has no attendants larger than Jupiter and Saturn.

Double stars are found in all stages of evolution, from two whirling globes just touching to suns many millions of miles apart. The two stars of Sirius are separated by about two billion miles of space. They hold about the same relation to each other as Uranus to the sun, but unlike a sun and satellite, their orbits are so decidedly oval that they alternately rush close together and then pull far apart again.

Suns go around each other only as a figure of speech. They turn, in fact, about their common center of gravity, as though each were suspended on the edge of a weightless elastic rod, and both wheeled about a fulcrum that was always fixed.

If Sirius' dark planet sun has any satellites of its own they must have uncomfortable climates to endure. Their sun gives them so little light that it would never be more than a dull shape off in the sky, and all the light and heat they have would come from Sirius' flaming shape.

The orbits of the two suns are so eccentric that the differences of heat the little sun receives are great. At its farthest point away the temperature on its satellite would about be that of a hot day in July. At the nearest approach to Sirius the temperature must run up to 2,000 degrees or more, which is the temperature of white hot iron.

Kirby Quinn and Anger:

"No argument."

"All right, we won't argue; we'll do it my way."

"Oooh—I swallowed a quarter."

"So, you're a quarter in and a quarter out."

"You ingrate."

"Ingrate nothin'; I'm in bad."

"Don't you think that's a lively song?"

"Yes it was—till you killed it."

"Have you an engagement for dinner Wednesday evening?"

"Why, no, sir."

"Well, you'll be awfully hungry Thursday."

RIALTO.

"How are you feeling?"

"I have the chills."

"So have I."

"Shake" (extends hand). "How did you get the chills?"

"While walking along the beach last Sunday a robber pointed a pistol at me."

"How could that give you chills?"

"Because I had nothing on but a bathing suit."

"Yes, but didn't you just say the robber kept you 'covered' with his pistol?"

"You talk like a squirrel. What are you following me for?"

"A squirrel always is after a nut."

"Stop personalities with me and tell me is it true that you're working for John D. Rockefeller?"

"Not any more. He said something I didn't like, so I quit."

"What did he say to you?"

"Get out of here."

"Is it a fact that Rockefeller talks to himself when he's alone?"

"I don't know. I never was with him when he was alone."

"Have you any other job in view?"

"I'm in hopes of getting on the police force."

"I'll see if you know anything of the duties of a policeman. Suppose you were ordered to disperse a mob, what would you do?"

"I'd pass around the hat."

"Do you mean to say passing around the hat will scatter a mob?"

"So Billy Sunday tells me."

Slams of Life

By J. P. McEVOY

THE BLUE LAW BLUES.

(Dedicated to the Lord's Day Alliance.)

(Slow and sad) I've got the blues,
I've got the blues,
I've got the Blue Law, Blue Law Blues—
All day Sunday I've got to act nice,
Ain't allowed to agitate the Mississippi dice,
Can't play poker, can't shoot pool,
Got to go to services and Sun-day School—
Got to learn the Rule, the Golden Rule—
Can't play golluf—gotta go to school!
Can't smoke, can't drink, dance, or chew.
What to do! What to do! What to do!
Oooh!

(Pause)

I've got the blues,
I've got the blues,
The sad Sabbatical Blues,
The sit-around-and-crab-blues,
Colder-than-a-slab-blues.
The drear ecclesiastical, solemn prayer and fast-ical,
Nix upon the jass-tical blues!
(Glad) And the pews—and the dues—
And the sermon and the squirmin' and the snooze,
And the glad evangelical,
"You're gonna go to helical,"
Sw-e-e-e-t Jacob!
Blue Law Blues!

(Slower and sadder) Can't read the paper—can't kiss your wife—
Play with the kids and you go to jail for life—
Drink black coffee—they take all your clothes—
Smile at the lady—off go your toes.
Checkers or chess? Just one guess!
Life on the rock-pile—nothing less!
(Little faster and more hopefully) Oh, when they pass,
Oh, when they pass,
Oh, when they pass that Blue Law through.

Wattle I do, pal, wattle I do?
Kill a Reformer—so will you,
(Gloatingly) The line will form to the left—don't crowd!
Who'll kill another? Not so loud!

By ones and twos they'll get their dues;
By squads and bevies, herds and slews,
(All together) And we will sing the Blue Law Blues,
The sad, Sabbatical, bleat and blat-ical,
Freak, fanatical blues.

(So endeth the lesson for the day.)

Winter Present in New Exhibits at Art Institute

By Eleanor Jewett.

Down from the north the strong winds whirl
Through the city streets—madder and madder—
Where the yellow light from the street lamps curl
Through the moving crowds, like a deadly adder.

Touching with slim cold tendrils of flame
The quickened faces and feet that pass
In their hurried hundreds like shadows born

And ever the north winds wilder blow
Through the city streets where poor men go,
Shivering cold in the sleet and snow.

WHY a person who dislikes winter and cold weather as much as I do should go out of her way to choose deliberately pictures dealing with that shivery, slippery, treacherous, sometimes beautiful but often slushy, subject upon which to comment (always providing other matters are present which afford equally choice points for discussion) is a question which for the last sixty minutes I have been trying to decide—and given up as a bad job, with the meek surrender of the opening verses of this column.

Certainly in the group of exhibitions that were first seen last week at the Art institute there are other than winter scenes portrayed. In spite of that fact the winter scenes seem to have made the strongest impression, because in the catalog opposite nearly each painting of winter, under no matter what guise, is written some descriptive phrase or symbolic adjective, while the spaces near most of the others have been left blank. Perhaps, however, on second thought, this impression can be simmered down to a statement of a few paragraphs, leaving the rest of the space to be occupied by more pleasant (and warmer) subjects.

The gallery devoted to the paintings by Guy Wiggins is a room where the winter theme predominates. The most beautiful canvas in the room is "Wind and Snow"—a picture lent by William O. Goodman. It shows city streets with their buffeted crowds, and puffs of snow, like feathers from white flying geese, driven by strong winds in dazzling, swirling clouds of cold.

Again we find the snow, backed by the north wind, the master of the city streets, in "Broadway Blizzard," a painting that has a strange attraction, though not quite the wonder charm of the first mentioned picture.

To mention a few more of Mr. Wiggins' winter scenes, there are, for those who appreciate the glamour of frost and ice, bare trees and mantling snow, "On Wintered Heights," "Snow-Crowned Hills," "Valley Snow," "Lightly Falling Snow," and "Midwinter."

In the first gallery in the east wing are the paintings by W. Elmer Schofield and these, too, deal in great part with the winter months. Through familiarity with paintings by both Mr. Wiggins and Mr. Schofield, this does not surprise one particularly. It may be a bad thing for an artist, or a writer, to become known as a man who does, usually, such-and-such kind of work, but, bad or not, it seems a nearly impossible thing for any but the greatest artists to escape.

Conversely, the greatest artists, often, set the stamp of their personality on their work so it is immediately known as theirs, without the need of a written guarantee that the authorship is genuine.

But this seems to lead us a little far from the path of the Schofield paintings, except inasmuch as it is appropriate when you consider that you might have to ask "who painted that 'Road to Perranporth'?" While, catching a glimpse of "Morning Sunlight" you would not need a catalogue to tell you the painter was W. Elmer Schofield. The canvas is a typical Schofield.

One of the unusual Schofields, but a lovely one, is "White Frost," a peculiarly nice country scene of garden, orchard, and farm buildings, frost silvered, shining in the sun.

More winter is found in an interesting painting by Gifford Beal, an artist who is more or less connected in one's thought with gay, crowded, chattering summer crowds or overheated interiors gay with some festivity, as a dance or hippodrome. He calls his winter painting the "Blue Pool." There is a red house, a white snowclad bank, a few brown grotesque trees, and then all the interest is centered on the deep, silent, blue water that spreads like a forgotten bit of a summer sky, startlingly, threateningly blue, in the foreground.

The more familiar Gifford Beal is seen in the "Indoor Circus," in "The Hippodrome," in "Palmy Days," even in "Huntsmen in the Valley." You realize that nothing on earth could be quite like what he has painted in these pictures, but what is exactness (which may be got in a photograph) compared to the joyous sensation of living and life that fairly exudes in visible atmospheric streams from these richly caparisoned canvases?

To go to one last group of paintings where winter is felt, though nearly buried by the sweetness of the competing summer that surrounds it, what do you say to the exhibit by Alfred Juergens? I read one criticism, almost by chance, that it is impossible for me to see the justness of or reason for—though I have an idea in the back of my mind that once I brought the name referred to into a mention of Mr. Juergen's work, but without the slightest similarity of text. The criticism reads: "Some one has called Mr. Juergens the American Monet because of his love for lily ponds. The appellation bearing the American qualification is fitting, etc." To my mind it is as far fetched as the most extraordinary similie or metaphor ever imagined. All one needs do for proof is to go through the Art institute, look at the Monet paintings, and then return to those of Alfred Juergens.

This does not mean that Mr. Juergens has not charm in his paintings, nor that they are beyond the pale in any way, but it does mean that those who look at them and speak of them should know a little about what they are doing before they appropriate such a criticism for such a use.

It seems to me it would be an excellent idea when one has a group of paintings such as these to hang with them, something hideously naked, violently black, something—anything—that will throw up their sweetness and docility in untempered contrast. They need this as much as a group of paintings by Sigurd Schou that I saw a week ago, needed it. Emphasis of the lighter things in painting is not gained through repetition. It is gained by sharp punctuation, by almost denial of the qualities that they offer.

The two paintings by Alfred Juergens (to return to our mutton, which in this case is the subject of winter) "Late Snow" and a "Ravine at Highland Park" are, possibly, as typically lovely as any two of his pictures in the room.

Hammond Asserts Chicago Will Be U. S. Air Center

By Morrow Krum

"THIS dream continually set up by Chicago aviation boosters, this dream that puts Chicago at the extreme top of the American flying world, is rapidly becoming more than an air castle," said Lee Hammond last Friday before he left for McCook field, Dayton, O., where he will attempt to interest the army air service officials in the Laird airplane.

"You know Edward Esch and I have a store here in motor row," he continued. "We sell airplanes and it would surprise you to know the actual number of out of town people who come in and ask questions about this ship. I mean men who are seriously contemplating the purchase of an airplane.

"Just this afternoon a man from a town situated in Wisconsin—over 250 miles away—came in and asked me how much we wanted for the Swallow. He said if the ship would do what we say it will he will buy two of them. He said that he couldn't be continually wasting time riding on railroad trains.

"Chicago is doing something to help aviation. The Lincoln park board is helping. We believe that we will have a landing field at the foot of Grace street by the middle of next summer.

"I also believe we will have a landing field at the foot of Sixteenth street in two years. We certainly wish that we could have Grant park, but the south park commissioners say 'no,' and so we are going to concentrate our attention on Grace and Sixteenth streets.

"In the city council they are passing laws to regulate flying over the city, and that will give the business a big boost.

"If you will look up and down the row here I believe you will find as many as ten agencies selling airplanes or airplane motors. Go to our remotely located flying fields and you will find hangars filled with ships. There, too, you will find men and women who can fly the ships.

"I believe that by the middle of the summer you will find air passenger lines operating all over the middle west and Chicago will be the center of the business. Let's hope so. We have wonderful opportunities here. Let's improve them."

AEROMARINE SHIPS SAVE SEVEN HOURS

Under the appealing heading of "Air Castles Made Real" there comes from Havana, Cuba, a schedule of the Aeromarine West Indies Airways. The timetable, made up in the attractive manner of a luxurious overland limited schedule, shows the connections the seaplanes make with the crack New York and Chicago trains.

The seaplanes save seven and a quarter hours in actual traveling time, not counting, as the schedule says, the hours you spend waiting for the departure of a steamer.

Key West-Havana.
U. S. Time.
Lv. Key West..12 noon Ar. Havana...1:15 pm
Lv. Key West..4:30 pm Ar. Havana...5:45 pm

Havana-Key West.
Lv. Havana...12 noon Ar. Key West..1:15 pm

FLYING TO PANAMA

Don't take any chances with your Ford in winter when for a little money you can absolutely prevent your radiator and engine from freezing, while your car is in the garage.

Don't run your battery down, or wear yourself out cranking, when your Ford is cold and will not start easily.

Don't shorten the life of your Ford by racing the engine to warm it up on cold mornings. Nothing throws a Ford out of good running order like racing the engine.

The Elmco heater on your Ford is the best protection you can possibly buy for $12.50 against frozen cylinders, hard starting and broken parts.

And remember this—the Elmco either proves its complete satisfaction within ten days after you buy it or back comes your money from us without a question.

The Elmco works either on farm lighting or city circuits (110 or 220 volts). In ordering a heater all you have to do is to be sure you get the right heater for your electric circuit.

MOTORDOM

Small Lifts Lid on Highway Work for 1921 Season

New Executive Behind Big Building Campaign on Bond Roads.

BY J. L. JENKINS.

"WATCHFUL waiting" in connection with the highway construction program in Illinois has ended for all time. Governor-elect Len Small yesterday gave THE TRIBUNE an outline of his tentative plans for active coöperation with the state highway department that may be summed up in the slogan: "Build roads now."

"It is a trifle early to talk about the definite program for 1921 highway construction work," said the new executive. "The state highway department will, of course, formulate that policy in order to insure a maximum of progress under existing conditions just as it has done in its highly creditable 1920 road building campaign. I have had little opportunity as yet to go into the matter deeply with the department, but I think that I understand the situation, and am certain that road building is to be one of the vital interests in the state during my administration.

"Right now all conditions that affect successful construction are changing. The trend of their change seems to be leading in the right direction, toward reduction of construction costs and increase in available labor. As to the latter, support of a maximum construction program may help materially to solve unemployment problems throughout the state next spring.

"In any event, I intend to use every effort to get the largest possible mileage of hard surfaced roads built during the coming season and to get the work started earlier in the year. I hope that conditions are such that we can go ahead and sell bonds of the $60,000,000 issue and carry out the wish of the people of Illinois to the fullest extent. The selling of these bonds could not help the situation during the last season, but from all appearances at present, we will be able this year to go ahead and break all records in the construction of the bond issue roads this year."

Governor Elect Small's aggressive attitude concerning the selling of the Illinois bonds and speeding up of the necessary work in every section of the state will be received with high favor on the part of practically every county road official and highway booster. Numerous county programs are hanging fire at present, awaiting an official decision by the state, a decision that will be announced as soon as highway officials and the new administration have an opportunity to go over all details of the proposed program.

Numerous state organizations are already on record as favoring the immediate sale of bonds and the building of hard surfaced roads at any cost. Farmers of Illinois are thoroughly "sold" on hard roads, and business men generally see in the proposed rush of highway construction an early solution of the curtailed transportation problem.

In favoring an earlier opening of actual road work, Mr. Small has backed up the desire of Superintendent of Highways S. E. Bradt and his organization, but he also voiced a fear that railroad transportation facilities next spring and summer may be little better than they have been this year and that lack of available cars to move material to the road jobs may prove the one drawback to record breaking building.

The original highway program in 1920 called for construction of 1,800 miles following the sale of bonds. In order to assure sufficient transportation facilities, state officials called on the railroads during the winter, warning operating departments that 1,000 cars of material would have to be delivered each day in order to allow 1,000 miles of roads to be built. They estimated that it takes a car eight days to make a round trip and that the transportation would thus call for 8,000 freight cars to be continually in the service of the highway department.

Further safeguards were thrown about material movements by arrranging with contractors to store the material they needed during January and February, months when railroads thought they could best spare cars. When contractors began calling for their materials to store, however, delivery cars were not available, according to state officials, and the fight for rolling stock sufficient to move material for the 330 miles that were built in the curtailed program, continued throughout the year.

It is believed that, following a decision to lift all bars on road building in 1921, the first move of the highway department and its suporters throughout the state will be to see that the greatest possible number of railroad cars are assigned to material moving an dthat contractors will be asked to store huge supplies through January and February for early spring work.

Voice of the Motorist

Ban on Trucks.

At a special business meeting of the Crete Woman's club it voted to spare no efforts in trying to save the new $80,000 boulevard that runs through the center of their village from the same fate that the Dixie highway between Steger and Chicago Heights, built two years ago, Western avenue, the cement road to Chicago, the Roosevelt road, and other cement roads through the state have suffered from heavy truck users.

Such roads are no credit to the state and no pleasure to tourists or auto owners, to say nothing of the cost to the people who pay taxes and assessments to build them.

The club contends if heavy motor trucks are necessary the state should take some action in providing motor truck roads off of the highways for trucks alone, or at least it should pay for the upkeep of the road through villages, which it now refuses to do. Trucks not only soon destroy the roads but they are a menace to safety.

The club petitioned the Crete village board to refuse a permit to the Chicago, Kankakeee, Watseka, and Danville Motor Truck company to conduct a freight and express service through the center of the village and to compel all out of town trucks, light and heavy, and long distance moving vans to pay toll according to their weight to aid in upkeep of road or detour around town. The one mile stretch of cement road through the village is from thirty feet to forty-eight feet wide and cost the assessment payers alone along the street $44,000 and the club is taking the initiative in sending petitions to the secretary of state, state highway commissioners, public utilities commission, Chicago Motor club, state senators and representatives, and other women's clubs asking their support in the movement to save the cement roads through the state from annihilation from trucks. H. E. H.

A Motor Friend.

What do they put ammeters on cars for, anyway? Ask a whole lot of motorists that question and they will tell you they don't know, says an editorial in the current issue of Motor Life magazine. That may sound queer to the informed type of car driver, but it is nevertheless the fact.

The ammeter tells whether the generator is working properly, or whether you have a short circuit which is draining the battery of its electrical energy. The ammeter is the little watchman of the electrical system. Whenever the car is running at speeds of about fifteen miles an hour or over, the ammeter's little indicating hand should be over on the charge side, telling the charging rate. The only times it should indicate discharge are when the starting motor is in operation and when the lights are on and the car is not operating fast enough for the input of current to exceed that demanded by the lights. If it tells you current is leaving the battery at any other time, then you know something is wrong.

Pay some attention to the ammeter. You cannot appreciate what a good friend it is until you take it seriously.

The Charm of Color

HAVE you ever realized the exhilarating effect that warm, pleasing colors, even in a picture, have upon your physical well-being? For instance, visualize this illustration in your mind's eye, in all its natural coloring—the blue sky, the verdant foliage and brilliant flowers, the sunlit buildings with their purple shadows, the sparkling, iridescent waters—and—presto, your troubles vanish and you are filled with a warm spirit of contentment.

The interesting feature of this illustration is, however, that this is no vision, but just a fragment of the real, summer-like environment that you will find everywhere on the wonderful

MOTORDOM

Tempermental Gas Proves Big Worry for Motor Makers

Tourists See Curtailment of Oil Flow in Southwest

Lower prices and an unlimited world supply of gasoline have been predicted as outstanding features of an investigation made strictly from the viewpoint of the motorist. The following report tells what modern quality fuel does to your car and what tourists are noticing about the operation of our southwestern oil fields.

BY HIGH SPEED.

KEROSENE carburetors abound in California. More have been invented and placed on the market in that state than anywhere else in the world, because they can take the "27-plus" fuel, the black oil peculiar to the country, and get maximum power out of it while the car is operated on the Pacific coast. But when they bring the same carburetor to Chicago and put the local paraffin kerosene in it, the engine pounds, and, in many cases, refuses to respond.

Sectional characteristics of fuel oil sold at service stations served to bring a month of sleepless nights to one Detroit automobile manufacturer recently. The producer built a new car in the spring, an experimental model, and sent a crew of his boys across the continent with it to prove it out. Before they reached Chicago on their western trip they began having trouble with the engine. Carburetion was poor and the car developed a wholesale collection of knocks and pounds. When they reached Denver they gave it up and wired the factory that the car would never do. They declared that everything about it was wrong and that they had decided to ship it on to their California destination.

The builder hurried to California to meet them, but found when he got there that the car was running sweetly and was meeting all of the requirements he had planned for it. He warned his boys to "keep sober" and to bring the car back to the factory at once. When they crossed the Rockies their motor reverted to its contrary tactics, and before they limped into Detroit they had burned out bearings and generally wrecked the car. It was then that the manufacturer went to work on the fuel question in earnest and realized that he had to build his car to meet the requirements of modern gasoline.

"If you can raise the compression of motors, you can do a lot of things," declared a manufacturing authority in commenting on the fuel problem. "You can increase economy first, and you can eliminate crank case dilution, perfect distribution of power, and generally improve the whole car. But this vast development can come only through the closest coöperation between the automobile maker and the fuel producer, a constant exchange of ideas and combined laboratory experiments.

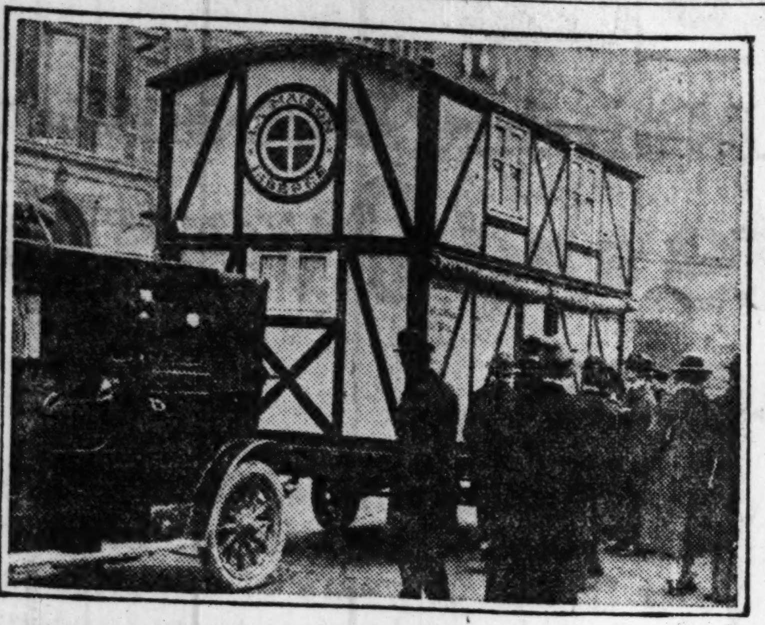
"Much of the motor trouble nowadays is due to nonvolatilized gasoline, the result of a lower quality gas and its lower gravity. A small portion of today's fuel runs into the cylinder, passes the rings, and seeps into the crank case to dilute the oil there. Some of it is condensed and water forms at the bottom of the crank case. In extremely cold weather this freezes and results in the twisting of shafts and many other serious defects in the car. That is the reason, too, why some drivers declare that they seldom have to add to their oil supply and that their particular motor 'makes oil.' It is impossible to burn the ordinary gasoline of today in high compression airplane engines. It hasn't the power to lift the ship from the ground. It is easy to see that in the automobile game, when we have to lower our compression to fit our fuel, we necessarily lower efficiency of the car."

The big fuel distributors in the middle west are working toward the solution of motor difficulties now, according to Chicago authorities. At the beginning of the recent cold weather period they furnished their service stations with gasoline in which the boiling point had been "pulled in" and the explosive quality raised to meet weather conditions. The precaution aided in the operation of Chicago cars, but it did not prevent the failure of many motors which refused to respond to service station gasoline after having spent the night in cold garages.

A general curtailment in the flow of oil throughout the southwest is remarked by motorists recently returned from Oklahoma and Texas. They say that the trend of development there at present is almost entirely in the hands of powerful companies, whose agents have succeeded in buying up big acreages of the proved fields and who are content to operate existing wells rather than sink new ones. A few of the big producing companies have practically closed down and are running wells but one or two days a week, they declare. As a result production is cut down, and, naturally, prices are held up. In Texas the hardy "wild catters" are still obtaining the financial aid needed in prospecting for new fields.

Operators explain that the slowing up of development is due to prohibitive costs in the sinking of new wells, and that the big companies holding the acreage in proved fields are waiting for a drop in material and labor prices before going ahead with their work.

The same slowing up is seen in foreign fields, but is explained by increasing governmental restrictions. In Persia development work is limited to one English company. A Dutch company has a monopoly in the Dutch East Indies. Japan restricts development of all petroleum properties to her own citizens, and the French provided for nationalization of all mineral resources by the act of 1919.



SWIFT LIFE IN PARIS—When Parisians caught their first glimpse of this two story motor house recently, they discovered a new and interesting way out of the housing famine. The trailer cottage is complete as to furnishings. By means of telescopic walls its usual height of 15 feet may be lowered to 9½ feet in order to clear bridges, wires, and the like.

The World's Worst Road

You've been over it. Unburden yourself by addressing "World's Worst Road," The Sunday Tribune, Chicago. Give the exact location of the stretch you struck. The Tribune will pay $1 for each letter published.

When Pluvius Detours.

EVEN the sun hates to travel over the mail route from Lewistown to Williamstown, Mo. This lurking automobile plague is fairly good at both ends to trap the unwary, but the middle section is a nightmare. No mountain goat would care to attempt it the second time, let alone a poor Henry. The really bad stretch is seven miles long, but one is forced to travel some thirty miles forward, up and down to get over it. The up part isn't so bad, but when you "light," great guns! A. L. H.

In Missouri.

The world's worst road? That's easy! It lies in the Ozark mountains, around Hogan, Mo. One encounters everything from a grade steeper than most engines can conquer to a nice drop off a stone a good foot and a half at least! Any one who has been over it once never invites himself to go over it again. There is one spot known as "The Devil's Half Acre," and, judging from the condition of the road, even his satanic majesty would give up in despair. One crosses the bed of shallow creeks, whose chief object in existing is to destroy tires. These and other things too disgusting to mention in printable form is what would make this without question the world's worst road. F. M. S.

Do I Hear a Second?

I wish to put in nomination forthe World's Worst Road that stretch of the Cannonball trail between Lamoille and Dover, Ill., with dishonorable mention for the entire stretch of road between Silvis, Ill. and Geneseo. W. R.

GOSSIP OF THE AUTO TRADE

EVERY transportation function known in modern business is served by the motor truck, according to a compilation of service made by C. E. Stebbins, general manager of the Maxwell Sales company from 2,000 replies to a questionnaire sent to Maxwell truck owners. In addition to the scores of purely commercial uses reported, the investigation showed trucks in use on interurban passenger service and in practically all governmental, civic, and public utility activities.

Following the close of receivership Dec. 13, the King Motor Car Co. reports a resumption of business expected to outdistance all of its past records. The company was purchased by Charles A. Finnigan, a Buffalo capitalist, who plans extensive additions to its properties.

More than $7,000,000 in bonuses will be shared by some 75,000 employés of the Ford Motor company Jan. 1, according to the latest company announcement. In addition the company has announced an additional 3 per cent for the six months ending Dec. 31 on investment certificates, which, added to the 8 per cent bonus of July 31, will bring the total to 14 per cent for 1920.

H. H. Franklin, president of his Syracuse company, reports that sales for the Franklin car have averaged forty per day during the first ten days of December. A total of 9,525 cars have been shipped out of the factory between Jan. 1 and Dec. 1.

Highway Building to Halt March of Jobless Legions

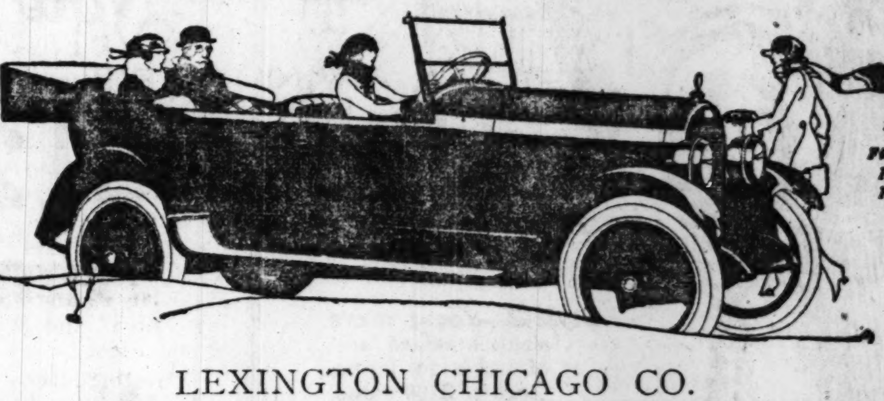
WASHINGTON, D. C., Dec. 18.—"If unemployment assumes widespread proportions the most logical answer to the situation would be the prompt utilizing of this excess labor in the building of highways possessing an interstate significance," is the belief of David Jameson, president of the American Automobile association, which organization has been prominently identified with roads betterment since its formation at Chicago in March, 1902.

"It will be remembered that when congress was approached some two years ago for $200,000,000 additional under the provisions of the federal aid road act it was set forth that this money, which called for an equal amount from the several states, would serve to carry on road building and absorb the surplus labor which it was anticipated would result from the abrupt conclusion of the big struggle. Besides this total of $400,000,000 from the national treasury and the several states the sum of $9,000,000 was added to the $10,000,000 previously appropriated for the construction of roads in federal forest reserves.

"But the period of nonemployment did not arrive, besides which there was difficulty in obtaining materials and their shipment and the abnormal prices cut down very substantially new road mileage. Present indications, however, are that the supply of labor in the near future may considerably exceed the demand, and hence a recourse to important public improvements would be a direct means of stabilizing labor conditions. Surely there can be no greater benefit conferred upon the entire country than by the building of highways which will materially reduce the cost of transportation and facilitate the exchange of farm and manufactured products between the country districts and the centers of population."

Alas! Poor Dobbin

The average working life of a horse is nine years and 15,000 miles of travel. Motor trucks, in many cases, are found to be good after fifteen years of service after having covered from 100,000 to 200,000 miles.



Lexington
MINUTE MAN SIX

The "Ansted"—America's Greatest Stock Car Engine

It is a new marvel of engineering science which eclipses former ideas of power, economy, and endurance.

Much larger engines have been out-pulled on hills and out-speeded on straightaways by the sensational Ansted Engine. It has made more miles per gallon than smaller engines!

Pike's Peak Champion

Comparisons cease when you know what this master motor actually does. It was used in the victorious Lexington specials in the 1920 Pike's Peak Hill Climb. Lexington won first and second places—less than six seconds difference in time—defeating 15 others!

No more consistent demonstration of power and endurance was ever witnessed than this clean sweep over larger, more costly cars!

The overwhelming superiority of the Ansted Engine has been gained, first of all, by the proven principle of maximum valve "lift".

That is how the great racing cars are known to get much of their power. The only objection heretofore has been too much noise.

Lexington engineers completely banished the noise and retained the acknowledged power and economy advantages of high valve "lift".

This amazing accomplishment, hitherto believed unattainable, was made possible largely by the invention of the exclusive Lexington "rocking chair" rocker arm.

Ten Great Factories

Lexington, with its own great Ansted Engine factory, one of ten affiliated plants, was able to devote years of research and intensive development necessary to perfect this great improvement.

This unique combination of interests permits notable manufacturing economies.

This is unmistakably emphasized in the tremendous extra value every keen buyer notes in the new Series "T" Lexington. It is a seven-passenger car of 128-inch wheelbase. (See cut.)

You have not seen the "most for your money" until you inspect this beautiful car.

WANTED—COFFEE SALESmen calling on hotels, restaurants, or merchants can make satisfactory arrangements with old established importer and roaster for 1921. RICHHEIMER COFFEE COMPANY, 62 E. South Water-st.

1921 SALESMEN WANTED.

A highly successful company manufacturing women's aprons and housedresses has changed its selling plan to suit 1921. We sell retailers direct and have some choice territory open for the "make-good-kind" of salesmen.

The officers of this company expect 1921 to be their banner year. Therefore, strong salesmen who follow our guidance will make more money than they have made before. We want salesmen who are real factors in creative sales work elsewhere, experienced in selling the same or allied merchandise.

The salesmen we want must be young enough to work hard and old enough to have judgment and experience. If you have not made $5,000 or more, you are probably not up to our standard, but in exceptions we can be sold on live wires who are worth more and have not had their opportunity.

To the right men there is an exceptional opportunity with us for permanency and a big future.

In confidence give us complete details and reference to previous lines; amount earned, age, etc.

Address B A 497, Tribune.

Arkansas.

FOR SALE—CANNOT LIVE IN ARKANSAS, will sell, bargain price, or exchange for apt. house, North, 480 acre rice farm there. HASSLER, 836 E. 55th-st., Chicago.

California.

FOR SALE—THE STATE OF CALIFORNIA makes you this bargain offer: The State Land Settlement Board of California will sell bona fide homeseekers an irrigated farm of 20 or 40 acres in San Joaquin Valley, with 36½ years' time for deferred payments.

These farms are in Farm Land Unit No. 3, consisting of 1,540 acres in Merced County, the heart of the famous San Joaquin Valley, and will be offered to bona fide homeseekers.

These carefully selected lands were acquired by the State of California for settlement purposes. A complete irrigation system is being installed. Price per acre varies according to location. Five per cent of purchase price payable when deal is made; remainder in semi-annual installments, extending over a period of 36½ years, with interest at 5 per cent per annum.

When this unit is exhausted, other similar tracts will be opened up as rapidly as land can be prepared for the new settler.

All deciduous fruits are profitably grown, and alfalfa is a paying crop. Ideal conditions for stock and poultry. You have benefits of established communities. Schools are ready, and fine roads. The various fruit associations have a remarkable marketing system. You raise the fruit; no bother about markets.

You can farm all year in California. The State Board's booklet about these lands and plans for financing improvements, Santa Fe illustrated folders descriptive of San Joaquin Valley and the trip there, mailed on request.

Let me help you plan your trip.

Canada.

FOR SALE—
CANADIAN PACIFIC RAILWAY LANDS.
Your last opportunity. In Central Alberta and Saskatchewan are rich park lands—open prairie ready for the plow, interspersed with trees, which afford excellent shelter for stock. Here grain growing, dairying, and live stock raising are being carried on successfully. The country is ideal for mixed farming. The Canadian Pacific Railway is offering a large area of these fertile lands in Lloydminster and Battleford districts. This fertile land will become the home of thousands of prosperous farmers. On similar land Seager Wheeler grows world's prize wheat. Near Lloydminster the world's prize oats have been grown, and butter of the highest quality is made. A man can soon become independent on a farm in this district. These lands can be bought now at an average of about $18 per acre. You pay down 10%, no further payment of principal until end of fourth year, then sixteen annual payments. Interest is 6%.— M. E. THORNTON, Supt. of Colonization, Canadian Pacific Railway, 104 Ninth-av., E., Calgary, Alberta.

RESTGOOD BEDDING UPHOLSTERY SHOP MAINTAINS OPEN DOOR.

There are no "No Admittance" or Employees Only" signs over our workroom doors.

You have the right to KNOW what is inside the bedding and upholstery you live with, and in buying Restgood mattresses and upholstery you have the opportunity to know.

We use nothing but the best and cleanest material in our production. We employ only the most skillful workmen and we welcome the closest inspection.

You can come to this factory, select the materials for a mattress or a davenport, or an upholstered chair, and have the piece made to your order at the factory price. If you wish, you can take a seat or stand by and watch every step of manufacture, thus insuring exactly what you pay for.

By buying direct from this factory you get superior materials put together by the best workmen in the trade and you will save at least one-third the cost of what similar quality will cost you at retail.

We also carry a full line of brass and steel beds, springs, pillows, comforters, and blankets.

1921 PRICES HAVE ARRIVED

HUDSON SEAL COATS $275.00

Three-quarter length coats trimmed with marten, squirrel or beaver, with large shawl collar and bell cuffs. All brand new sample coats guaranteed to be made of finest quality full skins and first class workmanship. Sizes, 36, 38, 40, 42.

The price is lowest in years and we cannot guarantee that we can give Chicago many coats at this price. The price will have to advance soon. For so surely as there was a top to high prices there is a bottom to low prices. And we are selling fur coats now cheaper than the cost of raw material on the market today. Ask any furrier what he would charge to make a coat like these we are selling. He would lose a lot of money selling them at $275.00.

DO YOU WANT A FUR COAT

We are manufacturing furriers—we make every coat we sell. We carry a wonderful assortment of the newest fur coats in all skins and in all effects.

We sell direct to the public, eliminating all jobbers' and retailers' profits from the selling price—and we allow honest women to enjoy the privilege of extending their payments over four long months.

Before you buy your fur coat make it a point to see our display, compare our prices, and you can judge the truthfulness of these statements for yourself.

HORSES, HARNESS, CARRIAGES.

I will sell at Public Auction Monday afternoon, Dec. 27th, commencing at 1 o'clock, at the Dexter Park Horse Auction Pavilion, between 80 and 100 head of city broken, acclimated horses right out of work.

Sixty head of these horses are consigned to me by The Fair, because the Christmas rush is over and are being sold on account of their having no further use for them for a while. Most of these horses were purchased this summer and fall, and they have had them just long enough to get them in good shape for immediate service.

The others consist of horses sent to me to be sold by various concerns for the same reason. There should be some rare bargains among this lot. Do not miss this sale if you need any horses.
